Why are so many police officers being murdered while wrapped in the protection of body armor? It's a question that's been on the minds of Colorado this year after the gunshot deaths of three deputies, in three different departments, over a five-week period. To find answers, the FOX31 Investigative Team started by reading the FBI's "Law Enforcement Officers Killed & Assaulted" or LEOKA files connected with every peace officer death in America over ten years - more than 400 cases. Patterns emerged with two key findings.

Unlike their counterparts in Central America, some MS-13 cliques in the United States now allow female members, said Michael Prado, assistant special agent in charge of the Washington office of Homeland Security Investigations, a branch of Immigration and Customs Enforcement. In response, ICE has begun instructing its agents to scrutinize girls and young women as closely as males for MS-13 involvement, Prado said.

It may be a moot point by now, but on Monday, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rebuffed a Maricopa County argument that it was not liable for the racial-profiling traffic-stop policies of former Sheriff Joe Arpaio, which have already cost the county millions.

A police force has defended its use of facial recognition technology after it was revealed that more than 2,000 people in Cardiff during the 2017 Champions League final were wrongly identified as potential criminals. The cameras scan faces in a crowd and compare them against a database of custody images. As 170,000 people arrived in the Welsh capital for the football match between Real Madrid and Juventus, 2,470 potential matches were identified. However, according to data on the force's website, 92% of those were found to be "false positives."

D.C.'s police mandate new training to address racial bias, including a tour of the National Museum of African-American History and Culture. The tour compels officers to explore black history in America in order to help reduce the tension between police and the community.

The city of Charleston is making progress on two strategies to build more trust between the Charleston Police Department and the people it serves, particularly minorities. The city has launched its search for an independent firm to review the department's policing practices and identify any racial biases that might be at work when officers are in the field. In addition, City Council on Tuesday is expected to approve the creation of a new Citizen Police Advisory Council, a group that would serve as a liaison between the community and the police department.

OFFICER SAFETY

FOX 31 Denver: 137 officers have been killed over 10 years while wearing body armor

Why are so many police officers being murdered while wrapped in the protection of body armor? It's a question that's been on the minds of Colorado this year after the gunshot deaths of three deputies, in three different departments, over a five-week period. To find answers, the FOX31 Investigative Team started by reading the FBI's "Law Enforcement Officers Killed & Assaulted" or LEOKA files connected with every peace officer death in America over ten years - more than 400 cases. Patterns emerged with two key findings.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

USA Today: Mass shootings prompt surge of calls to domestic violence hotline about armed abusers

Calls to the National Domestic Violence Hotline involving firearms were up more than 75% in 2017, according to an analysis out Monday by the hotline. The surge, which followed a year that had a 50% increase in gun-related domestic violence reports, is attributed to increased publicity surrounding mass shootings. Women are calling to say, "My husband may be capable of a mass shooting," Hotline CEO Katie Ray-Jones says.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Los Angeles Times: Bucking precedent, Garcetti won't name three finalists for LAPD chief

The names of three finalists for Los Angeles police chief have been forwarded to Mayor Eric Garcetti, who is bucking recent precedent by declining to name them. The Police Commission, which oversees the Los Angeles Police Department, announced Monday that it had sent the names to Garcetti. The five-member civilian commission moved quickly after interviewing five candidates - all department veterans - last week. There were 31 applicants for the job. Deciding who will lead the country's second-largest police department is now up to the mayor.

Washington Post: 'Heinous and violent': MS-13's appeal to girls grows as gang becomes 'Americanized'

Unlike their counterparts in Central America, some MS-13 cliques in the United States now allow female members, said Michael Prado, assistant special agent in charge of the Washington office of Homeland Security Investigations, a branch of Immigration and Customs Enforcement. In response, ICE has begun instructing its agents to scrutinize girls and young women as closely as males for MS-13 involvement, Prado said.

---

IMMIGRATION

Washington Post: Sessions vows to prosecute all illegal border crossers and separate children from their parents

Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced Monday that the Justice Department will begin prosecuting every person who illegally crosses into the United States along the Southwest border, a hard-line policy shift expected to focus in particular on migrants traveling with children.

USA Today: Op-ed: Gun purchase waiting periods are a powerful way to prevent suicides and save lives

COURT CASES

Arizona Republic: 9th Circuit Court says Maricopa County is liable for Arpaio's actions

It may be a moot point by now, but on Monday, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rebuffed a Maricopa County argument that it was not liable for the racial-profiling traffic-stop policies of former Sheriff Joe Arpaio, which have already cost the county millions.

TECHNOLOGY

The Guardian: Welsh police wrongly identify thousands as potential criminals

A police force has defended its use of facial recognition technology after it was revealed that more than 2,000 people in Cardiff during the 2017 Champions League final were wrongly identified as potential criminals. The cameras scan faces in a crowd and compare them against a database of custody images. As 170,000 people arrived in the Welsh capital for the football match between Real Madrid and Juventus, 2,470 potential matches were identified. However, according to data on the force's website, 92% of those were found to be "false positives."

USA Today: N.Y. AG Eric Schneiderman, #MeToo champion accused of violence, resigns

New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman abruptly announced his resignation Monday after four women accused him of physical violence and illicit drug and alcohol use.

RACIAL ISSUES

CBS News: D.C. police get required history lesson to address racial bias

D.C.'s police mandate new training to address racial bias, including a tour of the National Museum of African-American History and Culture. The tour compels officers to explore black history in America in order to help reduce the tension between police and the community.

OVERSIGHT

Charleston Post and Courier: Charleston Police to face more scrutiny with new citizens committee, independent review

The city of Charleston is making progress on two strategies to build more trust between the Charleston Police Department and the people it serves, particularly minorities. The city has launched its search for an independent firm to review the department's policing practices and identify any racial biases that might be at work when officers are in the field. In addition, City Council on Tuesday is expected to approve the creation of a new Citizen Police Advisory Council, a group that would serve as a liaison between the community and the police department.

Why are so many police officers being murdered while wrapped in the protection of body armor? It's a question that's been on the minds of Colorado this year after the gunshot deaths of three deputies, in three different departments, over a five-week period. To find answers, the FOX31 Investigative Team started by reading the FBI's "Law Enforcement Officers Killed & Assaulted" or LEOKA files connected with every peace officer death in America over ten years - more than 400 cases. Patterns emerged with two key findings.

Calls to the National Domestic Violence Hotline involving firearms were up more than 75% in 2017, according to an analysis out Monday by the hotline. The surge, which followed a year that had a 50% increase in gun-related domestic violence reports, is attributed to increased publicity surrounding mass shootings. Women are calling to say, "My husband may be capable of a mass shooting," Hotline CEO Katie Ray-Jones says.

The names of three finalists for Los Angeles police chief have been forwarded to Mayor Eric Garcetti, who is bucking recent precedent by declining to name them. The Police Commission, which oversees the Los Angeles Police Department, announced Monday that it had sent the names to Garcetti. The five-member civilian commission moved quickly after interviewing five candidates - all department veterans - last week. There were 31 applicants for the job. Deciding who will lead the country's second-largest police department is now up to the mayor.

Unlike their counterparts in Central America, some MS-13 cliques in the United States now allow female members, said Michael Prado, assistant special agent in charge of the Washington office of Homeland Security Investigations, a branch of Immigration and Customs Enforcement. In response, ICE has begun instructing its agents to scrutinize girls and young women as closely as males for MS-13 involvement, Prado said.

A police force has defended its use of facial recognition technology after it was revealed that more than 2,000 people in Cardiff during the 2017 Champions League final were wrongly identified as potential criminals. The cameras scan faces in a crowd and compare them against a database of custody images. As 170,000 people arrived in the Welsh capital for the football match between Real Madrid and Juventus, 2,470 potential matches were identified. However, according to data on the force's website, 92% of those were found to be "false positives."

The LECC serves as a central online resource to meet the needs of police chiefs, investigators, line officers, digital forensic examiners, technical support staff, and other practitioners. Resources are designed to increase awareness of cyber-related issues and educate practitioners on methods to combat high-tech crimes. New features include a cyber/tech training search tool; new investigative resources (e.g., model policies, investigative search tools); and a "What's New" section on trending cybercrime topics. OFFICER SAFETY

Why are so many police officers being murdered while wrapped in the protection of body armor? It's a question that's been on the minds of Colorado this year after the gunshot deaths of three deputies, in three different departments, over a five-week period. To find answers, the FOX31 Investigative Team started by reading the FBI's "Law Enforcement Officers Killed & Assaulted" or LEOKA files connected with every peace officer death in America over ten years - more than 400 cases. Patterns emerged with two key findings.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

USA Today: Mass shootings prompt surge of calls to domestic violence hotline about armed abusers

Calls to the National Domestic Violence Hotline involving firearms were up more than 75% in 2017, according to an analysis out Monday by the hotline. The surge, which followed a year that had a 50% increase in gun-related domestic violence reports, is attributed to increased publicity surrounding mass shootings. Women are calling to say, "My husband may be capable of a mass shooting," Hotline CEO Katie Ray-Jones says.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Los Angeles Times: Bucking precedent, Garcetti won't name three finalists for LAPD chief

The names of three finalists for Los Angeles police chief have been forwarded to Mayor Eric Garcetti, who is bucking recent precedent by declining to name them. The Police Commission, which oversees the Los Angeles Police Department, announced Monday that it had sent the names to Garcetti. The five-member civilian commission moved quickly after interviewing five candidates - all department veterans - last week. There were 31 applicants for the job. Deciding who will lead the country's second-largest police department is now up to the mayor.

GANGS

Washington Post: 'Heinous and violent': MS-13's appeal to girls grows as gang becomes 'Americanized'

Unlike their counterparts in Central America, some MS-13 cliques in the United States now allow female members, said Michael Prado, assistant special agent in charge of the Washington office of Homeland Security Investigations, a branch of Immigration and Customs Enforcement. In response, ICE has begun instructing its agents to scrutinize girls and young women as closely as males for MS-13 involvement, Prado said.

---

IMMIGRATION

Washington Post: Sessions vows to prosecute all illegal border crossers and separate children from their parents

Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced Monday that the Justice Department will begin prosecuting every person who illegally crosses into the United States along the Southwest border, a hard-line policy shift expected to focus in particular on migrants traveling with children.

GUN REGULATIONS

USA Today: Op-ed: Gun purchase waiting periods are a powerful way to prevent suicides and save lives

COURT CASES

Arizona Republic: 9th Circuit Court says Maricopa County is liable for Arpaio's actions

It may be a moot point by now, but on Monday, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rebuffed a Maricopa County argument that it was not liable for the racial-profiling traffic-stop policies of former Sheriff Joe Arpaio, which have already cost the county millions.

TECHNOLOGY

The Guardian: Welsh police wrongly identify thousands as potential criminals

A police force has defended its use of facial recognition technology after it was revealed that more than 2,000 people in Cardiff during the 2017 Champions League final were wrongly identified as potential criminals. The cameras scan faces in a crowd and compare them against a database of custody images. As 170,000 people arrived in the Welsh capital for the football match between Real Madrid and Juventus, 2,470 potential matches were identified. However, according to data on the force's website, 92% of those were found to be "false positives."

USA Today: N.Y. AG Eric Schneiderman, #MeToo champion accused of violence, resigns

New York Attorney General Eric Schneiderman abruptly announced his resignation Monday after four women accused him of physical violence and illicit drug and alcohol use.

RACIAL ISSUES

CBS News: D.C. police get required history lesson to address racial bias

D.C.'s police mandate new training to address racial bias, including a tour of the National Museum of African-American History and Culture. The tour compels officers to explore black history in America in order to help reduce the tension between police and the community.

Charleston Post and Courier: Charleston Police to face more scrutiny with new citizens committee, independent review

The city of Charleston is making progress on two strategies to build more trust between the Charleston Police Department and the people it serves, particularly minorities. The city has launched its search for an independent firm to review the department's policing practices and identify any racial biases that might be at work when officers are in the field. In addition, City Council on Tuesday is expected to approve the creation of a new Citizen Police Advisory Council, a group that would serve as a liaison between the community and the police department.

CYBERCRIME

Law Enforcement Cyber Center relaunch

PERF, in partnership with the National White Collar Crime Center, the Bureau of Justice Assistance, and IACP, is pleased to announce the debut of the newly redesigned Law Enforcement Cyber Center (LECC) at https://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=JldG-2FX1PN4LqtW3GIhX2ubHatxDxwvmJLPPndx37OWTOgxfghqIdMN1PfF78CdiM\_AYRt4sw-2F5G9B9aou1JiYqCIMoYKVi4VADB2I2vNs68DKjkji-2FICmjcRtmZzprbkrhEdstR124xoXj-2BZnyc861wlYDyERj8zXUBt3amKyr3bBX1MctrPPYi-2FuhXNSEfec-2Bmet1TbvjAiMBG1iw2EUj7Tg-2BmrmW1AnqSgTEywAt7J2l4mM47xEC6DXfn5azmhJaVPptMhtKYd5mLN-2B7oqfjJMMiMfcw8znlkcuoWUHo2OGO-2Fhb2Tlimzp57CqMD21z0JlSbJfFwRzONfP-2FyGmGRDwnIjb9JCnZ2z2AEYKXk-2FM13U47Cjm-2BeRC0DnxHWsK0WqOpi5B00ZOsDM4VOf55Pg-3D-3D <http://www.iacpcybercenter.org/>. The LECC serves as a central online resource to meet the needs of police chiefs, investigators, line officers, digital forensic examiners, technical support staff, and other practitioners. Resources are designed to increase awareness of cyber-related issues and educate practitioners on methods to combat high-tech crimes. New features include a cyber/tech training search tool; new investigative resources (e.g., model policies, investigative search tools); and a "What's New" section on trending cybercrime topics. <<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018051001iacp&r=8737284-47e5&l=006-365&t=c>> (5/9) reports two Michigan lawmakers "are pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

The Global Drug Survey 2018 "showed that more than a quarter of British drug users who responded, bought substances on websites where they seek to remain anonymous by disguising their location and paying with cryptocurrency." Higher rates of dark web drug buying "were only found in Finland (46 per cent) and Norway (30 per cent) and researchers said a variety of factors are driving the trend." Ecstasy, cannabis, LSD and "novel (unapproved) drugs are the most commonly purchased on the dark web, according to the survey, which found the popularity of former 'legal highs' has declined."

HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

lawmakers "are pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

Share to Twitter (5/9) reports US Homeland Security Investigation's (HSI) cyber division investigates cases of child exploitation, and the agency is "using automation tools and facial recognition technology on photo evidence to make more arrests." HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

<<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018051001iacp&r=7963908-2ee3&l=006-365&t=c>> (5/9) reports two Michigan lawmakers "are pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

"said Tuesday he will sign newly passed legislation that bans devices enabling guns to fire like automatic weapons." Connecticut's bill "makes it a class D felony, punishable by up to five years in prison, a fine of up to $5,000, or both, for selling, offering to sell, purchasing, possessing, using and manufacturing a so-called 'rate of fire enhancement.'"

The Global Drug Survey 2018 "showed that more than a quarter of British drug users who responded, bought substances on websites where they seek to remain anonymous by disguising their location and paying with cryptocurrency." Higher rates of dark web drug buying "were only found in Finland (46 per cent) and Norway (30 per cent) and researchers said a variety of factors are driving the trend." Ecstasy, cannabis, LSD and "novel (unapproved) drugs are the most commonly purchased on the dark web, according to the survey, which found the popularity of former 'legal highs' has declined."

HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

lawmakers "are pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

Share to Twitter (5/9) reports US Homeland Security Investigation's (HSI) cyber division investigates cases of child exploitation, and the agency is "using automation tools and facial recognition technology on photo evidence to make more arrests." HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

TSA, Police Test Explosives Detection Technology At Union Station.

TSA and Amtrak police tested new portable screening equipment as passengers and shoppers walked by. DHS Risk Analysis Division branch chief of operations Jim Bamberger is quoted as saying, "The technology we're testing today would be able to tell if anything is hidden under your clothing, from a remote distance." DHS is "making the devices available for testing to transit agencies, Bamberger said."

pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

The Global Drug Survey 2018 "showed that more than a quarter of British drug users who responded, bought substances on websites where they seek to remain anonymous by disguising their location and paying with cryptocurrency." Higher rates of dark web drug buying "were only found in Finland (46 per cent) and Norway (30 per cent) and researchers said a variety of factors are driving the trend." Ecstasy, cannabis, LSD and "novel (unapproved) drugs are the most commonly purchased on the dark web, according to the survey, which found the popularity of former 'legal highs' has declined."

HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

TSA and Amtrak police tested new portable screening equipment as passengers and shoppers walked by. DHS Risk Analysis Division branch chief of operations Jim Bamberger is quoted as saying, "The technology we're testing today would be able to tell if anything is hidden under your clothing, from a remote distance." DHS is "making the devices available for testing to transit agencies, Bamberger said."

lawmakers "are pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

According to the Post, "arrest warrants were served throughout the Denver area and in the other states Wednesday after a federal grand jury issued two indictments April 19 and May 2, according to a joint statement from the U.S. attorney, Drug Enforcement Administration and Colorado attorney general. 'Meth ravages and ruins the precious lives of too many Coloradans,' U.S. Attorney Bob Troyer said in the statement. 'Taking out 37 dealers (and) taking this kind of weight out of our suffering communities is a major public safety victory.'"

Global Drug Survey 2018 Shows Dark Web Drug Trade Growing.

The Global Drug Survey 2018 "showed that more than a quarter of British drug users who responded, bought substances on websites where they seek to remain anonymous by disguising their location and paying with cryptocurrency." Higher rates of dark web drug buying "were only found in Finland (46 per cent) and Norway (30 per cent) and researchers said a variety of factors are driving the trend." Ecstasy, cannabis, LSD and "novel (unapproved) drugs are the most commonly purchased on the dark web, according to the survey, which found the popularity of former 'legal highs' has declined."

Judge Rules DEA Must Turn Over National Opioid Sales Data.

Share to Twitter (5/9) reports US Homeland Security Investigation's (HSI) cyber division investigates cases of child exploitation, and the agency is "using automation tools and facial recognition technology on photo evidence to make more arrests." HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

TSA and Amtrak police tested new portable screening equipment as passengers and shoppers walked by. DHS Risk Analysis Division branch chief of operations Jim Bamberger is quoted as saying, "The technology we're testing today would be able to tell if anything is hidden under your clothing, from a remote distance." DHS is "making the devices available for testing to transit agencies, Bamberger said."

lawmakers "are pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

The Global Drug Survey 2018 "showed that more than a quarter of British drug users who responded, bought substances on websites where they seek to remain anonymous by disguising their location and paying with cryptocurrency." Higher rates of dark web drug buying "were only found in Finland (46 per cent) and Norway (30 per cent) and researchers said a variety of factors are driving the trend." Ecstasy, cannabis, LSD and "novel (unapproved) drugs are the most commonly purchased on the dark web, according to the survey, which found the popularity of former 'legal highs' has declined."

Share to Twitter (5/9) reports US Homeland Security Investigation's (HSI) cyber division investigates cases of child exploitation, and the agency is "using automation tools and facial recognition technology on photo evidence to make more arrests." HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

TSA and Amtrak police tested new portable screening equipment as passengers and shoppers walked by. DHS Risk Analysis Division branch chief of operations Jim Bamberger is quoted as saying, "The technology we're testing today would be able to tell if anything is hidden under your clothing, from a remote distance." DHS is "making the devices available for testing to transit agencies, Bamberger said."

pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

According to the Post, "arrest warrants were served throughout the Denver area and in the other states Wednesday after a federal grand jury issued two indictments April 19 and May 2, according to a joint statement from the U.S. attorney, Drug Enforcement Administration and Colorado attorney general. 'Meth ravages and ruins the precious lives of too many Coloradans,' U.S. Attorney Bob Troyer said in the statement. 'Taking out 37 dealers (and) taking this kind of weight out of our suffering communities is a major public safety victory.'"

The Global Drug Survey 2018 "showed that more than a quarter of British drug users who responded, bought substances on websites where they seek to remain anonymous by disguising their location and paying with cryptocurrency." Higher rates of dark web drug buying "were only found in Finland (46 per cent) and Norway (30 per cent) and researchers said a variety of factors are driving the trend." Ecstasy, cannabis, LSD and "novel (unapproved) drugs are the most commonly purchased on the dark web, according to the survey, which found the popularity of former 'legal highs' has declined."

HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

lawmakers "are pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

Share to Twitter (5/9) reports US Homeland Security Investigation's (HSI) cyber division investigates cases of child exploitation, and the agency is "using automation tools and facial recognition technology on photo evidence to make more arrests." HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

TSA and Amtrak police tested new portable screening equipment as passengers and shoppers walked by. DHS Risk Analysis Division branch chief of operations Jim Bamberger is quoted as saying, "The technology we're testing today would be able to tell if anything is hidden under your clothing, from a remote distance." DHS is "making the devices available for testing to transit agencies, Bamberger said."

pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

(5/9) reports that "authorities charged 37 people and seized 141 pounds of methamphetamine in a bust that spanned Colorado, Arizona and California." According to the Post, "arrest warrants were served throughout the Denver area and in the other states Wednesday after a federal grand jury issued two indictments April 19 and May 2, according to a joint statement from the U.S. attorney, Drug Enforcement Administration and Colorado attorney general. 'Meth ravages and ruins the precious lives of too many Coloradans,' U.S. Attorney Bob Troyer said in the statement. 'Taking out 37 dealers (and) taking this kind of weight out of our suffering communities is a major public safety victory.'"

(5/8, Dearden) reports, "The UK is among the biggest global purchasers of drugs on the dark web as the illicit online trade grows, new research has found." The Global Drug Survey 2018 "showed that more than a quarter of British drug users who responded, bought substances on websites where they seek to remain anonymous by disguising their location and paying with cryptocurrency." Higher rates of dark web drug buying "were only found in Finland (46 per cent) and Norway (30 per cent) and researchers said a variety of factors are driving the trend." Ecstasy, cannabis, LSD and "novel (unapproved) drugs are the most commonly purchased on the dark web, according to the survey, which found the popularity of former 'legal highs' has declined."

HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

lawmakers "are pushing a bipartisan bill in Congress that would encourage states to adopt laws similar to an Indiana statute that allows law enforcement to temporarily confiscate firearms from people at risk of harming themselves or others." The Jake Laird Act, which is "named after an Indianapolis police officer killed in August 2004 by a man with a history of mental illness," was introduced in the US House on Wednesday. The bill "would provide federal grants for states that have a law in force similar to the Indiana statute, which was adopted almost unanimously by that state's General Assembly in 2005." In addition to Indiana, "seven other states have adopted 'red flag laws' that may be used to temporarily confiscate firearms from people deemed by a judge or law enforcement to be a threat to themselves or others."

Share to Twitter (5/9) reports US Homeland Security Investigation's (HSI) cyber division investigates cases of child exploitation, and the agency is "using automation tools and facial recognition technology on photo evidence to make more arrests." HSI Cyber Division deputy assistant director David Denton explained, "Criminals like technology - they like using it to stay ahead of us. And so we have to do everything we can to make sure that we are keeping up with the latest technology that they have." In using automation tools to evaluate a "huge backlog of child exploitation images, HSI has been able to link pictures taken with the same camera, or identify the same victims in multiple photos." Denton said, "As this technology gets better, our investigators spend less and less time having to look at these horrible pictures and images, and more time actually investigating crimes."

The Salt Lake City Police Department has hosted the Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) Academy for the past 17 years, according to Detective Joseph Taylor, with the department's CIT unit. The training is for all new recruits and for existing police officers who want to learn how to identify signs of a mental health crisis.

Facial recognition accuracy rates have jumped dramatically in the last couple of years, making it feasible to monitor live video. China recently announced real-time facial recognition covering "16 provinces, cities and autonomous regions," and similar systems are being tried in Russia, India and even the United Kingdom. For autocratic societies such as China, the appeal is obvious. But police in western democracies are also showing interest.

A total of 93 officers were killed in the line of duty last year, according to a portion of the FBI's Law Enforcement Officers Killed and Assaulted, 2017 (LEOKA) report released today. Of these deaths, 46 were felonious and 47 were accidental. Both numbers have decreased from 2016, during which 66 officers were feloniously killed and 52 were accidentally killed, for a total of 118 line-of-duty deaths.

The names of 360 U.S. law enforcement officers who have died in the line of duty will be formally dedicated on the walls of the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial during the 30th Annual Candlelight Vigil held on the National Mall between 4th and 7th streets in Washington, DC, at 8:00 pm on May 13, 2018. Each May 13, an estimated 20,000 people assemble for the Candlelight Vigil, a signature event of National Police Week. For the tenth year, the ceremony will be streamed live over the Internet so that everyone can witness this annual tribute to America's law enforcement officers. Individuals interested in the free webcast can register online at www.UnitedByLight.org

<[The state of Maryland has stumbled across a novel way to satisfy gun-control opponents: create a licensing process that cannot be put into practice. Maryland lawmakers had sought to ban bump stocks, the controversial rifle accessory used in last year's Las Vegas massacre. But in writing the law, a clause allowing some gun owners to keep them may have backfired. The new law allows bump stocks - and other "rapid-fire trigger activators"- to be owned by people who get special dispensation from the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives \(ATF\). The federal agency, however, has no process or authority to offer that dispensation and, indeed, was never even told of the Maryland law, the ATF told ABC News.](https://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2BJso9e57TEQA-2FDTodizlMRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2B5F9xSKgrmu7z-2FGA076JL3zEXyEiF-2BvYlKeP6qO2FQbvg4IJcEoacqV2UIqgtCeNZ_uuIJaiSyymF3tUvgSwKhgln08jJHOhl9kXJLpwQrjDBvX5nq-2FDow5ojX4-2BB9q8BtZ9AJeamB6t7JnrX0qpsKl0bOdVKK4xSWrVLTd-2F9rEtRdnWrgxPF7mxjY6SD-2F3GAwGtt5GtwjDk3mcCiOyyW08XOpAn2uc-2Fcv94m5oDiehIWKtV6QuPfNi-2F7e741HBY1YrZ9ULwsNHSnmZczYkGYSuJRuzldG1-2FR-2FQWdNZJrg8aIXy9P0AoY5UmXxkLokSSRB6JRHZgGpljJico7BmGRz9GzDzFiGo-2B8OQ44-2FbXriqMxsSHua0927-2Fei2eXEqitR4McPvWzkaL5FKskVDpxzWKw-3D-3D><div data-bbox=)

TRAINING

Salt Lake Tribune: 'Trying to relate': An exercise in empathy trains Utah police officers how to respond to mental-health crises

The Salt Lake City Police Department has hosted the Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) Academy for the past 17 years, according to Detective Joseph Taylor, with the department's CIT unit. The training is for all new recruits and for existing police officers who want to learn how to identify signs of a mental health crisis.

TECHNOLOGY

NPR: Real-time facial recognition is available, but will U.S. police buy it?

Facial recognition accuracy rates have jumped dramatically in the last couple of years, making it feasible to monitor live video. China recently announced real-time facial recognition covering "16 provinces, cities and autonomous regions," and similar systems are being tried in Russia, India and even the United Kingdom. For autocratic societies such as China, the appeal is obvious. But police in western democracies are also showing interest.

OFFICER DEATHS

FBI: Law Enforcement Officers Killed and Assaulted, 2017

A total of 93 officers were killed in the line of duty last year, according to a portion of the FBI's Law Enforcement Officers Killed and Assaulted, 2017 (LEOKA) report released today. Of these deaths, 46 were felonious and 47 were accidental. Both numbers have decreased from 2016, during which 66 officers were feloniously killed and 52 were accidentally killed, for a total of 118 line-of-duty deaths.

OFFICER DEATHS

National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund: Fallen Law Enforcement Officers to be Honored During 30th Annual Candlelight Vigil on May 13 in Washington, DC

The names of 360 U.S. law enforcement officers who have died in the line of duty will be formally dedicated on the walls of the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial during the 30th Annual Candlelight Vigil held on the National Mall between 4th and 7th streets in Washington, DC, at 8:00 pm on May 13, 2018. Each May 13, an estimated 20,000 people assemble for the Candlelight Vigil, a signature event of National Police Week. For the tenth year, the ceremony will be streamed live over the Internet so that everyone can witness this annual tribute to America's law enforcement officers. GUN REGULATIONS

The state of Maryland has stumbled across a novel way to satisfy gun-control opponents: create a licensing process that cannot be put into practice. Maryland lawmakers had sought to ban bump stocks, the controversial rifle accessory used in last year's Las Vegas massacre. But in writing the law, a clause allowing some gun owners to keep them may have backfired. The new law allows bump stocks - and other "rapid-fire trigger activators"- to be owned by people who get special dispensation from the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF). The federal agency, however, has no process or authority to offer that dispensation and, indeed, was never even told of the Maryland law, the ATF told ABC News.

Salt Lake Tribune: 'Trying to relate': An exercise in empathy trains Utah police officers how to respond to mental-health crises

The Salt Lake City Police Department has hosted the Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) Academy for the past 17 years, according to Detective Joseph Taylor, with the department's CIT unit. The training is for all new recruits and for existing police officers who want to learn how to identify signs of a mental health crisis.

NPR: Real-time facial recognition is available, but will U.S. police buy it?

Facial recognition accuracy rates have jumped dramatically in the last couple of years, making it feasible to monitor live video. China recently announced real-time facial recognition covering "16 provinces, cities and autonomous regions," and similar systems are being tried in Russia, India and even the United Kingdom. For autocratic societies such as China, the appeal is obvious. But police in western democracies are also showing interest.

FBI: Law Enforcement Officers Killed and Assaulted, 2017

A total of 93 officers were killed in the line of duty last year, according to a portion of the FBI's Law Enforcement Officers Killed and Assaulted, 2017 (LEOKA) report released today. Of these deaths, 46 were felonious and 47 were accidental. Both numbers have decreased from 2016, during which 66 officers were feloniously killed and 52 were accidentally killed, for a total of 118 line-of-duty deaths.

The Salt Lake City Police Department has hosted the Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) Academy for the past 17 years, according to Detective Joseph Taylor, with the department's CIT unit. The training is for all new recruits and for existing police officers who want to learn how to identify signs of a mental health crisis.

Facial recognition accuracy rates have jumped dramatically in the last couple of years, making it feasible to monitor live video. China recently announced real-time facial recognition covering "16 provinces, cities and autonomous regions," and similar systems are being tried in Russia, India and even the United Kingdom. For autocratic societies such as China, the appeal is obvious. But police in western democracies are also showing interest.

A total of 93 officers were killed in the line of duty last year, according to a portion of the FBI's Law Enforcement Officers Killed and Assaulted, 2017 (LEOKA) report released today. Of these deaths, 46 were felonious and 47 were accidental. Both numbers have decreased from 2016, during which 66 officers were feloniously killed and 52 were accidentally killed, for a total of 118 line-of-duty deaths.

The names of 360 U.S. law enforcement officers who have died in the line of duty will be formally dedicated on the walls of the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial during the 30th Annual Candlelight Vigil held on the National Mall between 4th and 7th streets in Washington, DC, at 8:00 pm on May 13, 2018. Each May 13, an estimated 20,000 people assemble for the Candlelight Vigil, a signature event of National Police Week. For the tenth year, the ceremony will be streamed live over the Internet so that everyone can witness this annual tribute to America's law enforcement officers. Individuals interested in the free webcast can register online at www.UnitedByLight.org

The state of Maryland has stumbled across a novel way to satisfy gun-control opponents: create a licensing process that cannot be put into practice. Maryland lawmakers had sought to ban bump stocks, the controversial rifle accessory used in last year's Las Vegas massacre. But in writing the law, a clause allowing some gun owners to keep them may have backfired. The new law allows bump stocks - and other "rapid-fire trigger activators"- to be owned by people who get special dispensation from the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF). The federal agency, however, has no process or authority to offer that dispensation and, indeed, was never even told of the Maryland law, the ATF told ABC News.

In Florida, a state with some of the nation's worst mass shootings in recent years, nearly 20 percent of mental health records are entered late into a background check database, a long-running problem state law enforcement officials now acknowledge could lead to someone with a known mental illness buying a gun.

Fentanyl is 30 to 50 times more potent than heroin-so deadly that just a few inhaled grains can cause an overdose. That can be a problem when sniffing is a police dog's primary mode of detective work.

TRAINING

Salt Lake Tribune: 'Trying to relate': An exercise in empathy trains Utah police officers how to respond to mental-health crises

The Salt Lake City Police Department has hosted the Crisis Intervention Team (CIT) Academy for the past 17 years, according to Detective Joseph Taylor, with the department's CIT unit. The training is for all new recruits and for existing police officers who want to learn how to identify signs of a mental health crisis.

TECHNOLOGY

NPR: Real-time facial recognition is available, but will U.S. police buy it?

Facial recognition accuracy rates have jumped dramatically in the last couple of years, making it feasible to monitor live video. China recently announced real-time facial recognition covering "16 provinces, cities and autonomous regions," and similar systems are being tried in Russia, India and even the United Kingdom. For autocratic societies such as China, the appeal is obvious. But police in western democracies are also showing interest.

OFFICER DEATHS

FBI: Law Enforcement Officers Killed and Assaulted, 2017

A total of 93 officers were killed in the line of duty last year, according to a portion of the FBI's Law Enforcement Officers Killed and Assaulted, 2017 (LEOKA) report released today. Of these deaths, 46 were felonious and 47 were accidental. Both numbers have decreased from 2016, during which 66 officers were feloniously killed and 52 were accidentally killed, for a total of 118 line-of-duty deaths.

National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial Fund: Fallen Law Enforcement Officers to be Honored During 30th Annual Candlelight Vigil on May 13 in Washington, DC

The names of 360 U.S. law enforcement officers who have died in the line of duty will be formally dedicated on the walls of the National Law Enforcement Officers Memorial during the 30th Annual Candlelight Vigil held on the National Mall between 4th and 7th streets in Washington, DC, at 8:00 pm on May 13, 2018. Each May 13, an estimated 20,000 people assemble for the Candlelight Vigil, a signature event of National Police Week. For the tenth year, the ceremony will be streamed live over the Internet so that everyone can witness this annual tribute to America's law enforcement officers. ABC News: ATF can't save bump stock owners from Maryland ban

The state of Maryland has stumbled across a novel way to satisfy gun-control opponents: create a licensing process that cannot be put into practice. Maryland lawmakers had sought to ban bump stocks, the controversial rifle accessory used in last year's Las Vegas massacre. But in writing the law, a clause allowing some gun owners to keep them may have backfired. The new law allows bump stocks - and other "rapid-fire trigger activators"- to be owned by people who get special dispensation from the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF). The federal agency, however, has no process or authority to offer that dispensation and, indeed, was never even told of the Maryland law, the ATF told ABC News.

GUN REGULATIONS

Politico: Background check gap could allow Florida mentally ill to buy guns

In Florida, a state with some of the nation's worst mass shootings in recent years, nearly 20 percent of mental health records are entered late into a background check database, a long-running problem state law enforcement officials now acknowledge could lead to someone with a known mental illness buying a gun.

Vancouver Sun: B.C. passes marijuana driving-impairment law, but confusion remains

Solicitor General Mike Farnworth said it was difficult for B.C. to pass new legislation this week that sets out a ticketing and policing regime for drivers and cannabis, because it still doesn't have details from Ottawa on what will be considered the federal standard for roadside drug-impairment testing.

In the "border zone," which is home to 65 percent of the U.S. population, different legal standards apply. Agents can enter private property, set up highway checkpoints, have wide discretion to stop, question, and detain individuals they suspect to have committed immigration violations-and can even use race and ethnicity as factors to do so. "It really is kind of a Constitution-free zone," says Patrick Eddington, a policy analyst who has been compiling data on border patrol's internal checkpoints at the CATO Institute.

How the NYPD Is Teaming Street Detectives with Civilian Analysts to Fight Terrorism

In this article, NYPD Intelligence Bureau Analyst Debra Morgan describes an NYPD unit that teams veteran detectives with civilian analysts who are experts in national security-related subjects. Teaming detectives with civilians does not always come naturally, Intelligence Bureau Deputy Inspector Paul Mauro cautioned. "It's important how you present it to the detectives," Mauro said. "I tell them that if they treat the analyst like an equal partner, their cases and their life will get infinitely better. I've seen it so many times." "When you start to hear detectives pontificating about shifting global alliances, while their analysts are cursing like veteran street cops, you know something special is happening," says Deputy Commissioner of Counterterrorism and Intelligence John Miller.

New York Times: How abusive relationships take root

The hallmark signs of the male abuser are well known to experts. He's jealous. He exhibits a Jekyll-and-Hyde personality. He can be cruel with animals, to children. But often it is the subtler, more incremental steps in the development of an abusive relationship. "It often starts in a very insidious way," said psychologist Patricia Pape "He says, 'Don't put Sweet-and-Low in your coffee, it's poisonous.' Then, 'That skirt is too short, it's too revealing.' You wind up in a situation where he's telling you what to wear, what to eat, who you can see, how to behave." Each small adjustment made by the victim reinforces this control.

A new law creates a database accessible by law enforcement that would advise an officer that he might be approaching a vehicle with a driver or passenger with autism, hearing problems, Parkinson's, mental illness, or some other disability making communication difficult, particularly during stressful situations.

Growing opposition to the law is challenging California's identity as the heart of liberal resistance to the Trump administration. Protests from conservative residents and politicians are emerging in courthouses and council meetings from here in the Bay Area to San Diego County.

Known officially as the California Values Act, the law prohibits nearly all communication between local law enforcement officials and federal immigration agents.

The father of Seven Hills student Kyle Plush wants an outside investigation into the death of his son because he believes a city report released Monday leaves too many questions unanswered. Plush's comments came amid a City Council presentation about the death of his son, who asphyxiated in his Honda Odyssey on April 10 after becoming pinned under a seat. The city report found technical and personnel problems contributed to the unsuccessful emergency response to Kyle's two desperate 911 calls for help.

The College and University Professional Association for Human Resources reported this morning that the number of campus police and public-safety personnel, though one of the smaller employee pools at institutions nationally, had grown from 1,077 to 1,403 positions at surveyed colleges from 2017 to 2018, an increase of 30-percent. In fact, colleges are hiring only data analysts at a faster rate than they are those in the safety sector.

IMMIGRATION

CityLab: Inside the massive U.S. 'border zone'

In the "border zone," which is home to 65 percent of the U.S. population, different legal standards apply. Agents can enter private property, set up highway checkpoints, have wide discretion to stop, question, and detain individuals they suspect to have committed immigration violations-and can even use race and ethnicity as factors to do so. "It really is kind of a Constitution-free zone," says Patrick Eddington, a policy analyst who has been compiling data on border patrol's internal checkpoints at the CATO Institute.

TERRORISM

How the NYPD Is Teaming Street Detectives with Civilian Analysts to Fight Terrorism

In this article, NYPD Intelligence Bureau Analyst Debra Morgan describes an NYPD unit that teams veteran detectives with civilian analysts who are experts in national security-related subjects. Teaming detectives with civilians does not always come naturally, Intelligence Bureau Deputy Inspector Paul Mauro cautioned. "It's important how you present it to the detectives," Mauro said. "I tell them that if they treat the analyst like an equal partner, their cases and their life will get infinitely better. I've seen it so many times." "When you start to hear detectives pontificating about shifting global alliances, while their analysts are cursing like veteran street cops, you know something special is happening," says Deputy Commissioner of Counterterrorism and Intelligence John Miller.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

New York Times: How abusive relationships take root

The hallmark signs of the male abuser are well known to experts. He's jealous. He exhibits a Jekyll-and-Hyde personality. He can be cruel with animals, to children. But often it is the subtler, more incremental steps in the development of an abusive relationship. "It often starts in a very insidious way," said psychologist Patricia Pape "He says, 'Don't put Sweet-and-Low in your coffee, it's poisonous.' Then, 'That skirt is too short, it's too revealing.' You wind up in a situation where he's telling you what to wear, what to eat, who you can see, how to behave." Each small adjustment made by the victim reinforces this control.

DISPATCH

Toledo Blade: New law helps alert police to presence of someone with autism

A new law creates a database accessible by law enforcement that would advise an officer that he might be approaching a vehicle with a driver or passenger with autism, hearing problems, Parkinson's, mental illness, or some other disability making communication difficult, particularly during stressful situations.

IMMIGRATION

Washington Post: As California defies federal immigration policy, calling itself a sanctuary, the state's conservatives are pushing back

Growing opposition to the law is challenging California's identity as the heart of liberal resistance to the Trump administration. Protests from conservative residents and politicians are emerging in courthouses and council meetings from here in the Bay Area to San Diego County. Known officially as the California Values Act, the law prohibits nearly all communication between local law enforcement officials and federal immigration agents.

Cincinnati Enquirer: 'We failed': Cincinnati leaders get results of Kyle Plush death investigation

The father of Seven Hills student Kyle Plush wants an outside investigation into the death of his son because he believes a city report released Monday leaves too many questions unanswered. Plush's comments came amid a City Council presentation about the death of his son, who asphyxiated in his Honda Odyssey on April 10 after becoming pinned under a seat. The city report found technical and personnel problems contributed to the unsuccessful emergency response to Kyle's two desperate 911 calls for help.

UNIVERSITY POLICE

The Chronicle of Higher Education: Among the hottest job markets on campus: police officer

The College and University Professional Association for Human Resources reported this morning that the number of campus police and public-safety personnel, though one of the smaller employee pools at institutions nationally, had grown from 1,077 to 1,403 positions at surveyed colleges from 2017 to 2018, an increase of 30-percent. In fact, colleges are hiring only data analysts at a faster rate than they are those in the safety sector.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Salt Lake Tribune: With internal candidates unqualified, polygamous community seeks police chief who isn't from there

The twin towns of Hildale, Utah, and Colorado City, Ariz., are going to get a new chief marshal. Internal candidates weren't qualified, Hildale Mayor Donia Jessop said Thursday. So the towns' monitor and police consultant, who are the ones making the hiring decision, are expected to choose someone who isn't from the towns. That could be the biggest change yet for government and police in Hildale and Colorado City, collectively known as Short Creek and home to the polygamous Fundamental Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

COURT CASES

Bloomberg News: U.S. Supreme Court limits police rental-car searches

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that rental-car drivers may have the right to prevent police from searching the vehicle, even if they aren't authorized to drive it.

TECHNOLOGY

The Independent: Metropolitan Police's facial recognition technology 98% inaccurate, figures show

Facial recognition software used by the UK's biggest police force has returned false positives in more than 98 per cent of alerts generated, The Independent can reveal, with the country's biometrics regulator calling it "not yet fit for use". The Metropolitan Police's system has produced 104 alerts of which only two were later confirmed to be positive matches, a freedom of information request showed.

In the "border zone," which is home to 65 percent of the U.S. population, different legal standards apply. Agents can enter private property, set up highway checkpoints, have wide discretion to stop, question, and detain individuals they suspect to have committed immigration violations-and can even use race and ethnicity as factors to do so. "It really is kind of a Constitution-free zone," says Patrick Eddington, a policy analyst who has been compiling data on border patrol's internal checkpoints at the CATO Institute.

How the NYPD Is Teaming Street Detectives with Civilian Analysts to Fight Terrorism

In this article, NYPD Intelligence Bureau Analyst Debra Morgan describes an NYPD unit that teams veteran detectives with civilian analysts who are experts in national security-related subjects. Teaming detectives with civilians does not always come naturally, Intelligence Bureau Deputy Inspector Paul Mauro cautioned. "It's important how you present it to the detectives," Mauro said. "I tell them that if they treat the analyst like an equal partner, their cases and their life will get infinitely better. I've seen it so many times." "When you start to hear detectives pontificating about shifting global alliances, while their analysts are cursing like veteran street cops, you know something special is happening," says Deputy Commissioner of Counterterrorism and Intelligence John Miller.

The hallmark signs of the male abuser are well known to experts. He's jealous. He exhibits a Jekyll-and-Hyde personality. He can be cruel with animals, to children. But often it is the subtler, more incremental steps in the development of an abusive relationship. "It often starts in a very insidious way," said psychologist Patricia Pape "He says, 'Don't put Sweet-and-Low in your coffee, it's poisonous.' Then, 'That skirt is too short, it's too revealing.' You wind up in a situation where he's telling you what to wear, what to eat, who you can see, how to behave." Each small adjustment made by the victim reinforces this control.

A new law creates a database accessible by law enforcement that would advise an officer that he might be approaching a vehicle with a driver or passenger with autism, hearing problems, Parkinson's, mental illness, or some other disability making communication difficult, particularly during stressful situations.

Growing opposition to the law is challenging California's identity as the heart of liberal resistance to the Trump administration. Protests from conservative residents and politicians are emerging in courthouses and council meetings from here in the Bay Area to San Diego County. Known officially as the California Values Act, the law prohibits nearly all communication between local law enforcement officials and federal immigration agents.

The father of Seven Hills student Kyle Plush wants an outside investigation into the death of his son because he believes a city report released Monday leaves too many questions unanswered. Plush's comments came amid a City Council presentation about the death of his son, who asphyxiated in his Honda Odyssey on April 10 after becoming pinned under a seat. The city report found technical and personnel problems contributed to the unsuccessful emergency response to Kyle's two desperate 911 calls for help.

The College and University Professional Association for Human Resources reported this morning that the number of campus police and public-safety personnel, though one of the smaller employee pools at institutions nationally, had grown from 1,077 to 1,403 positions at surveyed colleges from 2017 to 2018, an increase of 30-percent. In fact, colleges are hiring only data analysts at a faster rate than they are those in the safety sector.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

<[Salt Lake Tribune: With internal candidates unqualified, polygamous community seeks police chief who isn't from there
<\[The twin towns of Hildale, Utah, and Colorado City, Ariz., are going to get a new chief marshal. Internal candidates weren't qualified, Hildale Mayor Donia Jessop said Thursday. So the towns' monitor and police consultant, who are the ones making the hiring decision, are expected to choose someone who isn't from the towns. That could be the biggest change yet for government and police in Hildale and Colorado City, collectively known as Short Creek and home to the polygamous Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.\]\(https://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBShsKEm-2BJso9e57TEQA-2FDTodizlMRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2B5RrcGMFQyLBZU9ZOrPvf3y4eLy-2B5lbuGMgMI-2BS5A9-2BoS2F0UanmtXqzfmkeH0ooZ_mHfamGDSSOiBrZOSBeca8NqECsurHdPguJcPtyxJiQS9u03zHRltFPkztxngrYLRgulMisqP4xHzKAu5RWotdY-2FOVhDhIR3APUF1LwF47D73D7BPCSS3XvVPesFqvpt3x06XUpsHx2V8ht7XZQ4pE66Ke-2BeVr4vMSYDGZeIk17bYkDgkz0GzsvF8S1eNQ8faLUXi8jL1NN8HU8ycRsnlt-2Bjc2b70LI7SnAdAZhBmkyMHUK02SUKMdqLB03UOh8Z-2FZBiFBy7UzU8PRPwrSA2uDO95DPaw1GafN6HUYIZTPE-2Fq5co4NZFVI5eZgiIgz9cl-2FEfa37e2IsTpL12j9A-3D-3D><div data-bbox=)

Facial recognition software used by the UK's biggest police force has returned false positives in more than 98 per cent of alerts generated, The Independent can reveal, with the country's biometrics regulator calling it "not yet fit for use". The Metropolitan Police's system has produced 104 alerts of which only two were later confirmed to be positive matches, a freedom of information request showed.

IMMIGRATION

CityLab: Inside the massive U.S. 'border zone'

In the "border zone," which is home to 65 percent of the U.S. population, different legal standards apply. Agents can enter private property, set up highway checkpoints, have wide discretion to stop, question, and detain individuals they suspect to have committed immigration violations-and can even use race and ethnicity as factors to do so. "It really is kind of a Constitution-free zone," says Patrick Eddington, a policy analyst who has been compiling data on border patrol's internal checkpoints at the CATO Institute.

TERRORISM

How the NYPD Is Teaming Street Detectives with Civilian Analysts to Fight Terrorism

In this article, NYPD Intelligence Bureau Analyst Debra Morgan describes an NYPD unit that teams veteran detectives with civilian analysts who are experts in national security-related subjects. Teaming detectives with civilians does not always come naturally, Intelligence Bureau Deputy Inspector Paul Mauro cautioned. "It's important how you present it to the detectives," Mauro said. "I tell them that if they treat the analyst like an equal partner, their cases and their life will get infinitely better. I've seen it so many times." "When you start to hear detectives pontificating about shifting global alliances, while their analysts are cursing like veteran street cops, you know something special is happening," says Deputy Commissioner of Counterterrorism and Intelligence John Miller.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

New York Times: How abusive relationships take root

The hallmark signs of the male abuser are well known to experts. He's jealous. He exhibits a Jekyll-and-Hyde personality. He can be cruel with animals, to children. But often it is the subtler, more incremental steps in the development of an abusive relationship. "It often starts in a very insidious way," said psychologist Patricia Pape "He says, 'Don't put Sweet-and-Low in your coffee, it's poisonous.' Then, 'That skirt is too short, it's too revealing.' You wind up in a situation where he's telling you what to wear, what to eat, who you can see, how to behave." Each small adjustment made by the victim reinforces this control.

Toledo Blade: New law helps alert police to presence of someone with autism

A new law creates a database accessible by law enforcement that would advise an officer that he might be approaching a vehicle with a driver or passenger with autism, hearing problems, Parkinson's, mental illness, or some other disability making communication difficult, particularly during stressful situations.

Washington Post: As California defies federal immigration policy, calling itself a sanctuary, the state's conservatives are pushing back

Growing opposition to the law is challenging California's identity as the heart of liberal resistance to the Trump administration. Protests from conservative residents and politicians are emerging in courthouses and council meetings from here in the Bay Area to San Diego County. Known officially as the California Values Act, the law prohibits nearly all communication between local law enforcement officials and federal immigration agents.

Cincinnati Enquirer: 'We failed': Cincinnati leaders get results of Kyle Plush death investigation

The father of Seven Hills student Kyle Plush wants an outside investigation into the death of his son because he believes a city report released Monday leaves too many questions unanswered. Plush's comments came amid a City Council presentation about the death of his son, who asphyxiated in his Honda Odyssey on April 10 after becoming pinned under a seat. The city report found technical and personnel problems contributed to the unsuccessful emergency response to Kyle's two desperate 911 calls for help.

UNIVERSITY POLICE

The Chronicle of Higher Education: Among the hottest job markets on campus: police officer

The College and University Professional Association for Human Resources reported this morning that the number of campus police and public-safety personnel, though one of the smaller employee pools at institutions nationally, had grown from 1,077 to 1,403 positions at surveyed colleges from 2017 to 2018, an increase of 30-percent. In fact, colleges are hiring only data analysts at a faster rate than they are those in the safety sector.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Salt Lake Tribune: With internal candidates unqualified, polygamous community seeks police chief who isn't from there

The twin towns of Hildale, Utah, and Colorado City, Ariz., are going to get a new chief marshal. Internal candidates weren't qualified, Hildale Mayor Donia Jessop said Thursday. So the towns' monitor and police consultant, who are the ones making the hiring decision, are expected to choose someone who isn't from the towns. That could be the biggest change yet for government and police in Hildale and Colorado City, collectively known as Short Creek and home to the polygamous Fundamental Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints.

COURT CASES

Bloomberg News: U.S. Supreme Court limits police rental-car searches

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that rental-car drivers may have the right to prevent police from searching the vehicle, even if they aren't authorized to drive it.

TECHNOLOGY

The Independent: Metropolitan Police's facial recognition technology 98% inaccurate, figures show

Facial recognition software used by the UK's biggest police force has returned false positives in more than 98 per cent of alerts generated, The Independent can reveal, with the country's biometrics regulator calling it "not yet fit for use". The Metropolitan Police's system has produced 104 alerts of which only two were later confirmed to be positive matches, a freedom of information request showed.

The Story

President Trump may or may not have a deal
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=3a3eb788c2a4d102e11d416a5218e9bf a7100703e0b37dafdca6fce6495c4a69146859495b7e0e0f7c0aa7f430a9da4a9d9b41ac 0b48ff88>> to save Chinese phone-maker ZTE.

Back up.

ZTE is one of China's largest tech companies - and one of the US's top smartphone suppliers. Last year, ZTE pleaded guilty
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=3a3eb788c2a4d102f653f9ce17bbe16f 5abfe436dalf603b2f609c94c9f06612ab774ae05367df22bf3bcab4cf66d9ca1017b6f5 4f11c48b>> to violating sanctions by shipping US equipment to Iran and North Korea. And never followed through on its settlement deal. So the US banned
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=3a3eb788c2a4d102ee3aa142f5cacb2d 042d5e947ccb4b9265e659abf06df0d42789a7bf15a5c32879563e383c72c7461adbcc89 c824b8a8>> American companies from making some biz deals with ZTE until 2025. This month, ZTE shut down
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=3a3eb788c2a4d102258052a12804def6 acb2960204cb084798355572ec87f98elebe86f17bd033f4d90b85da149bd5dddc7fccccf a5b88c94>> its main operations, putting thousands of Chinese jobs at risk. But...

Yes?

Trump said he'd help ZTE get back on its feet
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=3a3eb788c2a4d1021ad5d59291aad2f0 6b18732c049108e5d7914f5f104292ed5759b0b50f753e809b6dced06625d6932dcbb167 ebc7047b>> as part of ongoing talks to avoid a US-China trade war. The one that's been looming since earlier this year when Trump put new tariffs on Chinese products.

So what's the latest?

A couple things. At first, it looked like Trump and China agreed on a deal <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=3a3eb788c2a4d102e8dfd910ab8ce816 6f8a700c122439a4cf3436cb7869018bf7b279f5ba423898dcf6843c11dada0da3e99c5a falbdc70>> to save ZTE. Then Trump said 'not yet' - because he's not happy with how trade talks are going with the country. Oh but even if they had come up with a deal, a Senate committee wants it to pass through Congress first.

Anything else?

Trump's working lunch with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un might not happen anymore <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=1a3109f9c0814614104ca14fa046d0b4 9598e497bd42302f7479b45f55e84296e32b74dea853c3090f19e4293efc581bc0dab4be d6b95b0a>> . Trump blames China. So...mixed messages.

theSkimm

There's a lot of complicated relationships at stake. There's the US and China. There's the US and North Korea. And then there's Trump and his voter base - which elected him in part on his promise to be tough on trade with China. It's delicate.

What people are talking about...

Philip Roth.

He was 85. For decades, Roth raised eyebrows and made a name for himself for the way he wrote about things like sex and life as a Jew. You know him for books like "Portnoy's Complaint" and "American Pastoral." He also won pretty much every literary award out there - including the Pulitzer, the National Book Award, and the Man Booker International Prize. Write on.

Can I get some privacy? Yesterday, dozens of civil rights organizations called on Amazon to stop selling facial recognition software

Some local police departments have been buying the software on the cheap to help ID suspects. Amazon says the software could help them find missing people. But these groups are throwing up their 'Big Brother' flags. And saying 'how about we don't open the door to even more mass government surveillance.' They worry this will lead to tracking already-vulnerable people - like undocumented immigrants or civil rights activists.

The 2010 law is designed to keep banks from repeating the risky business that got the US into its 2008 financial crisis. Under Dodd-Frank, banks that are considered especially big and important get extra regulations. Now, Congress is raising the standard for how big those banks need to be. This would reportedly leave less than 10 banks on the list for some extra regs. Republicans say Dodd-Frank ended up hurting small banks, too - and that this bill will give the little guys a much-needed break. Some Dems agreed. Others are ringing alarm bells - and saying this is part of the Trump administration's bigger effort to deregulate the financial industry. Now the bill heads to President Trump, who's expected to sign it.

Stateline: So states ban bump stocks. Now how do they enforce the law?

Under New Jersey's new bump-stock ban, which was approved in January, residents were supposed to destroy or turn in their bump stocks by mid-April. So far, New Jersey State Police say, they have not received a single one.

GUN REGULATIONS

Texas Tribune: Texas has a law aimed at keeping parents' guns out of kids' hands. But it's "reactive, not proactive."

Texas already has a law aimed at keeping parents' legally owned guns out of the hands of their children, but it failed to prevent Friday's shooting for several reasons - the most important of which, said state Rep. Phil King, R-Weatherford, is that it's "reactive, not proactive." Texas law allows prosecutors to go after parents whose children gain access to their loaded firearms, but it's one of the weaker ones among the 27 states with a child-access prevention law.

MASS SHOOTINGS

Associated Press: Mass school shootings mostly happening in small-town America

The massacre that killed 10 people at a high school in Texas last week was just the latest to happen in a small or suburban city. Of the 10 deadliest school shootings in the U.S., all but one took place in a town with fewer than 75,000 residents and the vast majority of them were in cities with fewer than 50,000 people.

TECHNOLOGY

NPR: Orlando police testing Amazon's real-time facial recognition

Tech companies are trying to sell police real-time facial recognition systems, which can track and identify people as they walk down the street. As NPR reported two weeks ago, American police have generally held off, but there's new evidence that one police department - Orlando, Fla. - has decided to try it out. What's more, Orlando ordered its facial recognition system from Amazon.

OPIOIDS

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Cleveland police's specialized opioid unit now a national model

Scott Moran spent the last three years rushing out of the door as part of Cleveland police department's specialized unit that responds to each opioid overdose in the city. The veteran narcotics detective, who is part of a seven-man team called the Heroin Involved Death Investigation unit, uses a non-traditional approach to conducting opioid-specific investigations that require investigators to be equal parts homicide detectives, narcotics cops and social workers. Moran said his unit had a lot of trial-and-error the first few years, but have since become a national model replicated by city police departments across the country.

OPIOIDS

Washington Post: Stanford Psychiatry Professor Keith Humphreys: How fentanyl could alter global drug policy

Policymakers and the public are acutely aware that the powerful opioid fentanyl has significantly worsened the country's opioid epidemic, accounting for almost 20,000 deaths in 2016. But few people appreciate fentanyl's potential to permanently alter illegal drug markets and international relations along with them. Heroin, morphine, oxycodone, hydrocodone and virtually every other opioid traded on the black market depend on a plant -- the opium poppy -- for their raw material. Fentanyl in contrast is an opioid analogue that can be created from chemicals in a laboratory.

IMMIGRATION

Chattanooga Times Free Press: Tennessee's controversial 'sanctuary cities' bill allowed to become law

Gov. Bill Haslam on Monday said he is allowing a controversial "sanctuary cities" bill to become law without his signature, arguing it does little in light of current federal policies and the "best thing is to move on." The legislation, which becomes state law Tuesday and takes effect Jan. 1, 2019, requires local law enforcement officials to comply with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement requests to hold immigrants for purposes of deportation.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Charlottesville Daily Progress: Brackney officially chosen as Charlottesville police chief

RaShall M. Brackney, the city's incoming police chief, received a mixed reception Monday before the Charlottesville City Council approved a resolution blessing the city manager's decision to hire her. Brackney will be the first African-American woman to serve as the city's police chief. She will succeed Al Thomas, the city's first African-American police chief.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Montgomery County Media: Rockville, MD selects new police chief

Victor Brito has been chosen as the new police chief for the City of Rockville. Brito, who is currently the Police Chief for the City of Hagerstown Police Department, will begin his first day with the city June 18.

MassLive.com: From police reports to a novel: Former Worcester Police Chief Gary Gemme pens love story set in Cape Cod, Nashville

When people from Worcester hear the name Gary Gemme most remember him writing police reports or memos to City Council. But the former police chief has now penned a love story with one of the backdrops set in Cape Cod. Gemme, 64, retired as the Worcester police chief in May 2016.

NPR: Orlando police testing Amazon's real-time facial recognition

Tech companies are trying to sell police real-time facial recognition systems, which can track and identify people as they walk down the street. As NPR reported two weeks ago, American police have generally held off, but there's new evidence that one police department - Orlando, Fla. - has decided to try it out. What's more, Orlando ordered its facial recognition system from Amazon.

OPIOIDS

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Cleveland police's specialized opioid unit now a national model

Scott Moran spent the last three years rushing out of the door as part of Cleveland police department's specialized unit that responds to each opioid overdose in the city. The veteran narcotics detective, who is part of a seven-man team called the Heroin Involved Death Investigation unit, uses a non-traditional approach to conducting opioid-specific investigations that require investigators to be equal parts homicide detectives, narcotics cops and social workers. Moran said his unit had a lot of trial-and-error the first few years, but have since become a national model replicated by city police departments across the country.

OPIOIDS

Washington Post: Stanford Psychiatry Professor Keith Humphreys: How fentanyl could alter global drug policy

Policymakers and the public are acutely aware that the powerful opioid fentanyl has significantly worsened the country's opioid epidemic, accounting for almost 20,000 deaths in 2016. But few people appreciate fentanyl's potential to permanently alter illegal drug markets and international relations along with them. Heroin, morphine, oxycodone, hydrocodone and virtually every other opioid traded on the black market depend on a plant -- the opium poppy -- for their raw material. Fentanyl in contrast is an opioid analogue that can be created from chemicals in a laboratory.

IMMIGRATION

Chattanooga Times Free Press: Tennessee's controversial 'sanctuary cities' bill allowed to become law

Gov. Bill Haslam on Monday said he is allowing a controversial "sanctuary cities" bill to become law without his signature, arguing it does little in light of current federal policies and the "best thing is to move on." The legislation, which becomes state law Tuesday and takes effect Jan. 1, 2019, requires local law enforcement officials to comply with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement requests to hold immigrants for purposes of deportation.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Charlottesville Daily Progress: Brackney officially chosen as Charlottesville police chief

RaShall M. Brackney, the city's incoming police chief, received a mixed reception Monday before the Charlottesville City Council approved a resolution blessing the city manager's decision to hire her. Brackney will be the first African-American woman to serve as the city's police chief. She will succeed Al Thomas, the city's first African-American police chief.

MassLive.com: From police reports to a novel: Former Worcester Police Chief Gary Gemme pens love story set in Cape Cod, Nashville

When people from Worcester hear the name Gary Gemme most remember him writing police reports or memos to City Council. But the former police chief has now penned a love story with one of the backdrops set in Cape Cod. Gemme, 64, retired as the Worcester police chief in May 2016.

Texas already has a law aimed at keeping parents' legally owned guns out of the hands of their children, but it failed to prevent Friday's shooting for several reasons - the most important of which, said state Rep. Phil King, R-Weatherford, is that it's "reactive, not proactive." Texas law allows prosecutors to go after parents whose children gain access to their loaded firearms, but it's one of the weaker ones among the 27 states with a child-access prevention law.

The massacre that killed 10 people at a high school in Texas last week was just the latest to happen in a small or suburban city. Of the 10 deadliest school shootings in the U.S., all but one took place in a town with fewer than 75,000 residents and the vast majority of them were in cities with fewer than 50,000 people.

<[Scott Moran spent the last three years rushing out of the door as part of Cleveland police department's specialized unit that responds to each opioid overdose in the city. The veteran narcotics detective, who is part of a seven-man team called the Heroin Involved Death Investigation unit, uses a non-traditional approach to conducting opioid-specific investigations that require investigators to be equal parts homicide detectives, narcotics cops and social workers. Policymakers and the public are acutely aware that the powerful opioid fentanyl has significantly worsened the country's opioid epidemic, accounting for almost 20,000 deaths in 2016. But few people appreciate fentanyl's potential to permanently alter illegal drug markets and international relations along with them. Heroin, morphine, oxycodone, hydrocodone and virtually every other opioid traded on the black market depend on a plant -- the opium poppy -- for their raw material. Fentanyl in contrast is an opioid analogue that can be created from chemicals in a laboratory.

Gov. Bill Haslam on Monday said he is allowing a controversial "sanctuary cities" bill to become law without his signature, arguing it does little in light of current federal policies and the "best thing is to move on." The legislation, which becomes state law Tuesday and takes effect Jan. 1, 2019, requires local law enforcement officials to comply with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement requests to hold immigrants for purposes of deportation.

GUN REGULATIONS

Stateline: So states ban bump stocks. Now how do they enforce the law?

Under New Jersey's new bump-stock ban, which was approved in January, residents were supposed to destroy or turn in their bump stocks by mid-April. So far, New Jersey State Police say, they have not received a single one.

GUN REGULATIONS

Texas Tribune: Texas has a law aimed at keeping parents' guns out of kids' hands. But it's "reactive, not proactive."

Texas already has a law aimed at keeping parents' legally owned guns out of the hands of their children, but it failed to prevent Friday's shooting for several reasons - the most important of which, said state Rep. Phil King, R-Weatherford, is that it's "reactive, not proactive." Texas law allows prosecutors to go after parents whose children gain access to their loaded firearms, but it's one of the weaker ones among the 27 states with a child-access prevention law.

MASS SHOOTINGS

Associated Press: Mass school shootings mostly happening in small-town America

The massacre that killed 10 people at a high school in Texas last week was just the latest to happen in a small or suburban city. Of the 10 deadliest school shootings in the U.S., all but one took place in a town with fewer than 75,000 residents and the vast majority of them were in cities with fewer than 50,000 people.

TECHNOLOGY

NPR: Orlando police testing Amazon's real-time facial recognition

Tech companies are trying to sell police real-time facial recognition systems, which can track and identify people as they walk down the street. As NPR reported two weeks ago, American police have generally held off, but there's new evidence that one police department - Orlando, Fla. - has decided to try it out. What's more, Orlando ordered its facial recognition system from Amazon.

OPIOIDS

Cleveland Plain Dealer: Cleveland police's specialized opioid unit now a national model

Scott Moran spent the last three years rushing out of the door as part of Cleveland police department's specialized unit that responds to each opioid overdose in the city. The veteran narcotics detective, who is part of a seven-man team called the Heroin Involved Death Investigation unit, uses a non-traditional approach to conducting opioid-specific investigations that require investigators to be equal parts homicide detectives, narcotics cops and social workers. Moran said his unit had a lot of trial-and-error the first few years, but have since become a national model replicated by city police departments across the country.

---

OPIOIDS

Washington Post: Stanford Psychiatry Professor Keith Humphreys: How fentanyl could alter global drug policy

Policymakers and the public are acutely aware that the powerful opioid fentanyl has significantly worsened the country's opioid epidemic, accounting for almost 20,000 deaths in 2016. But few people appreciate fentanyl's potential to permanently alter illegal drug markets and international relations along with them. Heroin, morphine, oxycodone, hydrocodone and virtually every other opioid traded on the black market depend on a plant -- the opium poppy -- for their raw material. Fentanyl in contrast is an opioid analogue that can be created from chemicals in a laboratory.

IMMIGRATION

Chattanooga Times Free Press: Tennessee's controversial 'sanctuary cities' bill allowed to become law

Gov. Bill Haslam on Monday said he is allowing a controversial "sanctuary cities" bill to become law without his signature, arguing it does little in light of current federal policies and the "best thing is to move on." The legislation, which becomes state law Tuesday and takes effect Jan. 1, 2019, requires local law enforcement officials to comply with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement requests to hold immigrants for purposes of deportation.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Charlottesville Daily Progress: Brackney officially chosen as Charlottesville police chief

RaShall M. Brackney, the city's incoming police chief, received a mixed reception Monday before the Charlottesville City Council approved a resolution blessing the city manager's decision to hire her. Brackney will be the first African-American woman to serve as the city's police chief. She will succeed Al Thomas, the city's first African-American police chief.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Montgomery County Media: Rockville, MD selects new police chief

Victor Brito has been chosen as the new police chief for the City of Rockville. Brito, who is currently the Police Chief for the City of Hagerstown Police Department, will begin his first day with the city June 18.

MassLive.com: From police reports to a novel: Former Worcester Police Chief Gary Gemme pens love story set in Cape Cod, Nashville

When people from Worcester hear the name Gary Gemme most remember him writing police reports or memos to City Council. But the former police chief has now penned a love story with one of the backdrops set in Cape Cod. Gemme, 64, retired as the Worcester police chief in May 2016.

Texas already has a law aimed at keeping parents' legally owned guns out of the hands of their children, but it failed to prevent Friday's shooting for several reasons - the most important of which, said state Rep. Phil King, R-Weatherford, is that it's "reactive, not proactive." Texas law allows prosecutors to go after parents whose children gain access to their loaded firearms, but it's one of the weaker ones among the 27 states with a child-access prevention law.

The massacre that killed 10 people at a high school in Texas last week was just the latest to happen in a small or suburban city. Of the 10 deadliest school shootings in the U.S., all but one took place in a town with fewer than 75,000 residents and the vast majority of them were in cities with fewer than 50,000 people.

Policymakers and the public are acutely aware that the powerful opioid fentanyl has significantly worsened the country's opioid epidemic, accounting for almost 20,000 deaths in 2016. But few people appreciate fentanyl's potential to permanently alter illegal drug markets and international relations along with them. Heroin, morphine, oxycodone, hydrocodone and virtually every other opioid traded on the black market depend on a plant -- the opium poppy -- for their raw material. Fentanyl in contrast is an opioid analogue that can be created from chemicals in a laboratory.

Gov. Bill Haslam on Monday said he is allowing a controversial "sanctuary cities" bill to become law without his signature, arguing it does little in light of current federal policies and the "best thing is to move on." The legislation, which becomes state law Tuesday and takes effect Jan. 1, 2019, requires local law enforcement officials to comply with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement requests to hold immigrants for purposes of deportation.

Major European cities, including London, which may be the most surveilled city in the world, have long had networks of linked cameras. Now, in the United States, the technology race is on. Linked cameras are becoming commonplace in cities like New York and Baltimore. The Louisville police are considering using drones to respond to gunshots, and places like Orlando, Fla., and Washington County, Ore., are testing facial recognition software. But advanced surveillance also presents the risk of intrusion and abuse, especially if it is carried out with little public disclosure or oversight. In Chicago, there are also concerns that surveillance might facilitate the racial bias that has long eroded trust of the police. On the other hand, the police say the cameras might reduce the number of stop and frisks, improving community relations and, perhaps, decreasing the need for disciplinary actions that have caused tensions between the mayor and the police, even prompting President Trump to weigh in.

As overdose deaths mount, prosecutors are increasingly treating them as homicide scenes and looking to hold someone criminally accountable. Using laws devised to go after drug dealers, they are charging friends, partners and siblings. Such cases are becoming more common even as the role of the criminal justice system in combating drug abuse has become hotly contested, and even as many prosecutors - including those who pursue overdose death cases - say they embrace the push to treat addiction as a public health crisis rather than a crime.

Many S.C. law enforcement agencies are relying on vague or subjective high-speed chase policies, legitimizing dangerous pursuits. Even when it appears a policy has been violated, police chiefs and sheriffs defend the chases as necessary and their officers are rarely punished. Meanwhile, people are dying - even innocent bystanders not involved in the chases.

Bernardo Gabriel's story is just one example of the real-life ramifications of the 287(g) program, a long-standing and controversial federal program that trains and deputizes state and local police officers to enforce some aspects of federal immigration law. Participation in the program has varied over the years, but is being revived under the Trump administration.

The city of Mission is 88 percent Hispanic, with a sizable undocumented population. Its highways and rivers and ranches are often swarming with Border Patrol agents. Just outside the town, protests have been held about the planned border wall and the National Guard's mobilization. Last month, at one demonstration, activists held signs reading, "No militarization of the border." The Border Patrol is now taking a stab at diplomacy. Agents visit elementary school career days and local parades and gun fairs. They have their own equivalent of the Boy Scouts - the Border Patrol Explorers - that allows teenagers to "observe and assist with surveillance operations."

No longer a novelty, drones are becoming an everyday tool for more police and fire departments, new research has found. The number of public safety agencies with drones has more than doubled since the end of 2016, according to data collected by the Center for the Study of the Drone at New York's Bard College.

City police wanting to search people will face new restrictions, including in how they obtain permission from drivers or pedestrians before going through their property. The changes mandated Tuesday night by City Council were part of a dramatic 5-2 vote that went against the wishes of Police Chief Tammy Hooper. The biggest change is that police will have to get written permission before conducting a search unless they have reasonable grounds or "probable cause" to believe a crime has been committed.

A primary duty of a 911 operator is to interpret a caller's request and determine if it merits police attention. We are extensively trained to do so. Policing requires effective gatekeepers to filter out requests that should be handled by alternative agencies or service providers. But gatekeeping is hard work in an environment of uncertainty and confusion. PSAPs and police departments can adopt several policies to mitigate the problems ambiguous calls pose.

These days it's hard to find anybody critical of marijuana. The drug enjoys broad acceptance by most Americans - 63 percent favored ending cannabis prohibition in a recent Quinnipiac poll - and legislators on both sides of the aisle are becoming more likely to endorse than condemn it. And why not? The drug is widely thought to be either benign or beneficial. Even many of those apathetic toward its potential health benefits are ecstatic about its commercial appeal, whether for personal profit or state tax revenue. Legalization in many cases, and for many reasons, can be a good thing. I'm sympathetic. But I am also a neuroscientist, and I can see that the story is being oversimplified.

TECHNOLOGY

New York Times: Can 30,000 cameras help solve Chicago's crime problem?

Major European cities, including London, which may be the most surveilled city in the world, have long had networks of linked cameras. Now, in the United States, the technology race is on. Linked cameras are becoming commonplace in cities like New York and Baltimore. The Louisville police are considering using drones to respond to gunshots, and places like Orlando, Fla., and Washington County, Ore., are testing facial recognition software. But advanced surveillance also presents the risk of intrusion and abuse, especially if it is carried out with little public disclosure or oversight. In Chicago, there are also concerns that surveillance might facilitate the racial bias that has long eroded trust of the police. On the other hand, the police say the cameras might reduce the number of stop and frisks, improving community relations and, perhaps, decreasing the need for disciplinary actions that have caused tensions between the mayor and the police, even prompting President Trump to weigh in.

OPIOIDS

New York Times: They shared drugs. Someone died. Does that make them killers?

As overdose deaths mount, prosecutors are increasingly treating them as homicide scenes and looking to hold someone criminally accountable. Using laws devised to go after drug dealers, they are charging friends, partners and siblings. Such cases are becoming more common even as the role of the criminal justice system in combating drug abuse has become hotly contested, and even as many prosecutors - including those who pursue overdose death cases - say they embrace the push to treat addiction as a public health crisis rather than a crime.

PURSUIT POLICIES

Columbia State: 'If someone flees, we chase.' These SC police tactics put innocent bystanders in danger

Many S.C. law enforcement agencies are relying on vague or subjective high-speed chase policies, legitimizing dangerous pursuits. Even when it appears a policy has been violated, police chiefs and sheriffs defend the chases as necessary and their officers are rarely punished. Meanwhile, people are dying - even innocent bystanders not involved in the chases.

IMMIGRATION

Yahoo News: ICE expands controversial partnerships with local law enforcement

Bernardo Gabriel's story is just one example of the real-life ramifications of the 287(g) program, a long-standing and controversial federal program that trains and deputizes state and local police officers to enforce some aspects of federal immigration law. Participation in the program has varied over the years, but is being revived under the Trump administration.

COMMUNITY POLICING

Washington Post: The Border Patrol tries to win over Hispanic communities - by singing love songs in Spanish

The city of Mission is 88 percent Hispanic, with a sizable undocumented population. Its highways and rivers and ranches are often swarming with Border Patrol agents. Just outside the town, protests have been held about the planned border wall and the National Guard's mobilization. Last month, at one demonstration, activists held signs reading, "No militarization of the border." The Border Patrol is now taking a stab at diplomacy. Agents visit elementary school career days and local parades and gun fairs. They have their own equivalent of the Boy Scouts - the Border Patrol Explorers - that allows teenagers to "observe and assist with surveillance operations."

DRONES

Associated Press: Law enforcement agencies turning to drones to fight crime

No longer a novelty, drones are becoming an everyday tool for more police and fire departments, new research has found. The number of public safety agencies with drones has more than doubled since the end of 2016, according to data collected by the Center for the Study of the Drone at New York's Bard College.

Asheville Citizen Tribune: Police searches in Asheville to face new restrictions, including written consent

City police wanting to search people will face new restrictions, including in how they obtain permission from drivers or pedestrians before going through their property. The changes mandated Tuesday night by City Council were part of a dramatic 5-2 vote that went against the wishes of Police Chief Tammy Hooper. The biggest change is that police will have to get written permission before conducting a search unless they have reasonable grounds or "probable cause" to believe a crime has been committed.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Seattle Times: Three finalists named for Seattle police chief job

After a nationwide search, three people from outside the Seattle Police Department were named as finalists Friday to become its next police chief.

EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS

Washington Post: University of Michigan Sociology and Public Policy PhD Candidate Jessica Gillooly: 911 operators need better training, too

A primary duty of a 911 operator is to interpret a caller's request and determine if it merits police attention. We are extensively trained to do so. Policing requires effective gatekeepers to filter out requests that should be handled by alternative agencies or service providers. But gatekeeping is hard work in an environment of uncertainty and confusion. PSAPs and police departments can adopt several policies to mitigate the problems ambiguous calls pose.

MARIJUANA

Washington Post: Bucknell University Psychology and Neuroscience Professor Judith Grisel: Pot holes

These days it's hard to find anybody critical of marijuana. The drug enjoys broad acceptance by most Americans - 63 percent favored ending cannabis prohibition in a recent Quinnipiac poll - and legislators on both sides of the aisle are becoming more likely to endorse than condemn it. And why not? The drug is widely thought to be either benign or beneficial. Even many of those apathetic toward its potential health benefits are ecstatic about its commercial appeal, whether for personal profit or state tax revenue. Legalization in many cases, and for many reasons, can be a good thing. I'm sympathetic. But I am also a neuroscientist, and I can see that the story is being oversimplified.

SEXUAL OFFENSES

New PERF Report: Executive Guidebook: Practical Approaches for Strengthening Law Enforcement's Response to Sexual Assault

In 2012, the U.S. Justice Department's Office on Violence Against Women awarded a cooperative agreement to PERF, in partnership with the Women's Law Project, to increase awareness of the FBI's updated UCR definition of rape and to improve sexual assault investigations in police agencies and sheriffs' offices across the country. Our goal was to identify and share best practices for improving law enforcement agencies' response to sexual assault. Topics covered in this guidebook include: adopting a victim-centered, trauma-informed approach; the responsibilities of dispatchers, responding officers, and SVU supervisors; victim interviews, evidence collection, medical forensic exams, and other investigative procedures; report-writing; coding and classification of sexual assault reports; training issues; partnerships with other agencies, including Child Protective Services and victim advocates; accountability mechanisms; and ensuring the well-being of officers and investigators who may experience the stress of vicarious trauma.

Many S.C. law enforcement agencies are relying on vague or subjective high-speed chase policies, legitimizing dangerous pursuits. Even when it appears a policy has been violated, police chiefs and sheriffs defend the chases as necessary and their officers are rarely punished. Meanwhile, people are dying - even innocent bystanders not involved in the chases.

Bernardo Gabriel's story is just one example of the real-life ramifications of the 287(g) program, a long-standing and controversial federal program that trains and deputizes state and local police officers to enforce some aspects of federal immigration law. Participation in the program has varied over the years, but is being revived under the Trump administration.

The city of Mission is 88 percent Hispanic, with a sizable undocumented population. Its highways and rivers and ranches are often swarming with Border Patrol agents. Just outside the town, protests have been held about the planned border wall and the National Guard's mobilization. Last month, at one demonstration, activists held signs reading, "No militarization of the border." The Border Patrol is now taking a stab at diplomacy. Agents visit elementary school career days and local parades and gun fairs. They have their own equivalent of the Boy Scouts - the Border Patrol Explorers - that allows teenagers to "observe and assist with surveillance operations."

No longer a novelty, drones are becoming an everyday tool for more police and fire departments, new research has found. The number of public safety agencies with drones has more than doubled since the end of 2016, according to data collected by the Center for the Study of the Drone at New York's Bard College.

City police wanting to search people will face new restrictions, including in how they obtain permission from drivers or pedestrians before going through their property. The changes mandated Tuesday night by City Council were part of a dramatic 5-2 vote that went against the wishes of Police Chief Tammy Hooper. The biggest change is that police will have to get written permission before conducting a search unless they have reasonable grounds or "probable cause" to believe a crime has been committed.

A primary duty of a 911 operator is to interpret a caller's request and determine if it merits police attention. We are extensively trained to do so. Policing requires effective gatekeepers to filter out requests that should be handled by alternative agencies or service providers. But gatekeeping is hard work in an environment of uncertainty and confusion. PSAPs and police departments can adopt several policies to mitigate the problems ambiguous calls pose.

These days it's hard to find anybody critical of marijuana. The drug enjoys broad acceptance by most Americans - 63 percent favored ending cannabis prohibition in a recent Quinnipiac poll - and legislators on both sides of the aisle are becoming more likely to endorse than condemn it. And why not? The drug is widely thought to be either benign or beneficial. Even many of those apathetic toward its potential health benefits are ecstatic about its commercial appeal, whether for personal profit or state tax revenue. Legalization in many cases, and for many reasons, can be a good thing. I'm sympathetic. But I am also a neuroscientist, and I can see that the story is being oversimplified.

In 2012, the U.S. Justice Department's Office on Violence Against Women awarded a cooperative agreement to PERF, in partnership with the Women's Law Project, to increase awareness of the FBI's updated UCR definition of rape and to improve sexual assault investigations in police agencies and sheriffs' offices across the country. Our goal was to identify and share best practices for improving law enforcement agencies' response to sexual assault. Topics covered in this guidebook include: adopting a victim-centered, trauma-informed approach; the responsibilities of dispatchers, responding officers, and SVU supervisors; victim interviews, evidence collection, medical forensic exams, and other investigative procedures; report-writing; coding and classification of sexual assault reports; training issues; partnerships with other agencies, including Child Protective Services and victim advocates; accountability mechanisms; and ensuring the well-being of officers and investigators who may experience the stress of vicarious trauma.

New York Times: Can 30,000 cameras help solve Chicago's crime problem?

Major European cities, including London, which may be the most surveilled city in the world, have long had networks of linked cameras. Now, in the United States, the technology race is on. Linked cameras are becoming commonplace in cities like New York and Baltimore. The Louisville police are considering using drones to respond to gunshots, and places like Orlando, Fla., and Washington County, Ore., are testing facial recognition software. But advanced surveillance also presents the risk of intrusion and abuse, especially if it is carried out with little public disclosure or oversight. In Chicago, there are also concerns that surveillance might facilitate the racial bias that has long eroded trust of the police. On the other hand, the police say the cameras might reduce the number of stop and frisks, improving community relations and, perhaps, decreasing the need for disciplinary actions that have caused tensions between the mayor and the police, even prompting President Trump to weigh in.

OPIOIDS

New York Times: They shared drugs. Someone died. Does that make them killers?

As overdose deaths mount, prosecutors are increasingly treating them as homicide scenes and looking to hold someone criminally accountable. Using laws devised to go after drug dealers, they are charging friends, partners and siblings. Such cases are becoming more common even as the role of the criminal justice system in combating drug abuse has become hotly contested, and even as many prosecutors - including those who pursue overdose death cases - say they embrace the push to treat addiction as a public health crisis rather than a crime.

PURSUIT POLICIES

Columbia State: 'If someone flees, we chase.' These SC police tactics put innocent bystanders in danger

Many S.C. law enforcement agencies are relying on vague or subjective high-speed chase policies, legitimizing dangerous pursuits. Even when it appears a policy has been violated, police chiefs and sheriffs defend the chases as necessary and their officers are rarely punished. Meanwhile, people are dying - even innocent bystanders not involved in the chases.

Yahoo News: ICE expands controversial partnerships with local law enforcement

Bernardo Gabriel's story is just one example of the real-life ramifications of the 287(g) program, a long-standing and controversial federal program that trains and deputizes state and local police officers to enforce some aspects of federal immigration law. Participation in the program has varied over the years, but is being revived under the Trump administration.

COMMUNITY POLICING

Washington Post: The Border Patrol tries to win over Hispanic communities - by singing love songs in Spanish

The city of Mission is 88 percent Hispanic, with a sizable undocumented population. Its highways and rivers and ranches are often swarming with Border Patrol agents. Just outside the town, protests have been held about the planned border wall and the National Guard's mobilization. Last month, at one demonstration, activists held signs reading, "No militarization of the border." The Border Patrol is now taking a stab at diplomacy. Agents visit elementary school career days and local parades and gun fairs. They have their own equivalent of the Boy Scouts - the Border Patrol Explorers - that allows teenagers to "observe and assist with surveillance operations."

Associated Press: Law enforcement agencies turning to drones to fight crime

No longer a novelty, drones are becoming an everyday tool for more police and fire departments, new research has found. The number of public safety agencies with drones has more than doubled since the end of 2016, according to data collected by the Center for the Study of the Drone at New York's Bard College.

Asheville Citizen Tribune: Police searches in Asheville to face new restrictions, including written consent

City police wanting to search people will face new restrictions, including in how they obtain permission from drivers or pedestrians before going through their property. The changes mandated Tuesday night by City Council were part of a dramatic 5-2 vote that went against the wishes of Police Chief Tammy Hooper. The biggest change is that police will have to get written permission before conducting a search unless they have reasonable grounds or "probable cause" to believe a crime has been committed.

EMERGENCY COMMUNICATIONS

Washington Post: University of Michigan Sociology and Public Policy PhD Candidate Jessica Gillooly: 911 operators need better training, too

A primary duty of a 911 operator is to interpret a caller's request and determine if it merits police attention. We are extensively trained to do so. Policing requires effective gatekeepers to filter out requests that should be handled by alternative agencies or service providers. But gatekeeping is hard work in an environment of uncertainty and confusion. PSAPs and police departments can adopt several policies to mitigate the problems ambiguous calls pose.

MARIJUANA

Washington Post: Bucknell University Psychology and Neuroscience Professor Judith Grisel: Pot holes

These days it's hard to find anybody critical of marijuana. The drug enjoys broad acceptance by most Americans - 63 percent favored ending cannabis prohibition in a recent Quinnipiac poll - and legislators on both sides of the aisle are becoming more likely to endorse than condemn it. And why not? The drug is widely thought to be either benign or beneficial. Even many of those apathetic toward its potential health benefits are ecstatic about its commercial appeal, whether for personal profit or state tax revenue. Legalization in many cases, and for many reasons, can be a good thing. I'm sympathetic. But I am also a neuroscientist, and I can see that the story is being oversimplified.

In 2012, the U.S. Justice Department's Office on Violence Against Women awarded a cooperative agreement to PERF, in partnership with the Women's Law Project, to increase awareness of the FBI's updated UCR definition of rape and to improve sexual assault investigations in police agencies and sheriffs' offices across the country. Our goal was to identify and share best practices for improving law enforcement agencies' response to sexual assault. Topics covered in this guidebook include: adopting a victim-centered, trauma-informed approach; the responsibilities of dispatchers, responding officers, and SVU supervisors; victim interviews, evidence collection, medical forensic exams, and other investigative procedures; report-writing; coding and classification of sexual assault reports; training issues; partnerships with other agencies, including Child Protective Services and victim advocates; accountability mechanisms; and ensuring the well-being of officers and investigators who may experience the stress of vicarious trauma.

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not. In this webinar, see how Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez uses Vigilant's FaceSearch to generate investigative leads from images that normally do not meet the criteria for facial recognition searching after vetting and performing specific enhancements.

Miss the first installment? We've opened registration for another round. Register for our webinar: Man v. Machine and we will explain why the facial recognition process still needs human involvement.

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not. In this webinar, see how Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez uses Vigilant's FaceSearch to generate investigative leads from images that normally do not meet the criteria for facial recognition searching after vetting and performing specific enhancements.

Miss the first installment? We've opened registration for another round. Register for our webinar: Man v. Machine and we will explain why the facial recognition process still needs human involvement.

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not. In this webinar, see how Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez uses Vigilant's FaceSearch to generate investigative leads from images that normally do not meet the criteria for facial recognition searching after vetting and performing specific enhancements.

Miss the first installment? We've opened registration for another round. Register for our webinar: Man v. Machine and we will explain why the facial recognition process still needs human involvement.

FBI-LEEDA recognizes that with various shifts and responsibilities, law enforcement officers cannot always get away to attend a brick-and-mortar school or class. That's why FBI-LEEDA offers three classes via distance. Although there are hard timelines for assignments, each module can be taken at the student's leisure - any time of day or night.

Earn your FBI-LEEDA eTrilogy by successfully completing FBI-LEEDA's Distance Learning Basic Supervisor Liability, Advanced Supervisor

Liability, and Distance Learning Ethics courses!

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not. In this webinar, see how Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez uses Vigilant's FaceSearch to generate investigative leads from images that normally do not meet the criteria for facial recognition searching after vetting and performing specific enhancements.

Miss the first installment? We've opened registration for another round. Register for our webinar: Man v. Machine and we will explain why the facial recognition process still needs human involvement.

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not. In this webinar, see how Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez uses Vigilant's FaceSearch to generate investigative leads from images that normally do not meet the criteria for facial recognition searching after vetting and performing specific enhancements.

Miss the first installment? We've opened registration for another round. Register for our webinar: Man v. Machine and we will explain why the facial recognition process still needs human involvement.

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not. In this webinar, see how Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez uses Vigilant's FaceSearch to generate investigative leads from images that normally do not meet the criteria for facial recognition searching after vetting and performing specific enhancements.

Miss the first installment? We've opened registration for another round. Register for our webinar: Man v. Machine and we will explain why the facial recognition process still needs human involvement.

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not. In this webinar, see how Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez uses Vigilant's FaceSearch to generate investigative leads from images that normally do not meet the criteria for facial recognition searching after vetting and performing specific enhancements.

Miss the first installment? We've opened registration for another round. Register for our webinar: Man v. Machine and we will explain why the facial recognition process still needs human involvement.

In the past year, facial recognition use by public safety has seen significant improvements in matching accuracy. Although the confidence level in the technology is rising, there are still many best practices they are missing out on such as human involvement, a critical deciding factor of whether returned leads are viable or not. In this webinar, see how Director of Client Relations for Vigilant Solutions and Retired NYPD Detective, Roger Rodriguez uses Vigilant's FaceSearch to generate investigative leads from images that normally do not meet the criteria for facial recognition searching after vetting and performing specific enhancements.

Miss the first installment? We've opened registration for another round. Register for our webinar: Man v. Machine and we will explain why the facial recognition process still needs human involvement.

Vigilant Solutions Acquisition Announcement

Dear Sarah,

We are very excited to announce today that Vigilant Solutions has acquired the assets of ShotCaller Global Inc.

<http://www2.vigilantsolutions.com/e/43142/tigative-tool-law-enforcement-/6x42s5/764898798>, developer of GunOps™ and DNAOps™ investigative solutions for law enforcement. This acquisition enables us to provide the law enforcement community with firearm forensic mapping and DNA crime mapping technology that complement our existing suite of automated license plate reader (ALPR) data, facial recognition technology and ballistics analysis solutions.

GunOps and DNAOps are web-based interactive investigation tools. GunOps allows law enforcement investigators and analysts to enter, visualize and access information about firearm-related crimes, forensic test results and armed criminals. DNAOps allows law enforcement to enter, visualize and access information about crimes where DNA has been recovered from crime scenes, using web-based mapping applications.

This means Vigilant Solutions is now well-positioned to help the law enforcement community to combat the growing epidemic of gun crime. Specifically, our enhanced suite of offerings enables us to provide law enforcement the ability to help identify the G.E.T. - geography, event and time - of gun crime.

Anyone who works with or for Vigilant Solutions knows that we are passionate about the fact that our solutions help to keep communities and law enforcement safe. This acquisition is exciting because it not only allows us to continue to achieve that goal, but also enables us to expand our capabilities and help law enforcement to eradicate violent gun crime.

If you are interested in learning more about GunOps, please contact us at BeVigilant@VigilantSolutions.com.

Be Safe. Be Smart. Be Vigilant.

Vigilant Solutions Acquisition Announcement

Dear Renee,

We are very excited to announce today that Vigilant Solutions has acquired the assets of ShotCaller Global Inc. <http://www2.vigilantsolutions.com/e/43142/tigative-tool-law-enforcement-/6x42s5/764898796>, developer of GunOps™ and DNAOps™ investigative solutions for law enforcement. This acquisition enables us to provide the law enforcement community with firearm forensic mapping and DNA crime mapping technology that complement our existing suite of automated license plate reader (ALPR) data, facial recognition technology and ballistics analysis solutions.

GunOps and DNAOps are web-based interactive investigation tools. GunOps allows law enforcement investigators and analysts to enter, visualize and access information about firearm-related crimes, forensic test results and armed criminals. DNAOps allows law enforcement to enter, visualize and access information about crimes where DNA has been recovered from crime scenes, using web-based mapping applications.

This means Vigilant Solutions is now well-positioned to help the law enforcement community to combat the growing epidemic of gun crime. Specifically, our enhanced suite of offerings enables us to provide law enforcement the ability to help identify the G.E.T. - geography, event and time - of gun crime.

Anyone who works with or for Vigilant Solutions knows that we are passionate about the fact that our solutions help to keep communities and law enforcement safe. This acquisition is exciting because it not only allows us to continue to achieve that goal, but also enables us to expand our capabilities and help law enforcement to eradicate violent gun crime.

If you are interested in learning more about GunOps, please contact us at BeVigilant@VigilantSolutions.com.

This acquisition enables us to provide the law enforcement community with firearm forensic mapping and DNA crime mapping technology that complement our existing suite of automated license plate reader (ALPR) data, facial recognition technology and ballistics analysis solutions.

GunOps and DNAOps are web-based interactive investigation tools. GunOps allows law enforcement investigators and analysts to enter, visualize and access information about firearm-related crimes, forensic test results and armed criminals. DNAOps allows law enforcement to enter, visualize and access information about crimes where DNA has been recovered from crime scenes, using web-based mapping applications.

So, what does this mean for you, our customers? It means Vigilant Solutions is now well-positioned to help you and your jurisdiction to combat the growing epidemic of gun crime. Specifically, our enhanced suite of offerings enables us to provide you the ability to help identify the G.E.T. - geography, event and time - of gun crime.

Anyone who works with or for Vigilant Solutions knows that we are passionate about the fact that our solutions help to keep communities and law enforcement safe. This acquisition is exciting because it not only allows us to continue to achieve that goal, but also enables us to expand our capabilities and help you to eradicate violent gun crime in your communities.

Stacey,

On the heels of Wi-Fiber's BEST OF SHOW award at CES, our revolutionary Intelli-Platform™ has garnered the attention of law enforcement offices as a rapid Force Multiplier at a fraction of the price of additional new hires. Our device, a straight replacement to traditional street lamps, incorporates high speed wireless connectivity and surveillance which includes:

- * 4K cameras with facial recognition & LPR
- * Microphones
- * Two way speakers
- * Gunshot and glass-break sensors

Best of all, with built in wireless connectivity, power is the only requirement - allowing your team to install our device on any and every street corner with no additional internet or power lines.

Do you have a few moments to discuss our core capabilities and the most cost effective force multiplier available?

Thanks & regards

Maria,

On the heels of Wi-Fiber's BEST OF SHOW award at CES, our revolutionary Intelli-Platform™ has garnered the attention of law enforcement offices as a rapid Force Multiplier at a fraction of the price of additional new hires. Our device, a straight replacement to traditional street lamps, incorporates high speed wireless connectivity and surveillance which includes:

- * 4K cameras with facial recognition & LPR
- * Microphones
- * Two way speakers
- * Gunshot and glass-break sensors

Best of all, with built in wireless connectivity, power is the only requirement - allowing your team to install our device on any and every street corner with no additional internet or power lines.

Do you have a few moments to discuss our core capabilities and the most cost effective force multiplier available?

Thanks & regards

Chris Maurer

Policing & Policy

Law Enforcement May Be Prevented From Accessing iPhones After Settings Update.

The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=004-8b2&t=c> New York Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=005-3ed&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=006-ea4&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/13, Nicas, Subscription Publication) reports Apple has "long positioned the iPhone as a secure device that only its owner can open," which has "led to battles with law enforcement officials who want to get information off them, including a well-publicized showdown with the F.B.I. in 2016 after Apple refused to help open the locked iPhone of a mass killer." The Times says Apple is now "closing the technological loophole that let authorities hack into iPhones, angering police and other officials and reigniting a debate over whether the government has a right to get into the personal devices that are at the center of modern life." Apple "said it was planning an iPhone software update that would effectively disable the phone's charging and data port...an hour after the phone is locked." The Times explains that such a change "would hinder law enforcement officials, who have typically been opening locked iPhones by connecting another device running special software to the port, often days or even months after the smartphone was last unlocked."

in countries where police seize phones at will and all users from the risk that the attack technique will leak to spies and criminals."

The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=00a-d69&t=c> Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=00b-597&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=00c-00c&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/13, Timberg, Romm) reports Apple

"said the change, which would disable the Lightning port on the bottom of iPhones an hour after users lock their phones, is part of software updates rolling out in the fall." The Post says the move "could reignite debate over whether tech companies are doing enough to help authorities probing serious crimes." The Post mentions that FBI officials "in particular have complained about what they call the 'Going Dark Problem' as encryption becomes increasingly widespread and robust across a range of consumer devices and services." Apple claims the change was not intended to thwart law enforcement, but rather to "strengthe[n] the security protections in every Apple product to help customers defend against hackers, identity thieves and intrusions into their personal data." However, "some authorities almost certainly will see it as yet another barrier to carrying out their legally sanctioned investigations."

Nearly 300 Arrested In Mississippi Operation.

The AP <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=010-ffe&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=011-868&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=012-ee1&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/13) reports, "Nearly 300 people have been arrested in Mississippi as part of a federal, state and local initiative to cut crime." In a statement on Tuesday, the US Marshals Service's Gulf Coast Regional Fugitive Task Force "said it had recently completed a six-week effort in the Southern District of Mississippi, known as 'Operation Triple Beam,' resulting in the arrests of 270 people." 90 of the individuals arrested were gang members, "representing various affiliations including the Gangster Disciples, Vice Lords, Simon City Royals, Latin Kings and the Aryan Brotherhood." US Attorney General Jeff Sessions is quoted as saying, "When law enforcement officers work together, we get results. ... The arrest of more than 270 people - including 90 gang members - throughout the Southern District of Mississippi is the result of collaboration between federal officers and our state and local partners." <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=013-41d&t=c> WDBD-TV <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=014-715&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018061401iacp&r=7968590-bc9c&l=015-152&t=c> Share to Twitter Jackson, MS (6/12) reports the teams of law enforcement "worked from Jackson to Biloxi, Meridian and Hattiesburg and back to Jackson, targeting violent fugitives, gang members and criminal offenders." Law enforcement also arrested eight individuals wanted for murder and 20 sex offenders.

NYPD Defends Use Of Gang Database.

Shea "said the NYPD was taking steps to make sure its list is current and to delete any wrongly included names from its database." He explained that the current database contains 17,441 names, which is "down from 34,000 after a four-year NYPD winnowing that reviewed every person listed." Shea is quoted as saying, "Our goal is to make sure that everyone who is in the database is actually a gang member. ... We are in the era of precision policing. Saturating the database with non-gang members limits its usefulness." He added that it would be "irresponsible for the department to not track members of gangs," and "noted...that 50% of last year's 789 city shootings involved a gang member as either the shooter or the victim."

Costa Rican Penitentiary Police Chief Pablo Bertozzi "said that criminal gangs have formed within the prisons and have made contact with Justice Ministry officials and others on the outside to have cell phones brought into the prison facilities." The inmates "can pay as much as $700 for each cell phone to smuggled into prison," and then can sell them for around $1,400 inside the prison. The business is "taking off, in part, because the prisoners or third parties cannot be criminally prosecuted for smuggling the phones in." Such actions in Costa Rica "are not legally considered crimes," and authorities "can only punish the inmates with minor sanctions, such as warnings or transfers, or they can confiscate the phones."

The lawyers for Lamar Brown "argued detectives in Charleston violated Brown's right to privacy by searching his phone without a warrant." The justices "ruled in a 4-1 decision that Brown abandoned his phone at the Charleston home and made no effort to find it," and the law "allows police to look at abandoned property without a court-issued warrant allowing a search."

Law Enforcement May Be Prevented From Accessing iPhones After Settings Update.

Apple has "long positioned the iPhone as a secure device that only its owner can open," which has "led to battles with law enforcement officials who want to get information off them, including a well-publicized showdown with the F.B.I. in 2016 after Apple refused to help open the locked iPhone of a mass killer." The Times says Apple is now "closing the technological loophole that let authorities hack into iPhones, angering police and other officials and reigniting a debate over whether the government has a right to get into the personal devices that are at the center of modern life." Apple "said it was planning an iPhone software update that would effectively disable the phone's charging and data port...an hour after the phone is locked." The Times explains that such a change "would hinder law enforcement officials, who have typically been opening locked iPhones by connecting another device running special software to the port, often days or even months after the smartphone was last unlocked." change, which would disable the Lightning port on the bottom of iPhones an hour after users lock their phones, is part of software updates rolling out in the fall." The Post says the move "could reignite debate over whether tech companies are doing enough to help authorities probing serious crimes." The Post mentions that FBI officials "in particular have complained about what they call the 'Going Dark Problem' as encryption becomes increasingly widespread and robust across a range of consumer devices and services." Apple claims the change was not intended to thwart law enforcement, but rather to "strengthe[n] the security protections in every Apple product to help customers defend against hackers, identity thieves and intrusions into their personal data." However, "some authorities almost certainly will see it as yet another barrier to carrying out their legally sanctioned investigations."

Shea "said the NYPD was taking steps to make sure its list is current and to delete any wrongly included names from its database." He explained that the current database contains 17,441 names, which is "down from 34,000 after a four-year NYPD winnowing that reviewed every person listed." Shea is quoted as saying, "Our goal is to make sure that everyone who is in the database is actually a gang member. ... We are in the era of precision policing. Saturating the database with non-gang members limits its usefulness." He added that it would be "irresponsible for the department to not track members of gangs," and "noted...that 50% of last year's 789 city shootings involved a gang member as either the shooter or the

The initiative was announced "in conjunction with a new case filed against Woodcliff Lake, New Jersey, over allegations it illegally denied zoning approval to an Orthodox Jewish congregation seeking to build a synagogue." The initiative "aims to help the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division bring more cases against towns and others who use zoning laws to block churches, mosques or synagogues from building, renting or expanding houses of worship."

Costa Rican Penitentiary Police Chief

Pablo Bertozzi "said that criminal gangs have formed within the prisons and have made contact with Justice Ministry officials and others on the outside to have cell phones brought into the prison facilities." The inmates "can pay as much as $700 for each cell phone to smuggled into prison," and then can sell them for around $1,400 inside the prison. The business is "taking off, in part, because the prisoners or third parties cannot be criminally prosecuted for smuggling the phones in." Such actions in Costa Rica "are not legally considered crimes," and authorities "can only punish the inmates with minor sanctions, such as warnings or transfers, or they can confiscate the phones."

The lawyers for Lamar Brown "argued detectives in Charleston violated Brown's right to privacy by searching his phone without a warrant." The justices "ruled in a 4-1 decision that Brown abandoned his phone at the Charleston home and made no effort to find it," and the law "allows police to look at abandoned property without a court-issued warrant allowing a search."

Ed Bridges "believes he was scanned by South Wales Police at a peaceful anti-arms protest and while doing Christmas shopping in the Welsh capital of Cardiff." Reuters says surveillance cameras "equipped with automated facial recognition software scan the faces of passersby, making unique biometric maps of their faces." The maps are then "compared and matched to other facial images on bespoke police databases." South Wales Police "said it was drawing up a response to Bridges' letter." The police issued a statement that said the "force has been very cognisant of concerns surrounding privacy and are confident that our approach is lawful and proportionate." The police force also "said in May it had achieved 2,000 positive matches with the technology and made 450 arrests through its use in the past nine months."

Sosa said, "The reason why we're doing this is that law enforcement gets called many times to houses of residents who have children with autism and other things like that. ... This would be so when police are called in case of an emergency, they know how to deal with them." The registry would give police "relevant information" on an individual, including if the person "has any problems communicating." 988-6b82&l=00c-78a&t=c> (6/25) reports that, following the death of a Milwaukee police officer, city officials want the public to know that they will still pursue fleeing vehicles. Police Chief Alfonso Morales said, "We're going to chase you." Drivers "have an obligation to pull over whether they have a license or not." If they "don't stop, police will seek felony charges from prosecutors for those who flee, he said." Officer Charles Irvine Jr. was "killed June 7 after the squad he was in crashed on the city's northwest side during a pursuit of a reckless driver," and his partner, Matthew Schulze, "was driving and also was injured in the rollover crash." The fleeing driver, Ladell Harrison, "has been charged with 11 felonies and was bound over for trial last week." Prosecutors "say Harrison had his 5-year-old son in the car when he reached speeds of nearly 100 mph."

cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

(6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post

(6/25, Feis) reports the "savagely execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

Police Chief Alfonso Morales said, "We're going to chase you." Drivers "have an obligation to pull over whether they have a license or not." If they "don't stop, police will seek felony charges from prosecutors for those who flee, he said." Officer Charles Irvine Jr. was "killed June 7 after the squad he was in crashed on the city's northwest side during a pursuit of a reckless driver," and his partner, Matthew Schulze, "was driving and also was injured in the rollover crash." The fleeing driver, Ladell Harrison, "has been charged with 11 felonies and was bound over for trial last week." Prosecutors "say Harrison had his 5-year-old son in the car when he reached speeds of nearly 100 mph."

US Supreme Court Allows Lawsuit Against Officer For Use Of Force.

The justices "without comment or dissent denied the county's appeal seeking immunity for the officer," which "clears the way for the parents' wrongful-death suit to go before a jury." The Times adds that, in recent years, the Supreme Court has "shielded law enforcement officers from similar lawsuits alleging excessive force by extending a rule adopted in the 1980s that gave government officials 'qualified immunity' from being sued over constitutional violations unless they did something that the court already had clearly defined as illegal and unconstitutional."

Nevada Receives Justice Department Grant To Reimburse Overtime Costs Following Mass Shooting.

Lucki testified in Regina at the national inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women. Lucki "said the RCMP have made changes to the cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

According to the Office of National Drug Control Policy, "potential cocaine production shot up 19 percent - from 772 metric tons in 2016 to 921 tons in 2017." ONDCP Director Jim Carroll said, "There's no sugar-coating things here - this is just not where we want cocaine production to be."

Albanian Police Seize 3.4 Million Euros In Drug Profits From Vehicle.

Reuters Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/25) reports Albanian police "seized 3.4 million euros ($3.97 million) in cash hidden in two cars on a trailer that arrived in the port of Durres from Belgium, a stash Albania's opposition leader said was linked to drug gangsters." Police "said on Monday they were alerted last week about the number plate of a trailer with the undeclared cash that would arrive at the weekend on an Adriatic ferry in Durres." The national police added that they have "credible data showing the shipment had been ordered by two citizens currently at large that we are looking for."

New Zealand Police Make Arrests In Operation Targeting Meth.

The New Zealand Herald Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/26) reports, "Police believe Operation Ghost - which concluded on Thursday with the arrest of 11 men and 13 women, ranging in age from 18 to 57 - put a significant dent in methamphetamine dealing in Northland." The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

Fox News Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/25, Feis) reports the "savage execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

908-6097&l=00c-78a&t=c> (6/25) reports that, following the death of a Milwaukee police officer, city officials want the public to know that they will still pursue fleeing vehicles. Police Chief Alfonso Morales said, "We're going to chase you." Drivers "have an obligation to pull over whether they have a license or not." If they "don't stop, police will seek felony charges from prosecutors for those who flee, he said." Officer Charles Irvine Jr. was "killed June 7 after the squad he was in crashed on the city's northwest side during a pursuit of a reckless driver," and his partner, Matthew Schulze, "was driving and also was injured in the rollover crash." The fleeing driver, Ladell Harrison, "has been charged with 11 felonies and was bound over for trial last week." Prosecutors "say Harrison had his 5-year-old son in the car when he reached speeds of nearly 100 mph."

The justices "without comment or dissent denied the county's appeal seeking immunity for the officer," which "clears the way for the parents' wrongful-death suit to go before a jury." The Times adds that, in recent years, the Supreme Court has "shielded law enforcement officers from similar lawsuits alleging excessive force by extending a rule adopted in the 1980s that gave government officials 'qualified immunity' from being sued over constitutional violations unless they did something that the court already had clearly defined as illegal and unconstitutional."

Lucki testified in Regina at the national inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women. Lucki "said the RCMP have made changes to the cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

(6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post

(6/25, Feis) reports the "savagely execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

The Times adds that, in recent years, the Supreme Court has "shielded law enforcement officers from similar lawsuits alleging excessive force by extending a rule adopted in the 1980s that gave government officials 'qualified immunity' from being sued over constitutional violations unless they did something that the court already had clearly defined as illegal and unconstitutional."

Lucki testified in Regina at the national inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women. Lucki "said the RCMP have made changes to the cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

According to the Office of National Drug Control Policy, "potential cocaine production shot up 19 percent - from 772 metric tons in 2016 to 921 tons in 2017." ONDCP Director Jim Carroll said, "There's no sugar-coating things here - this is just not where we want cocaine production to be."

Albanian Police Seize 3.4 Million Euros In Drug Profits From Vehicle.

Police "said on Monday they were alerted last week about the number plate of a trailer with the undeclared cash that would arrive at the weekend on an Adriatic ferry in Durres." The national police added that they have "credible data showing the shipment had been ordered by two citizens currently at large that we are looking for."

New Zealand Police Make Arrests In Operation Targeting Meth.

The New Zealand Herald Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/26) reports, "Police believe Operation Ghost - which concluded on Thursday with the arrest of 11 men and 13 women, ranging in age from 18 to 57 - put a significant dent in methamphetamine dealing in Northland." The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

436-69eb&l=00c-78a&t=c> (6/25) reports that, following the death of a Milwaukee police officer, city officials want the public to know that they will still pursue fleeing vehicles. Police Chief Alfonso Morales said, "We're going to chase you." Drivers "have an obligation to pull over whether they have a license or not." If they "don't stop, police will seek felony charges from prosecutors for those who flee, he said." Officer Charles Irvine Jr. was "killed June 7 after the squad he was in crashed on the city's northwest side during a pursuit of a reckless driver," and his partner, Matthew Schulze, "was driving and also was injured in the rollover crash." The fleeing driver, Ladell Harrison, "has been charged with 11 felonies and was bound over for trial last week." Prosecutors "say Harrison had his 5-year-old son in the car when he reached speeds of nearly 100 mph."

cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

(6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post

(6/25, Feis) reports the "savagely execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

Lucki testified in Regina at the national inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women. Lucki "said the RCMP have made changes to the cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

Police "said on Monday they were alerted last week about the number plate of a trailer with the undeclared cash that would arrive at the weekend on an Adriatic ferry in Durres." The national police added that they have "credible data showing the shipment had been ordered by two citizens currently at large that we are looking for."

New Zealand Police Make Arrests In Operation Targeting Meth.

The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/25, Feis) reports the "savage execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

(6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post

(6/25, Feis) reports the "savagely execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

590-2779&l=00c-78a&t=c> (6/25) reports that, following the death of a Milwaukee police officer, city officials want the public to know that they will still pursue fleeing vehicles. Police Chief Alfonso Morales said, "We're going to chase you." Drivers "have an obligation to pull over whether they have a license or not." If they "don't stop, police will seek felony charges from prosecutors for those who flee, he said." Officer Charles Irvine Jr. was "killed June 7 after the squad he was in crashed on the city's northwest side during a pursuit of a reckless driver," and his partner, Matthew Schulze, "was driving and also was injured in the rollover crash." The fleeing driver, Ladell Harrison, "has been charged with 11 felonies and was bound over for trial last week." Prosecutors "say Harrison had his 5-year-old son in the car when he reached speeds of nearly 100 mph."

590-2779&l=00f-baf&t=c> (6/25, Savage) reports the US Supreme Court on Monday "allowed parents to press ahead with a lawsuit against a Sonoma County sheriff's deputy who shot and killed their 13-year-old son as he walked on a sidewalk carrying a plastic pellet gun." The justices "without comment or dissent denied the county's appeal seeking immunity for the officer," which "clears the way for the parents' wrongful-death suit to go before a jury." The Times adds that, in recent years, the Supreme Court has "shielded law enforcement officers from similar lawsuits alleging excessive force by extending a rule adopted in the 1980s that gave government officials 'qualified immunity' from being sued over constitutional violations unless they did something that the court already had clearly defined as illegal and unconstitutional."

590-2779&l=018-eal&t=c> (6/25) reports RCMP Commissioner Brenda Lucki "apologized to the families of missing and murdered Indigenous women Monday while pledging improved relations with aboriginal communities." Lucki testified in Regina at the national inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women. Lucki "said the RCMP have made changes to the cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

(6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post

(6/25, Feis) reports the "savagely execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

Police Chief Alfonso Morales said, "We're going to chase you." Drivers "have an obligation to pull over whether they have a license or not." If they "don't stop, police will seek felony charges from prosecutors for those who flee, he said." Officer Charles Irvine Jr. was "killed June 7 after the squad he was in crashed on the city's northwest side during a pursuit of a reckless driver," and his partner, Matthew Schulze, "was driving and also was injured in the rollover crash." The fleeing driver, Ladell Harrison, "has been charged with 11 felonies and was bound over for trial last week." Prosecutors "say Harrison had his 5-year-old son in the car when he reached speeds of nearly 100 mph."

US Supreme Court Allows Lawsuit Against Officer For Use Of Force.

The justices "without comment or dissent denied the county's appeal seeking immunity for the officer," which "clears the way for the parents' wrongful-death suit to go before a jury." The Times adds that, in recent years, the Supreme Court has "shielded law enforcement officers from similar lawsuits alleging excessive force by extending a rule adopted in the 1980s that gave government officials 'qualified immunity' from being sued over constitutional violations unless they did something that the court already had clearly defined as illegal and unconstitutional."

Nevada Receives Justice Department Grant To Reimburse Overtime Costs Following Mass Shooting.

Lucki testified in Regina at the national inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women. Lucki "said the RCMP have made changes to the cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

According to the Office of National Drug Control Policy, "potential cocaine production shot up 19 percent - from 772 metric tons in 2016 to 921 tons in 2017." ONDCP Director Jim Carroll said, "There's no sugar-coating things here - this is just not where we want cocaine production to be."

Albanian Police Seize 3.4 Million Euros In Drug Profits From Vehicle.

Police "said on Monday they were alerted last week about the number plate of a trailer with the undeclared cash that would arrive at the weekend on an Adriatic ferry in Durres." The national police added that they have "credible data showing the shipment had been ordered by two citizens currently at large that we are looking for."

New Zealand Police Make Arrests In Operation Targeting Meth.

The New Zealand Herald Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/26) reports, "Police believe Operation Ghost - which concluded on Thursday with the arrest of 11 men and 13 women, ranging in age from 18 to 57 - put a significant dent in methamphetamine dealing in Northland." The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

Fox News Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/25, Feis) reports the "savage execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

Lucki testified in Regina at the national inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women. Lucki "said the RCMP have made changes to the cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

According to the Office of National Drug Control Policy, "potential cocaine production shot up 19 percent - from 772 metric tons in 2016 to 921 tons in 2017." ONDCP Director Jim Carroll said, "There's no sugar-coating things here - this is just not where we want cocaine production to be."

Albanian Police Seize 3.4 Million Euros In Drug Profits From Vehicle.

Police "said on Monday they were alerted last week about the number plate of a trailer with the undeclared cash that would arrive at the weekend on an Adriatic ferry in Durres." The national police added that they have "credible data showing the shipment had been ordered by two citizens currently at large that we are looking for."

New Zealand Police Make Arrests In Operation Targeting Meth.

The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

284-55e5&l=00c-78a&t=c> (6/25) reports that, following the death of a Milwaukee police officer, city officials want the public to know that they will still pursue fleeing vehicles. Police Chief Alfonso Morales said, "We're going to chase you." Drivers "have an obligation to pull over whether they have a license or not." If they "don't stop, police will seek felony charges from prosecutors for those who flee, he said." Officer Charles Irvine Jr. was "killed June 7 after the squad he was in crashed on the city's northwest side during a pursuit of a reckless driver," and his partner, Matthew Schulze, "was driving and also was injured in the rollover crash." The fleeing driver, Ladell Harrison, "has been charged with 11 felonies and was bound over for trial last week." Prosecutors "say Harrison had his 5-year-old son in the car when he reached speeds of nearly 100 mph."

The justices "without comment or dissent denied the county's appeal seeking immunity for the officer," which "clears the way for the parents' wrongful-death suit to go before a jury." The Times adds that, in recent years, the Supreme Court has "shielded law enforcement officers from similar lawsuits alleging excessive force by extending a rule adopted in the 1980s that gave government officials 'qualified immunity' from being sued over constitutional violations unless they did something that the court already had clearly defined as illegal and unconstitutional."

The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

(6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post

(6/25, Feis) reports the "savagely execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

Police Chief Alfonso Morales said, "We're going to chase you." Drivers "have an obligation to pull over whether they have a license or not." If they "don't stop, police will seek felony charges from prosecutors for those who flee, he said." Officer Charles Irvine Jr. was "killed June 7 after the squad he was in crashed on the city's northwest side during a pursuit of a reckless driver," and his partner, Matthew Schulze, "was driving and also was injured in the rollover crash." The fleeing driver, Ladell Harrison, "has been charged with 11 felonies and was bound over for trial last week." Prosecutors "say Harrison had his 5-year-old son in the car when he reached speeds of nearly 100 mph."

US Supreme Court Allows Lawsuit Against Officer For Use Of Force.

The justices "without comment or dissent denied the county's appeal seeking immunity for the officer," which "clears the way for the parents' wrongful-death suit to go before a jury." The Times adds that, in recent years, the Supreme Court has "shielded law enforcement officers from similar lawsuits alleging excessive force by extending a rule adopted in the 1980s that gave government officials 'qualified immunity' from being sued over constitutional violations unless they did something that the court already had clearly defined as illegal and unconstitutional."

Nevada Receives Justice Department Grant To Reimburse Overtime Costs Following Mass Shooting.

Lucki testified in Regina at the national inquiry into missing and murdered Indigenous women. Lucki "said the RCMP have made changes to the cadet training curriculum to include more Indigenous material." One of the added training modules "includes a scenario involving an 18-year-old Indigenous girl whose backstory is constructed from testimony heard at the inquiry." Lucki "said that she wants the cadets to get exposure to those situations." Another part of the training is an aboriginal and First Nations awareness course that is "mandatory for cadets to take within two years." Commissioner Lucki "added the RCMP has to work to have better trust with the communities they serve," which "includes being more inclusive and more tolerant."

Police "said on Monday they were alerted last week about the number plate of a trailer with the undeclared cash that would arrive at the weekend on an Adriatic ferry in Durres." The national police added that they have "credible data showing the shipment had been ordered by two citizens currently at large that we are looking for."

New Zealand Police Make Arrests In Operation Targeting Meth.

The New Zealand Herald Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/26) reports, "Police believe Operation Ghost - which concluded on Thursday with the arrest of 11 men and 13 women, ranging in age from 18 to 57 - put a significant dent in methamphetamine dealing in Northland." The arrests, and seizures of drugs, money, firearms, and stolen property, "concluded an eight-month investigation targeting meth dealers, with dozens of search warrants executed over three days last week, including in Kawakawa, Moerewa, Kaikohe, Kaitaia and Awanui, with more expected." Whangarei Area Commander Inspector Justin Rogers is quoted as saying, "This is an outstanding result. These people were actually dealing in misery in our community, and it will put a significant dent in those people." Rogers added that drug problems are a "community issue," and the police "will not be able to arrest ourselves out of this problem." He said that police will also "provide assistance and referrals to those who are addicted to methamphetamine and need help."

Trinitarios Street Gang Blamed For "Savage" Machete Murder Of New York Teenager.

Fox News Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/24) reports, "Multiple people have been arrested in connection with the 'brutal' murder of a 15-year-old boy in New York City, the New York Police Department said Sunday." Fox News cites police sources that said that "five people were arrested in the slaying of Lesandro 'Junior' Guzman-Feliz in the Bronx." The attack allegedly stemmed from a case of "mistaken identity," as members of the Trinitarios gang "reportedly apologized to Guzman-Feliz's family and said, 'It wasn't supposed to be him.'" Surveillance footage "published by the Post showed Guzman-Feliz being dragged from the store by his attackers, who were seen stabbing the teen repeatedly with a machete." NYPD Chief Terence Monahan "described Guzman-Feliz's murder as 'among the most brutal crimes I've seen in my 36yr career.'" The New York Post Share to Facebook Share to Twitter (6/25, Feis) reports the "savage execution" was "business as usual" for the "bloodthirsty Trinitarios street gang." The Post says the "primarily Dominican gang was born out of the violence of Rikers Island, founded behind its bars in 1992 by three inmates." The gang is "concentrated in the Bronx and upper Manhattan," and "recruit[s] heavily in the hardscrabble hallways of city public high schools." They seek to "maintain a young membership, averaging in the teens or early 20s, police sources said."

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.."

The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The Hill

US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.." The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

nation's premier law enforcement agencies." Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies – even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

FBI Offers Insights Into "Pre-Attack Behaviors" Of Mass Shooters.

The researchers found that "hate crime totals for the 10 largest [US] cities rose for four straight years to the highest level in a decade." In 2017, "data show that hate crimes rose 12 percent over 2016 levels in 38 of the largest cities." There were "1,038 hate crimes in the nation's 10 largest cities - the highest in more than a decade."

(6/26, Jordan) reports, "A sergeant with the Harris County Sheriff's Office was hospitalized Tuesday after coming in contact with a fentanyl-laced paper flyer, authorities said." The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.." The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

(6/26, Barrett) reports that female agents at the FBI, DEA, ATF and Marshals Service are "still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies." Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The Hill

US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

According to the Times, investigators "seized opioids, cocaine and other drugs, more than 100 guns and assault rifles, a grenade launcher and five cars in a broad federal inquiry in which prosecutors opened more than 90 cases." Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein said in a statement, "Criminals who think that they are safe on the dark net are wrong. We can expose their networks."

The researchers found that "hate crime totals for the 10 largest [US] cities rose for four straight years to the highest level in a decade." In 2017, "data show that hate crimes rose 12 percent over 2016 levels in 38 of the largest cities." There were "1,038 hate crimes in the nation's 10 largest cities - the highest in more than a decade."

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.." The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

Inspector General Report: Women Underrepresented In Key Jobs At US Law Enforcement Agencies.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=007-1c6&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=008-cee&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=009-8c9&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Barrett) reports that female agents at the FBI, DEA, ATF and Marshals Service are "still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies." Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies – even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The review "found that investigators were told on multiple occasions that there is a 'glass ceiling' for the women" at the agencies.

The Wall Street Journal <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=00d-61d&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=00e-b22&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=00f-a76&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Gurman, Subscription Publication) reports that an FBI official wrote in the agency's response to the review, "We agree it is important, in order to address the concerns and negative perceptions related to gender equity...for the FBI to identify and address any barriers for women in hiring and promotion activities."

US Senators Urge President To Back Criminal Justice Reform Bill.

US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

FBI Offers Insights Into "Pre-Attack Behaviors" Of Mass Shooters.

The hearing in front of the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence "came nearly a month after Gov. Greg Abbott urged state lawmakers to look into red-flag laws as part of his 43-page school and firearm safety plan." Several individuals that testified "argued that current protective order laws are insufficient to protect families in such cases." Harris County District Judge Judy Wayne "said lawmakers should consider creating a government-supervised place for gun surrender."

US To Provide Up To $110 Million For Tribal Crime Victims.

The AP <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=01c-29d&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=01d-0bf&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8737284-b7cf&l=01e-9c7&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26) reports US Federal officials "said Tuesday they plan to make up to $110 million available to tribes seeking to support victims of domestic violence, assault, drug trafficking and other crimes amid an opioid crisis that has hit tribal communities especially hard." US figures "show a fivefold increase in overdose deaths between 1999 and 2015 among Native Americans - the largest increase for any group in that time span," and "more than half of Native American women in a National Institute of Justice survey released two years ago said they had been victims of sexual and domestic violence." Justice Department director of opioid enforcement and prevention Mary Daly called the numbers "staggering," and added that "Tribes and other communities across the country are suffering."

The researchers found that "hate crime totals for the 10 largest [US] cities rose for four straight years to the highest level in a decade." In 2017, "data show that hate crimes rose 12 percent over 2016 levels in 38 of the largest cities." There were "1,038 hate crimes in the nation's 10 largest cities - the highest in more than a decade."

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.."

The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies – even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The Hill support on Capitol Hill for criminal justice reform. US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.." The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

Inspector General Report: Women Underrepresented In Key Jobs At US Law Enforcement Agencies.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7972275-8242&l=007-1c6&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7972275-8242&l=008-cee&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7972275-8242&l=009-8c9&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Barrett) reports that female agents at the FBI, DEA, ATF and Marshals Service are "still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies." Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies – even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The review "found that investigators were told on multiple occasions that there is a 'glass ceiling' for the women" at the agencies.

The Wall Street Journal <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7972275-8242&l=00d-61d&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7972275-8242&l=00e-b22&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7972275-8242&l=00f-a76&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Gurman, Subscription Publication) reports that an FBI official wrote in the agency's response to the review, "We agree it is important, in order to address the concerns and negative perceptions related to gender equity...for the FBI to identify and address any barriers for women in hiring and promotion activities."

US Senators Urge President To Back Criminal Justice Reform Bill.

US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

FBI Offers Insights Into "Pre-Attack Behaviors" Of Mass Shooters.

The hearing in front of the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence "came nearly a month after Gov. Greg Abbott urged state lawmakers to look into red-flag laws as part of his 43-page school and firearm safety plan." Several individuals that testified "argued that current protective order laws are insufficient to protect families in such cases." Harris County District Judge Judy Wayne "said lawmakers should consider creating a government-supervised place for gun surrender."

The researchers found that "hate crime totals for the 10 largest [US] cities rose for four straight years to the highest level in a decade." In 2017, "data show that hate crimes rose 12 percent over 2016 levels in 38 of the largest cities." There were "1,038 hate crimes in the nation's 10 largest cities - the highest in more than a decade."

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.."

The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The Hill

US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

The researchers found that "hate crime totals for the 10 largest [US] cities rose for four straight years to the highest level in a decade." In 2017, "data show that hate crimes rose 12 percent over 2016 levels in 38 of the largest cities." There were "1,038 hate crimes in

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.." The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

nation's premier law enforcement agencies." Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies – even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The review "found that investigators were told on multiple occasions that there is a 'glass ceiling' for the women" at the agencies.

The Wall Street Journal <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8539988-a078&l=00d-61d&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8539988-a078&l=00e-b22&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=8539988-a078&l=00f-a76&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Gurman, Subscription Publication) reports that an FBI official wrote in the agency's response to the review, "We agree it is important, in order to address the concerns and negative perceptions related to gender equity...for the FBI to identify and address any barriers for women in hiring and promotion activities."

US Senators Urge President To Back Criminal Justice Reform Bill.

US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

FBI Offers Insights Into "Pre-Attack Behaviors" Of Mass Shooters.

The hearing in front of the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence "came nearly a month after Gov. Greg Abbott urged state lawmakers to look into red-flag laws as part of his 43-page school and firearm safety plan." Several individuals that testified "argued that current protective order laws are insufficient to protect families in such cases." Harris County District Judge Judy Wayne "said lawmakers should consider creating a government-supervised place for gun surrender."

US To Provide Up To $110 Million For Tribal Crime Victims.

(6/26, Jordan) reports, "A sergeant with the Harris County Sheriff's Office was hospitalized Tuesday after coming in contact with a fentanyl-laced paper flyer, authorities said." The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.." The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

(6/26, Barrett) reports that female agents at the FBI, DEA, ATF and Marshals Service are "still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies." Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The Hill

US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

Wednesday they had received multiple bomb threats in the World Cup host city of Rostov-on-Don, causing bars and restaurants to be evacuated across the city." The local police released a statement that said they had "received a series of phone calls about explosives planted at locations in Rostov-on-Don," and police "made all the necessary checks and no dangerous objects were found." Reuters adds that Russia "was subject to a wave of hoax bomb threats last summer, causing disruption at businesses and public buildings in towns and cities across the

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.."

The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The Hill

US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.." The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

Inspector General Report: Women Underrepresented In Key Jobs At US Law Enforcement Agencies.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=007-1c6&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=008-cee&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=009-8c9&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Barrett) reports that female agents at the FBI, DEA, ATF and Marshals Service are "still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies." Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The Hill <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=00a-342&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=00b-9a7&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=00c-3e8&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26) reports that the inspector general "conducted more than 130 individual interviews and 57 focus groups for its report." The review "found that investigators were told on multiple occasions that there is a 'glass ceiling' for the women" at the agencies.

The Wall Street Journal <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=00d-61d&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=00e-b22&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=00f-a76&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Gurman, Subscription Publication) reports that an FBI official wrote in the agency's response to the review, "We agree it is important, in order to address the concerns and negative perceptions related to gender equity...for the FBI to identify and address any barriers for women in hiring and promotion activities."

US Senators Urge President To Back Criminal Justice Reform Bill.

The Washington Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=010-9d0&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=011-7e0&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=012-b91&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Swoyer) reports that there is bipartisan support on Capitol Hill for criminal justice reform. US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

FBI Offers Insights Into "Pre-Attack Behaviors" Of Mass Shooters.

The Springfield (MA) Republican <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=013-03b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=014-f01&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=015-160&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26) reports that a new FBI release "offers insights into the behaviors and backgrounds of gunmen in past mass shootings, with the hope of finding ways to prevent future massacres." The report "is authored by James Silver, an assistant professor of criminal justice at Worcester State University, and two FBI agents, Andres Simons and Sarah Craun, of the Behavioral Analysis Unit." The report says that, by "articulating the concrete, observable pre-attack behaviors of many active shooters, the FBI hopes to make these warning signs more visible and easily identifiable."

US Border Agents Arrest More Than 5,000 With Criminal Records This Year.

The Daily Mail (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=016-0da&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=017-47b&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=018-dce&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, White) reports, "Hundreds of gang members and more than 5,000 convicted criminals were arrested trying to sneak back into the U.S. in just eight months," and "they included 505 confirmed members of violent groups MS-13, 18th Street gang, and the Mexican Mafia hoping to rejoin their organizations." The Daily Mail adds, "Last week six violent criminals were detained for deportation after crossing the border, including a convicted murder and pedophile." Border Patrol "was able to identify the criminals and gang members by searching CBP and FBI biometric databases."

Texas Lawmakers Hear Testimony On Possible Red-Flag Gun Law.

The Houston Chronicle <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=019-27f&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=01a-9d3&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=01b-adc&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/25, Marfin) reports, "Experts described to Texas lawmakers Monday how current laws that allow the authorities to remove weapons from dangerous people don't work well, are rarely applied and need improvement." The hearing in front of the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence "came nearly a month after Gov. Greg Abbott urged state lawmakers to look into red-flag laws as part of his 43-page school and firearm safety plan." Several individuals that testified "argued that current protective order laws are insufficient to protect families in such cases." Harris County District Judge Judy Wayne "said lawmakers should consider creating a government-supervised place for gun surrender."

US To Provide Up To $110 Million For Tribal Crime Victims.

Dozens Charged With Selling Drugs On Dark Web.

The New York Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=029-be0&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=02a-379&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7968590-9d15&l=02b-05f&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Benner, Frenkel, Subscription Publication) reports the Justice Department on Tuesday announced that "more than 35 people were charged with selling drugs on the so-called dark web," marking "the first time that federal prosecutors made the sellers of illegal goods their primary focus rather than the operators of illicit online marketplaces." According to the Times, investigators "seized opioids, cocaine and other drugs, more than 100 guns and assault rifles, a grenade launcher and five cars in a broad federal inquiry in which prosecutors opened more than 90 cases." Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein said in a statement, "Criminals who think that they are safe on the dark net are wrong. We can expose their networks."

Beware when you're shopping for a car online. Thieves are advertising cars that they don't own, and once you pay, they run off with your money." Correspondent Miguel Almaguer said, "With more than 30,000 complaints and $54 million stolen, the thieves are posting cars with verifiable VIN numbers, but once cash is wired, the thief is gone. Even websites like this fake one for Edmunds.com is easy to mistake for the real one."

New Academic Data Shows US Hate Crimes Continued Rising In 2017.

The researchers found that "hate crime totals for the 10 largest [US] cities rose for four straight years to the highest level in a decade." In 2017, "data show that hate crimes rose 12 percent over 2016 levels in 38 of the largest cities." There were "1,038 hate crimes in the nation's 10 largest cities - the highest in more than a decade."

Texas Officer Hospitalized After Coming Into Contact With Fentanyl-Laced Flyer.

The Houston Chronicle <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=004-5ec&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=005-348&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=006-364&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Jordan) reports, "A sergeant with the Harris County Sheriff's Office was hospitalized Tuesday after coming in contact with a fentanyl-laced paper flyer, authorities said." The flyer "was one of several placed on nearly a dozen sheriff's office vehicles at HCSO's recruitment and criminal investigations center at 601 Lockwood Drive in east Houston, according to Harris County Sheriff Ed Gonzalez.." The hospitalized sergeant "came across the flyer on her windshield Tuesday afternoon as she left work, Gonzalez said." After touching the flyer, she "started to feel light-headed and showed other fentanyl-related symptoms." The sergeant was "rushed to the hospital and is expected to survive as authorities investigate the flyers' origination."

Inspector General Report: Women Underrepresented In Key Jobs At US Law Enforcement Agencies.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=007-1c6&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=008-cee&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=009-8c9&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Barrett) reports that female agents at the FBI, DEA, ATF and Marshals Service are "still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies." Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday "detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement." For example, in 2016, "women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce." The numbers "vary by agency." At the FBI, "about 1 in 5 special agents are women." At the 29 largest "FBI field offices, seven were led by women but only in two of the years studied." The Hill <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=00a-342&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=00b-9a7&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=00c-3e8&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26) reports that the inspector general "conducted more than 130 individual interviews and 57 focus groups for its report." The review "found that investigators were told on multiple occasions that there is a 'glass ceiling' for the women" at the agencies.

The Wall Street Journal <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=00d-61d&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=00e-b22&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=00f-a76&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Gurman, Subscription Publication) reports that an FBI official wrote in the agency's response to the review, "We agree it is important, in order to address the concerns and negative perceptions related to gender equity...for the FBI to identify and address any barriers for women in hiring and promotion activities."

US Senators Urge President To Back Criminal Justice Reform Bill.

The Washington Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=010-9d0&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=011-7e0&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=012-b91&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26, Swoyer) reports that there is bipartisan support on Capitol Hill for criminal justice reform. US Senate Judiciary Chairman Chuck Grassley and Senate Minority Whip Dick Durbin, are hoping to win the President Donald Trump's support for "their bipartisan legislation to reform prisons and alter mandatory prison sentencing." The measure "would reduce mandatory minimum sentences for low level, nonviolent offenders and would also include programs to help low-risk inmates return to the community." In addition, the legislation would give judges "discretion to lower sentences if the defendants cooperate with police during an investigation." The Times adds that the bill does "implement mandatory sentences for terrorism, domestic violence crimes and offenses related to the opioid crisis."

FBI Offers Insights Into "Pre-Attack Behaviors" Of Mass Shooters.

The Springfield (MA) Republican <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=013-03b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=014-f01&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=015-160&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/26) reports that a new FBI release "offers insights into the behaviors and backgrounds of gunmen in past mass shootings, with the hope of finding ways to prevent future massacres." The report "is authored by James Silver, an assistant professor of criminal justice at Worcester State University, and two FBI agents, Andres Simons and Sarah Craun, of the Behavioral Analysis Unit." The report says that, by "articulating the concrete, observable pre-attack behaviors of many active shooters, the FBI hopes to make these warning signs more visible and easily identifiable."

US Border Agents Arrest More Than 5,000 With Criminal Records This Year.

The Daily Mail adds, "Last week six violent criminals were detained for deportation after crossing the border, including a convicted murder and pedophile." Border Patrol "was able to identify the criminals and gang members by searching CBP and FBI biometric databases."

Texas Lawmakers Hear Testimony On Possible Red-Flag Gun Law.

The Houston Chronicle <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=019-27f&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=01a-9d3&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018062701iacp&r=7963908-6af6&l=01b-adc&t=c> Share to Twitter (6/25, Marfin) reports, "Experts described to Texas lawmakers Monday how current laws that allow the authorities to remove weapons from dangerous people don't work well, are rarely applied and need improvement." The hearing in front of the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence "came nearly a month after Gov. Greg Abbott urged state lawmakers to look into red-flag laws as part of his 43-page school and firearm safety plan." Several individuals that testified "argued that current protective order laws are insufficient to protect families in such cases." Harris County District Judge Judy Wayne "said lawmakers should consider creating a government-supervised place for gun surrender."

US To Provide Up To $110 Million For Tribal Crime Victims.

Beware when you're shopping for a car online. Thieves are advertising cars that they don't own, and once you pay, they run off with your money." Correspondent Miguel Almaguer said, "With more than 30,000 complaints and $54 million stolen, the thieves are posting cars with verifiable VIN numbers, but once cash is wired, the thief is gone. Even websites like this fake one for Edmunds.com is easy to mistake for the real one."

New Academic Data Shows US Hate Crimes Continued Rising In 2017.

The researchers found that "hate crime totals for the 10 largest [US] cities rose for four straight years to the highest level in a decade." In 2017, "data show that hate crimes rose 12 percent over 2016 levels in 38 of the largest cities." There were "1,038 hate crimes in the nation's 10 largest cities - the highest in more than a decade."

COMMUNITY POLICING

The New Republic: Peace officers

On a spring morning last year, in the Keith Creek neighborhood of Rockford, Illinois, Eric Thurmond stopped his patrol car on a street shrouded by trees and veined with cracks. Thurmond, a rookie on the Rockford police force, had been shown the statistics documenting the neighborhood's decline—burglaries, shootings, home invasions. It was not a desirable place to live. But he would be moving there in less than two weeks. He was part of Rockford's newest experiment in policing—a program designed to help cops put down roots in high-crime sections of the city. The police department had procured a house for him. He would be living there rent-free for a minimum of three years, with his only mission to serve the community-to be a good neighbor.

GUN REGULATIONS

Texas Monthly: Art Acevedo on guns and politics

On May 18 a student walked into Santa Fe High School with a shotgun and a handgun and proceeded to kill ten people and wound thirteen others before he was arrested. In the wake of the tragedy, Houston police chief Art Acevedo, whose department was one of several agencies to respond to the scene, has publicly spoken out about a lack of effort to control gun violence and expressed frustration with what he sees as policymakers' reluctance to successfully address the issue.

TECHNOLOGY

NPR: How data analysis is driving policing

Police have always relied on data - whether push pins tracking crimes on a map, mug shot cards, or intelligence files on repeat offenders. The problem with all that information is that it has traditionally been slow and hard to use. "I would have to log into 19 different databases," says Los Angeles Police Department Deputy Chief Dennis Kato. Now he can see all that information on one screen. Kato has been instrumental in LAPD's rollout of a data search program sold by a company called Palantir. While Palantir is somewhat controversial because of its secrecy and reliance on national security contracts, its product for police isn't that mysterious. Like Palantir, other companies make similar "relational database" tools, which combine data from different sources to get a bigger picture quickly.

HIRING

Memphis Commercial Appeal: Memphis Police Department loosens college requirement for recruits

To qualify for the Memphis Police Department, recruits must pass a wide range of tests, from a background check to hustling through a timed obstacle course. And they must complete weeks of training at the police academy. But one thing has changed: they no longer need college classes, at least not at first.

TECHNOLOGY

NPR: Orlando Police end test of Amazon's real-time facial 'Rekognition' system

The city of Orlando, Fla., says it has ended a pilot program in which its police force used Amazon's real-time facial recognition - a system called "Rekognition" that had triggered complaints from rights and privacy groups when its use was revealed earlier this year.

WOMEN IN POLICING

Washington Post: Women underrepresented in key jobs at FBI, DEA, ATF and Marshals Service

Female FBI agents, DEA agents, ATF agents and deputy marshals are still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies. Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement. In 2016, women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce.

IMMIGRATION

NPR: Customs and border agency halts many 'zero tolerance' detentions, citing workload

Despite pressure from President Trump for the U.S. to arrest and prosecute anyone caught crossing the border illegally, U.S. Customs and Border Protection says its agents will temporarily suspend the practice of detaining adults who arrive with children - something that had been a tenet of Trump's "zero tolerance" policy. CBP agents will no longer refer migrant parents and children for prosecution when they're caught at the U.S. southern border, Commissioner Kevin McAleenan said, telling reporters that the system - which was widely criticized for separating families, until Trump eased his policy somewhat last week - hasn't worked out.

---

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Santa Fe New Mexican: Webber picks in-house candidate as Santa Fe police chief

The Webber administration has hired Andrew Padilla as chief of the Santa Fe Police Department. Padilla, who has helped to lead the department since Patrick Gallagher resigned last fall, emerged from a field of three finalists.

---

JUVENILES

Tampa Bay Times: Study: New law should mean more Florida kids in diversion programs

Now that state law requires every judicial circuit in Florida to have an arrest diversion program for juveniles accused of low-level crimes, the next step is to ensure law enforcement agencies have policies that lean toward diversion and create robust training programs. That's according to a study released today aiming to be a how-to-guide for jurisdictions forming new programs or revamping their existing ones under the new law, which goes into effect July 1.

CNN: Cocaine and heroin supplies hit 'record highs' globally

Cocaine supplies and heroin seizures have hit a record high, a new report finds. Supplies of cocaine in 2016 and opium from 2016 to 2017 hit their highest ever recorded levels, according to the 2018 World Drug report released by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) on Tuesday. Non-medical use of prescription drugs, such as fentanyl, are also becoming a major threat to public health, increasingly contributing to overdose deaths, particularly in the United States.

ELECTRONIC CONTROL WEAPONS

San Francisco Chronicle: SF supervisors hold back funding for police Tasers, citing concern over true costs

San Francisco police officers will likely have to wait at least another year to be equipped with Tasers, following a divided vote by city lawmakers Monday to cut funding for the devices. Despite November's decision by the city's Police Commission authorizing the Police Department to use the electronic stun guns, the Board of Supervisors' Budget and Finance Committee voted 3-2 to scrap Mayor Mark Farrell's budget proposal to spend $2 million in the coming fiscal year to buy the devices.

On May 18 a student walked into Santa Fe High School with a shotgun and a handgun and proceeded to kill ten people and wound thirteen others before he was arrested. In the wake of the tragedy, Houston police chief Art Acevedo, whose department was one of several agencies to respond to the scene, has publicly spoken out about a lack of effort to control gun violence and expressed frustration with what he sees as policymakers' reluctance to successfully address the issue.

Police have always relied on data - whether push pins tracking crimes on a map, mug shot cards, or intelligence files on repeat offenders. The problem with all that information is that it has traditionally been slow and hard to use. "I would have to log into 19 different databases," says Los Angeles Police Department Deputy Chief Dennis Kato. Now he can see all that information on one screen. Kato has been instrumental in LAPD's rollout of a data search program sold by a company called Palantir. While Palantir is somewhat controversial because of its secrecy and reliance on national security contracts, its product for police isn't that mysterious. Like Palantir, other companies make similar "relational database" tools, which combine data from different sources to get a bigger picture quickly.

To qualify for the Memphis Police Department, recruits must pass a wide range of tests, from a background check to hustling through a timed obstacle course. And they must complete weeks of training at the police academy. But one thing has changed: they no longer need college classes, at least not at first.

The city of Orlando, Fla., says it has ended a pilot program in which its police force used Amazon's real-time facial recognition - a system called "Rekognition" that had triggered complaints from rights and privacy groups when its use was revealed earlier this year.

Female FBI agents, DEA agents, ATF agents and deputy marshals are still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies. Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement. In 2016, women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce.

Now that state law requires every judicial circuit in Florida to have an arrest diversion program for juveniles accused of low-level crimes, the next step is to ensure law enforcement agencies have policies that lean toward diversion and create robust training programs. That's according to a study released today aiming to be a how-to-guide for jurisdictions forming new programs or revamping their existing ones under the new law, which goes into effect July 1.

Cocaine supplies and heroin seizures have hit a record high, a new report finds. Supplies of cocaine in 2016 and opium from 2016 to 2017 hit their highest ever recorded levels, according to the 2018 World Drug report released by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) on Tuesday. Non-medical use of prescription drugs, such as fentanyl, are also becoming a major threat to public health, increasingly contributing to overdose deaths, particularly in the United States.

San Francisco police officers will likely have to wait at least another year to be equipped with Tasers, following a divided vote by city lawmakers Monday to cut funding for the devices. Despite November's decision by the city's Police Commission authorizing the Police Department to use the electronic stun guns, the Board of Supervisors' Budget and Finance Committee voted 3-2 to scrap Mayor Mark Farrell's budget proposal to spend $2 million in the coming fiscal year to buy the devices.

COMMUNITY POLICING

The New Republic: Peace officers

On a spring morning last year, in the Keith Creek neighborhood of Rockford, Illinois, Eric Thurmond stopped his patrol car on a street shrouded by trees and veined with cracks. Thurmond, a rookie on the Rockford police force, had been shown the statistics documenting the neighborhood's decline-burglaries, shootings, home invasions. It was not a desirable place to live. But he would be moving there in less than two weeks. He was part of Rockford's newest experiment in policing-a program designed to help cops put down roots in high-crime sections of the city. The police department had procured a house for him. He would be living there rent-free for a minimum of three years, with his only mission to serve the community-to be a good neighbor.

GUN REGULATIONS

Texas Monthly: Art Acevedo on guns and politics

On May 18 a student walked into Santa Fe High School with a shotgun and a handgun and proceeded to kill ten people and wound thirteen others before he was arrested. In the wake of the tragedy, Houston police chief Art Acevedo, whose department was one of several agencies to respond to the scene, has publicly spoken out about a lack of effort to control gun violence and expressed frustration with what he sees as policymakers' reluctance to successfully address the issue.

TECHNOLOGY

NPR: How data analysis is driving policing

Police have always relied on data - whether push pins tracking crimes on a map, mug shot cards, or intelligence files on repeat offenders. The problem with all that information is that it has traditionally been slow and hard to use. "I would have to log into 19 different databases," says Los Angeles Police Department Deputy Chief Dennis Kato. Now he can see all that information on one screen. Kato has been instrumental in LAPD's rollout of a data search program sold by a company called Palantir. While Palantir is somewhat controversial because of its secrecy and reliance on national security contracts, its product for police isn't that mysterious. Like Palantir, other companies make similar "relational database" tools, which combine data from different sources to get a bigger picture quickly.

HIRING

Memphis Commercial Appeal: Memphis Police Department loosens college requirement for recruits

To qualify for the Memphis Police Department, recruits must pass a wide range of tests, from a background check to hustling through a timed obstacle course. And they must complete weeks of training at the police academy. But one thing has changed: they no longer need college classes, at least not at first.

TECHNOLOGY

NPR: Orlando Police end test of Amazon's real-time facial 'Rekognition' system

The city of Orlando, Fla., says it has ended a pilot program in which its police force used

Amazon's real-time facial recognition - a system called "Rekognition" that had triggered complaints from rights and privacy groups when its use was revealed earlier this year.

WOMEN IN POLICING

Washington Post: Women underrepresented in key jobs at FBI, DEA, ATF and Marshals Service

Female FBI agents, DEA agents, ATF agents and deputy marshals are still distinct minorities in the ranks of law enforcement, according to a new audit that also found women are rarely promoted to key jobs at the nation's premier law enforcement agencies. Justice Department Inspector General Michael E. Horowitz issued a report Tuesday detailing stark differences between how women and men are employed in federal law enforcement. In 2016, women comprised just 16 percent of criminal investigators employed at the agencies - even though women account for 57 percent of the rest of the agencies' workforce.

IMMIGRATION

NPR: Customs and border agency halts many 'zero tolerance' detentions, citing workload

Despite pressure from President Trump for the U.S. to arrest and prosecute anyone caught crossing the border illegally, U.S. Customs and Border Protection says its agents will temporarily suspend the practice of detaining adults who arrive with children - something that had been a tenet of Trump's "zero tolerance" policy. CBP agents will no longer refer migrant parents and children for prosecution when they're caught at the U.S. southern border, Commissioner Kevin McAleenan said, telling reporters that the system - which was widely criticized for separating families, until Trump eased his policy somewhat last week - hasn't worked out.

---

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Santa Fe New Mexican: Webber picks in-house candidate as Santa Fe police chief

The Webber administration has hired Andrew Padilla as chief of the Santa Fe Police Department. Padilla, who has helped to lead the department since Patrick Gallagher resigned last fall, emerged from a field of three finalists.

---

JUVENILES

Tampa Bay Times: Study: New law should mean more Florida kids in diversion programs

Now that state law requires every judicial circuit in Florida to have an arrest diversion program for juveniles accused of low-level crimes, the next step is to ensure law enforcement agencies have policies that lean toward diversion and create robust training programs. That's according to a study released today aiming to be a how-to-guide for jurisdictions forming new programs or revamping their existing ones under the new law, which goes into effect July 1.

DRUG ENFORCEMENT

CNN: Cocaine and heroin supplies hit 'record highs' globally

Cocaine supplies and heroin seizures have hit a record high, a new report finds. Supplies of cocaine in 2016 and opium from 2016 to 2017 hit their highest ever recorded levels, according to the 2018 World Drug report released by the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) on Tuesday. Non-medical use of prescription drugs, such as fentanyl, are also becoming a major threat to public health, increasingly contributing to overdose deaths, particularly in the United States.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Washington Post: White House lawyer expected to be named new head of DEA

The Trump administration plans to tap a top White House lawyer as the next head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, according to people familiar with the decision, which could be announced in coming days. Uttam Dhillon, who as a deputy White House counsel has played a key role in internal discussions surrounding the firing of FBI director James B. Comey and the special counsel's probe into Russian interference in the 2016 election, will start at the DEA next week, according to a plan for the staffing move.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

CBS News: ICE names new acting director amid immigration turmoil

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) has a new acting director, Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen announced Saturday. Ronald D. Vitiello, who has been serving as the acting deputy commissioner of U.S. Customs and Border Protection, is now ICE's acting director and deputy director.

Denver Post: Mayor Hancock names Paul Pazen, a district commander, as Denver's next police chief

Denver's next police chief grew up wanting to be a law-enforcement officer and worked his way through the ranks of his hometown department to become its next leader. Cmdr. Paul Pazen, who has overseen operations in District 1 in northwest Denver since 2012, was appointed Thursday as the next Denver Police Department chief by Mayor Michael Hancock. Pazen, 47, was raised by a single mother in northwest Denver and only left home for five years after graduating from North High School to serve a hitch in the Marine Corps.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Savannah Morning News: Roy Minter chosen as new Savannah police chief

A new Savannah police chief has been chosen. Roy Minter of Peoria, Ariz., has accepted the position, the city announced at a press conference Thursday. Minter has more than 30 years of public-safety experience. Chief Minter retired from the police chief position in Peoria, Arizona in May. He served there since 2011. From 2008-2011, Minter was the police chief in Denton, Texas. Prior to his appointment in Denton, Chief Minter spent 15-years with the Aurora, Colorado Police Department, where he held several positions.

MAJOR EVENTS

The Oregonian: Portland Police revoke permit, declare riot as protesters clash downtown

Portland Police declared a riot Saturday after tensions between the right-wing Patriot Prayer group and local anti-fascist activists came to a head and broke out in violence.

MASS SHOOTINGS

Baltimore Sun: Quick police response to Capital Gazette shooting partly by design, partly by luck

Within one minute of 911 calls about a shooter at the Capital Gazette newspaper office in Annapolis on Thursday afternoon, police officers were arriving at the building. A combination of luck and planning led to the quick response.

TECHNOLOGY

USA Today: Capital Gazette gunman was identified using facial recognition technology that's been controversial

Police said they were able to identify the suspected killer in Maryland's Capital Gazette shooting using facial identification technology, an increasingly popular tool for law enforcement that's been embroiled in controversy as civil libertarians warn about the risks of misuse.

BODY-WORN CAMERAS

Los Angeles Times: LAPD hopes new video policy can turn dangerous clashes into teachable moments

While other cities have chosen to release hours of raw images and recordings, the LAPD unveiled something similar to a documentary when it began complying last week with a new policy that requires disclosure of video recorded during "critical incidents." In releasing slick, high-quality productions rather than raw video, the LAPD has said it is hoping not only to provide residents with a firsthand look at the kinds of deadly incidents that have become a source of regular controversy, but also to use the videos to teach residents more about the department and policing as a whole.

PURSUIT POLICIES

Delaware News Journal: Recent Delaware police chases put scrutiny on pursuit policies

In recent years, police departments across the country have revised their pursuit policies after some high-speed chases ended in tragedy. Those changes most often leaned toward eliminating chases in all but the most dangerous cases. Experts say the officers and departments must weigh the benefits and risks of letting a suspect get away and the potential harm of a chase. In most cases, experts argue, it is safer to let a suspect escape. Yet, police have complained that these overly strict policies make enforcing the law harder.

GUN VIOLENCE

Kansas City Star: Kansas City's gun theft 'victims' are arming criminals - and getting away with it

Many self-described victims of gun thefts are not telling the truth, gun violence experts say, and cops and courts seem nearly powerless against the problem. In such cases, someone who legally acquired a gun passes it on to an illegal gun owner. And then, as an alibi, the legal gun owner reports the gun as stolen just in case it is recovered in a violent crime and traced back to their hands.

GUN REGULATIONS

Associated Press: California high court tosses suit over bullet stamping law

The California Supreme Court on Thursday threw out a lawsuit that sought to invalidate a state law requiring new models of semi-automatic handguns to stamp identifying information on bullet casings. The court ruled unanimously that gun rights groups could not overturn the law on the grounds that complying with it was impossible. The groups argued that technology did not exist to meet the stamping requirements, and a law couldn't mandate something that was not possible.

OPIOIDS

Arizona Daily Star: New Tucson police program will refer opioid addicts to treatment, not jail

TPD's opioid deflection program is a six-month pilot in two patrol divisions that will give opioid addicts the ability to be quickly placed into treatment with no risk of jail. The program is three-pronged and involves self-referral by drug users, deflection from being arrested and outreach by officers and caseworkers to connect with people who recently overdosed or fell out of drug treatment.

Minneapolis Star Tribune: Minneapolis police chief faces a test of leadership

Just over 10 months after being sworn in as chief, Arradondo is facing the first serious challenge of his leadership skills as he responds to a series of highly charged controversies - some that could threaten his public support as potential reappointment approaches this fall.

---

CRIME RATES

San Jose Mercury News: Op-ed by California Police Chiefs Association President David Swing: Time to admit criminal reform measure not working

From a police chief's perspective, Proposition 47 has been an ill-conceived measure that has increased property crimes, decreased participation in proven drug rehabilitation programs and is now the subject of a ballot initiative to address the unintended consequences.

IMMIGRATION

Los Angeles Times: 'Even the cops don't like us anymore': Under Trump, ICE is despised and divided

Across the nation, ICE has never seemed more visible, especially as anger continues over the separation of immigrant families at the border under the Trump administration's "zero-tolerance" policy. Protesters have rallied across the U.S., demanding that the agency be abolished - calls that have been echoed by politicians. Earlier this month, WikiLeaks published the identities and information of more than 9,000 supposed current and former ICE employees. Being an ICE agent has always come with challenges. The agency has faced criticism for years from immigration activists, including during the uptick in immigration enforcement during the Obama administration. But Trump's crackdown on illegal immigration has made ICE much more of a target.

PERF IN THE NEWS

MassLive.com: Firm will use focus groups as it begins $128,900 public contract with Springfield police on internal investigation policies

A Washington firm will launch focus groups with leaders in the city's police department to consider potential policy changes in the way it investigates potential officer misconduct internally. According to a joint statement released Thursday by Mayor Domenic Sarno's office and Police Commissioner John Barbieri, the the Police Executive Research Forum (PERF) will begin "several focus groups" and conduct individual interviews starting July 9.

UNITED KINGDOM

The Guardian: Hillsborough police chief to face manslaughter trial

The prosecution for manslaughter of David Duckenfield, the former South Yorkshire police chief superintendent who was in command when 96 people were killed during the 1989 FA Cup semi-final at Hillsborough, is to continue to trial, a judge has ruled. Criminal charges against four other men in relation to the disaster and its aftermath will also go to trial after the judge, Sir Peter Openshaw, rejected the defendants' applications for them to be dismissed.

The Trump administration plans to tap a top White House lawyer as the next head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, according to people familiar with the decision, which could be announced in coming days. Uttam Dhillon, who as a deputy White House counsel has played a key role in internal discussions surrounding the firing of FBI director James B. Comey and the special counsel's probe into Russian interference in the 2016 election, will start at the DEA next week, according to a plan for the staffing move.

Denver's next police chief grew up wanting to be a law-enforcement officer and worked his way through the ranks of his hometown department to become its next leader. Cmdr. Paul Pazen, who has overseen operations in District 1 in northwest Denver since 2012, was appointed Thursday as the next Denver Police Department chief by Mayor Michael Hancock. Pazen, 47, was raised by a single mother in northwest Denver and only left home for five years after graduating from North High School to serve a hitch in the Marine Corps.

A new Savannah police chief has been chosen. Roy Minter of Peoria, Ariz., has accepted the position, the city announced at a press conference Thursday. Minter has more than 30 years of public-safety experience. Chief Minter retired from the police chief position in Peoria, Arizona in May. He served there since 2011. From 2008-2011, Minter was the police chief in Denton, Texas. Prior to his appointment in Denton, Chief Minter spent 15-years with the Aurora, Colorado Police Department, where he held several positions.

Within one minute of 911 calls about a shooter at the Capital Gazette newspaper office in Annapolis on Thursday afternoon, police officers were arriving at the building. A combination of luck and planning led to the quick response.

Police said they were able to identify the suspected killer in Maryland's Capital Gazette shooting using facial identification technology, an increasingly popular tool for law enforcement that's been embroiled in controversy as civil libertarians warn about the risks of misuse.

While other cities have chosen to release hours of raw images and recordings, the LAPD unveiled something similar to a documentary when it began complying last week with a new policy that requires disclosure of video recorded during "critical incidents." In releasing slick, high-quality productions rather than raw video, the LAPD has said it is hoping not only to provide residents with a firsthand look at the kinds of deadly incidents that have become a source of regular controversy, but also to use the videos to teach residents more about the department and policing as a whole.

In recent years, police departments across the country have revised their pursuit policies after some high-speed chases ended in tragedy. Those changes most often leaned toward eliminating chases in all but the most dangerous cases. Experts say the officers and departments must weigh the benefits and risks of letting a suspect get away and the potential harm of a chase. In most cases, experts argue, it is safer to let a suspect escape. Yet, police have complained that these overly strict policies make enforcing the law harder.

Many self-described victims of gun thefts are not telling the truth, gun violence experts say, and cops and courts seem nearly powerless against the problem. In such cases, someone who legally acquired a gun passes it on to an illegal gun owner. And then, as an alibi, the legal gun owner reports the gun as stolen just in case it is recovered in a violent crime and traced back to their hands.

The California Supreme Court on Thursday threw out a lawsuit that sought to invalidate a state law requiring new models of semi-automatic handguns to stamp identifying information on bullet casings. The court ruled unanimously that gun rights groups could not overturn the law on the grounds that complying with it was impossible. The groups argued that technology did not exist to meet the stamping requirements, and a law couldn't mandate something that was not possible.

TPD's opioid deflection program is a six-month pilot in two patrol divisions that will give opioid addicts the ability to be quickly placed into treatment with no risk of jail. The program is three-pronged and involves self-referral by drug users, deflection from being arrested and outreach by officers and caseworkers to connect with people who recently overdosed or fell out of drug treatment.

Just over 10 months after being sworn in as chief, Arradondo is facing the first serious challenge of his leadership skills as he responds to a series of highly charged controversies - some that could threaten his public support as potential reappointment approaches this fall.

From a police chief's perspective, Proposition 47 has been an ill-conceived measure that has increased property crimes, decreased participation in proven drug rehabilitation programs and is now the subject of a ballot initiative to address the unintended consequences.

Across the nation, ICE has never seemed more visible, especially as anger continues over the separation of immigrant families at the border under the Trump administration's "zero-tolerance" policy. Protesters have rallied across the U.S., demanding that the agency be abolished - calls that have been echoed by politicians. Earlier this month, WikiLeaks published the identities and information of more than 9,000 supposed current and former ICE employees. Being an ICE agent has always come with challenges. The agency has faced criticism for years from immigration activists, including during the uptick in immigration enforcement during the Obama administration. But Trump's crackdown on illegal immigration has made ICE much more of a target.

A Washington firm will launch focus groups with leaders in the city's police department to consider potential policy changes in the way it investigates potential officer misconduct internally. According to a joint statement released Thursday by Mayor Domenic Sarno's office and Police Commissioner John Barbieri, the the Police Executive Research Forum (PERF) will begin "several focus groups" and conduct individual interviews starting July 9.

<[The Guardian: Hillsborough police chief to face manslaughter trial
<\[The prosecution for manslaughter of David Duckenfield, the former South Yorkshire police chief superintendent who was in command when 96 people were killed during the 1989 FA Cup semi-final at Hillsborough, is to continue to trial, a judge has ruled. Criminal charges against four other men in relation to the disaster and its aftermath will also go to trial after the judge, Sir Peter Openshaw, rejected the defendants' applications for them to be dismissed.\]\(https://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2Bjso9e57TEQA-2FDTodiz1MRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2BMUDMAkGvVNBRLiamePoj4jEunldwgUabzFP318FJwR62Nwcv-2FYdn41JD0Nv40xvl_mHfaMGDSSOiBrZOSBeca8NqECsurHdPguJcPtyxJiQS9u03zHRltFPkztxngrlYLRgulMisqP4xHzKAu5RWotTqt7pVx86Mm52ypkJLsUvBRHHMBPjbmDrZ2VG3OwN0cj-2FrbUmfflGMoGfZFsAXypYCune-2FwfML-2BoosQHg8Q-2FAJb11JsstC5eUEzwhuB5UNANLO-2FTaM6nC-2BFvPtBr3WnOtONTefOhcggUhfLZJB28xuxIJN3JDB5Tm6RV-2Fdcu1KB4-2BmBOHLMvAhN2qMaDvOwjGJf1nwgFRITwWKDlwrO-2FJiLWN34zd39SA2816yj502oFN7JC5iyKRsyJ1Li3C1p6w-3D-3D>

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Washington Post: White House lawyer expected to be named new head of DEA

The Trump administration plans to tap a top White House lawyer as the next head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, according to people familiar with the decision, which could be announced in coming days. Uttam Dhillon, who as a deputy White House counsel has played a key role in internal discussions surrounding the firing of FBI director James B. Comey and the special counsel's probe into Russian interference in the 2016 election, will start at the DEA next week, according to a plan for the staffing move.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

CBS News: ICE names new acting director amid immigration turmoil

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) has a new acting director, Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen announced Saturday. Ronald D. Vitiello, who has been serving as the acting deputy commissioner of U.S. Customs and Border Protection, is now ICE's acting director and deputy director.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Denver Post: Mayor Hancock names Paul Pazen, a district commander, as Denver's next police chief

Denver's next police chief grew up wanting to be a law-enforcement officer and worked his way through the ranks of his hometown department to become its next leader. Cmdr. Paul Pazen, who has overseen operations in District 1 in northwest Denver since 2012, was appointed Thursday as the next Denver Police Department chief by Mayor Michael Hancock. Pazen, 47, was raised by a single mother in northwest Denver and only left home for five years after graduating from North High School to serve a hitch in the Marine Corps.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Savannah Morning News: Roy Minter chosen as new Savannah police chief

A new Savannah police chief has been chosen. Roy Minter of Peoria, Ariz., has accepted the position, the city announced at a press conference Thursday. Minter has more than 30 years of public-safety experience. Chief Minter retired from the police chief position in Peoria, Arizona in May. He served there since 2011. From 2008-2011, Minter was the police chief in Denton, Texas. Prior to his appointment in Denton, Chief Minter spent 15-years with the Aurora, Colorado Police Department, where he held several positions.

MAJOR EVENTS

The Oregonian: Portland Police revoke permit, declare riot as protesters clash downtown

Portland Police declared a riot Saturday after tensions between the right-wing Patriot Prayer group and local anti-fascist activists came to a head and broke out in violence.

MASS SHOOTINGS

Baltimore Sun: Quick police response to Capital Gazette shooting partly by design, partly by luck

Within one minute of 911 calls about a shooter at the Capital Gazette newspaper office in Annapolis on Thursday afternoon, police officers were arriving at the building. A combination of luck and planning led to the quick response.

TECHNOLOGY

USA Today: Capital Gazette gunman was identified using facial recognition technology that's been controversial

Police said they were able to identify the suspected killer in Maryland's Capital Gazette shooting using facial identification technology, an increasingly popular tool for law enforcement that's been embroiled in controversy as civil libertarians warn about the risks of misuse.

BODY-WORN CAMERAS

Los Angeles Times: LAPD hopes new video policy can turn dangerous clashes into teachable moments

While other cities have chosen to release hours of raw images and recordings, the LAPD unveiled something similar to a documentary when it began complying last week with a new policy that requires disclosure of video recorded during "critical incidents." In releasing slick, high-quality productions rather than raw video, the LAPD has said it is hoping not only to provide residents with a firsthand look at the kinds of deadly incidents that have become a source of regular controversy, but also to use the videos to teach residents more about the department and policing as a whole.

PURSUIT POLICIES

Delaware News Journal: Recent Delaware police chases put scrutiny on pursuit policies

In recent years, police departments across the country have revised their pursuit policies after some high-speed chases ended in tragedy. Those changes most often leaned toward eliminating chases in all but the most dangerous cases. Experts say the officers and departments must weigh the benefits and risks of letting a suspect get away and the potential harm of a chase. In most cases, experts argue, it is safer to let a suspect escape. Yet, police have complained that these overly strict policies make enforcing the law harder.

GUN VIOLENCE

Kansas City Star: Kansas City's gun theft 'victims' are arming criminals - and getting away with it

Many self-described victims of gun thefts are not telling the truth, gun violence experts say, and cops and courts seem nearly powerless against the problem. In such cases, someone who legally acquired a gun passes it on to an illegal gun owner. And then, as an alibi, the legal gun owner reports the gun as stolen just in case it is recovered in a violent crime and traced back to their hands.

GUN REGULATIONS

Associated Press: California high court tosses suit over bullet stamping law

The California Supreme Court on Thursday threw out a lawsuit that sought to invalidate a state law requiring new models of semi-automatic handguns to stamp identifying information on bullet casings. The court ruled unanimously that gun rights groups could not overturn the law on the grounds that complying with it was impossible. The groups argued that technology did not exist to meet the stamping requirements, and a law couldn't mandate something that was not possible.

OPIOIDS

Arizona Daily Star: New Tucson police program will refer opioid addicts to treatment, not jail

TPD's opioid deflection program is a six-month pilot in two patrol divisions that will give opioid addicts the ability to be quickly placed into treatment with no risk of jail. The program is three-pronged and involves self-referral by drug users, deflection from being arrested and outreach by officers and caseworkers to connect with people who recently overdosed or fell out of drug treatment.

Minneapolis Star Tribune: Minneapolis police chief faces a test of leadership

Just over 10 months after being sworn in as chief, Arradondo is facing the first serious challenge of his leadership skills as he responds to a series of highly charged controversies - some that could threaten his public support as potential reappointment approaches this fall.

---

CRIME RATES

San Jose Mercury News: Op-ed by California Police Chiefs Association President David Swing: Time to admit criminal reform measure not working

From a police chief's perspective, Proposition 47 has been an ill-conceived measure that has increased property crimes, decreased participation in proven drug rehabilitation programs and is now the subject of a ballot initiative to address the unintended consequences.

IMMIGRATION

Los Angeles Times: 'Even the cops don't like us anymore': Under Trump, ICE is despised and divided

Across the nation, ICE has never seemed more visible, especially as anger continues over the separation of immigrant families at the border under the Trump administration's "zero-tolerance" policy. Protesters have rallied across the U.S., demanding that the agency be abolished - calls that have been echoed by politicians. Earlier this month, WikiLeaks published the identities and information of more than 9,000 supposed current and former ICE employees. Being an ICE agent has always come with challenges. The agency has faced criticism for years from immigration activists, including during the uptick in immigration enforcement during the Obama administration. But Trump's crackdown on illegal immigration has made ICE much more of a target.

PERF IN THE NEWS

MassLive.com: Firm will use focus groups as it begins $128,900 public contract with Springfield police on internal investigation policies

A Washington firm will launch focus groups with leaders in the city's police department to consider potential policy changes in the way it investigates potential officer misconduct internally. According to a joint statement released Thursday by Mayor Domenic Sarno's office and Police Commissioner John Barbieri, the the Police Executive Research Forum (PERF) will begin "several focus groups" and conduct individual interviews starting July 9.

UNITED KINGDOM

The Guardian: Hillsborough police chief to face manslaughter trial

The prosecution for manslaughter of David Duckenfield, the former South Yorkshire police chief superintendent who was in command when 96 people were killed during the 1989 FA Cup semi-final at Hillsborough, is to continue to trial, a judge has ruled. Criminal charges against four other men in relation to the disaster and its aftermath will also go to trial after the judge, Sir Peter Openshaw, rejected the defendants' applications for them to be dismissed.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Palm Beach Post: Jupiter says farewell to longtime Police Chief Frank Kitzerow

The town bid farewell to outgoing Police Chief Frank Kitzerow Thursday night during a ceremony at the Jupiter Community Center. Hired nearly 13 years ago to run the Jupiter Police Department, he is leaving to take over as the Palm Beach County public schools' next police chief.

A crowd hundreds deep turned out in support of an ongoing demonstration against federal immigration policy on Saturday, motivated in part by a counterprotest by a self-described "patriot" militia group one street away. The two groups never came face-to-face, but spent hours lobbing chants and insults at one another from across a police-lined buffer zone. Nearby roads were shut down and access to the protest areas were watched by police.

Los Angeles Times: L.A. gangs stockpile untraceable 'ghost guns' that members make themselves

A small arsenal of weapons that authorities seized from gang members during a six-month undercover operation lay across the tables at LAPD's Hollywood station Thursday. It's not unusual for the Los Angeles Police Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives to grab high-power weapons during these types of sweeps. But these AR-15-style semiautomatic rifles and pistols were different - homemade, untraceable "ghost guns" without the traditional serial numbers, built from parts purchased over the internet. Authorities said they are seeing more gangs turn to homemade guns as it becomes more difficult to acquire real ones.

Toronto Star: Experts warn against return to policing that targets 'communities and not individuals'

The Toronto Anti-Violence Intervention Strategy (TAVIS) saw specialized teams of police doing what's called "surge policing" - upping the presence of uniform officers in areas host to shootings and gang-violence. The original idea was that TAVIS officers would serve as both as a deterrent to crime and a mechanism to collect intelligence about gang and violence-related activity. That information collection, however, ultimately earned TAVIS the notoriety of having a highest rate of any Toronto police unit for carding, the controversial practice of stopping and documenting people not suspected of a crime. The negative impact that caused, particularly on racialized communities, was among the reasons why the unit was disbanded in 2017. But amid high-profile incidents of gun violence this summer, some are now calling for the reinstatement of TAVIS-style policing and carding-gathered intelligence.

The spotlight on U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) is about to become brighter as Congress weighs the Trump administration's request for a huge spending boost even as a growing number of Democrats want the agency abolished.

Though Chinese officials deny that most of the fentanyl or other opioid substances originate in their country, they have in the past cooperated with U.S. efforts to control the flow of fentanyl onto American soil. If the tariffs become permanent, though, "it's most likely going to have a negative effect on other areas" beyond trade, said Jeffrey Higgins, a former Drug Enforcement Administration supervisory special agent. "China could say 'We are no longer going to cooperate with the United States on controlling these synthetic opioids,'" he continued.

A nonprofit auto safety advocacy group is asking Ford to recall 1.35 million Explorer SUVs due to continued complaints of exhaust fumes in the passenger compartments. The Center for Auto Safety says it found 44 complaints in a government database about fumes and potential carbon monoxide after owners had taken Explorers in for free repairs in a Ford customer service campaign that started last October.

Recent instances where metro-area police have shot and killed persons armed with decorative swords have raised questions about officers' use of deadly force. We examined the Kansas City Police Department's de-escalation tactics, up to and including lethal measures, and looked at the various conditions officers face in critical moments. We interviewed Major Charles Huth of the Kansas City Police Department and Tom Wilson of the Police Executive Research Forum.

When government began closing asylums 50 years ago, few new institutions emerged to absorb this population. That's how jails, prisons and homeless shelters became the default housing options for those struggling with mental illness. But some people with serious mental illness still need asylum. Places that provide asylum can be psychiatric hospitals, psychiatric units in general hospitals, Department of Defense or Veterans Affairs medical centers, private psychiatric hospitals, or treatment centers that provide 24-hour care but are not licensed as hospitals. What they can't be are prisons or jails.

A crowd hundreds deep turned out in support of an ongoing demonstration against federal immigration policy on Saturday, motivated in part by a counterprotest by a self-described "patriot" militia group one street away. The two groups never came face-to-face, but spent hours lobbing chants and insults at one another from across a police-lined buffer zone. Nearby roads were shut down and access to the protest areas were watched by police.

Los Angeles Times: L.A. gangs stockpile untraceable 'ghost guns' that members make themselves

A small arsenal of weapons that authorities seized from gang members during a six-month undercover operation lay across the tables at LAPD's Hollywood station Thursday. It's not unusual for the Los Angeles Police Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives to grab high-power weapons during these types of sweeps. But these AR-15-style semiautomatic rifles and pistols were different - homemade, untraceable "ghost guns" without the traditional serial numbers, built from parts purchased over the internet. Authorities said they are seeing more gangs turn to homemade guns as it becomes more difficult to acquire real ones.

The Toronto Anti-Violence Intervention Strategy (TAVIS) saw specialized teams of police doing what's called "surge policing" - upping the presence of uniform officers in areas host to shootings and gang-violence. The original idea was that TAVIS officers would serve as both as a deterrent to crime and a mechanism to collect intelligence about gang and violence-related activity. That information collection, however, ultimately earned TAVIS the notoriety of having a highest rate of any Toronto police unit for carding, the controversial practice of stopping and documenting people not suspected of a crime. The negative impact that caused, particularly on racialized communities, was among the reasons why the unit was disbanded in 2017. But amid high-profile incidents of gun violence this summer, some are now calling for the reinstatement of TAVIS-style policing and carding-gathered intelligence.

Though Chinese officials deny that most of the fentanyl or other opioid substances originate in their country, they have in the past cooperated with U.S. efforts to control the flow of fentanyl onto American soil. If the tariffs become permanent, though, "it's most likely going to have a negative effect on other areas" beyond trade, said Jeffrey Higgins, a former Drug Enforcement Administration supervisory special agent. "China could say 'We are no longer going to cooperate with the United States on controlling these synthetic opioids,'" he continued.

<[Calamities seem to be multiplying in recent years, including mass shootings, fires, hurricanes and mudslides. Just last week, a gunman burst into the newsroom of the Capital Gazette in Annapolis, Md., killing five journalists and injuring two others. Many of the men and women who respond to these tragedies have become heroes and victims at once. A nonprofit auto safety advocacy group is asking Ford to recall 1.35 million Explorer SUVs due to continued complaints of exhaust fumes in the passenger compartments. The Center for Auto Safety says it found 44 complaints in a government database about fumes and potential carbon monoxide after owners had taken Explorers in for free repairs in a Ford customer service campaign that started last October.

Recent instances where metro-area police have shot and killed persons armed with decorative swords have raised questions about officers' use of deadly force. We examined the Kansas City Police Department's de-escalation tactics, up to and including lethal measures, and looked at the various conditions officers face in critical moments. We interviewed Major Charles Huth of the Kansas City Police Department and Tom Wilson of the Police Executive Research Forum.

When government began closing asylums 50 years ago, few new institutions emerged to absorb this population. That's how jails, prisons and homeless shelters became the default housing options for those struggling with mental illness. But some people with serious mental illness still need asylum. Places that provide asylum can be psychiatric hospitals, psychiatric units in general hospitals, Department of Defense or Veterans Affairs medical centers, private psychiatric hospitals, or treatment centers that provide 24-hour care but are not licensed as hospitals. What they can't be are prisons or jails.

MAJOR EVENTS

Louisville Courier Journal: Anti-ICE rally surges in face of 'patriot' militia group counterprotest

A crowd hundreds deep turned out in support of an ongoing demonstration against federal immigration policy on Saturday, motivated in part by a counterprotest by a self-described "patriot" militia group one street away. The two groups never came face-to-face, but spent hours lobbing chants and insults at one another from across a police-lined buffer zone. Nearby roads were shut down and access to the protest areas were watched by police.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Seattle Times: Carmen Best back in running for Seattle police chief as 1 finalist exits

Carmen Best, interim chief of the Seattle Police Department, is back in the running to be permanent chief, after one of three finalists for the job withdrew from consideration, Mayor Jenny Durkan announced Saturday.

GUN REGULATIONS

Los Angeles Times: L.A. gangs stockpile untraceable 'ghost guns' that members make themselves

A small arsenal of weapons that authorities seized from gang members during a six-month undercover operation lay across the tables at LAPD's Hollywood station Thursday. It's not unusual for the Los Angeles Police Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives to grab high-power weapons during these types of sweeps. But these AR-15-style semiautomatic rifles and pistols were different - homemade, untraceable "ghost guns" without the traditional serial numbers, built from parts purchased over the internet. Authorities said they are seeing more gangs turn to homemade guns as it becomes more difficult to acquire real ones.

Toronto Star: Experts warn against return to policing that targets 'communities and not individuals'

The Toronto Anti-Violence Intervention Strategy (TAVIS) saw specialized teams of police doing what's called "surge policing" - upping the presence of uniform officers in areas host to shootings and gang-violence. The original idea was that TAVIS officers would serve as both as a deterrent to crime and a mechanism to collect intelligence about gang and violence-related activity. That information collection, however, ultimately earned TAVIS the notoriety of having a highest rate of any Toronto police unit for carding, the controversial practice of stopping and documenting people not suspected of a crime. The negative impact that caused, particularly on racialized communities, was among the reasons why the unit was disbanded in 2017. But amid high-profile incidents of gun violence this summer, some are now calling for the reinstatement of TAVIS-style policing and carding-gathered intelligence.

DHS

The Hill: Clash looms over ICE funding

The spotlight on U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) is about to become brighter as Congress weighs the Trump administration's request for a huge spending boost even as a growing number of Democrats want the agency abolished.

OPIOIDS

Kaiser Health News: What a U.S.-China trade war could mean for opioid epidemic

Though Chinese officials deny that most of the fentanyl or other opioid substances originate in their country, they have in the past cooperated with U.S. efforts to control the flow of fentanyl onto American soil. If the tariffs become permanent, though, "it's most likely going to have a negative effect on other areas" beyond trade, said Jeffrey Higgins, a former Drug Enforcement Administration supervisory special agent. "China could say 'We are no longer going to cooperate with the United States on controlling these synthetic opioids,'" he continued.

OFFICER WELLNESS

Kaiser Health News: The other victims: First responders to horrific disasters often suffer in solitude

Calamities seem to be multiplying in recent years, including mass shootings, fires, hurricanes and mudslides. Just last week, a gunman burst into the newsroom of the Capital Gazette in Annapolis, Md., killing five journalists and injuring two others. Many of the men and women who respond to these tragedies have become heroes and victims at once. Some firefighters, emergency medical providers, law enforcement officers and others say the scale, sadness and sometimes sheer gruesomeness of their experiences haunt them, leading to tearfulness and depression, job burnout, substance abuse, relationship problems, even suicide.

PRIVACY ISSUES

Associated Press: For tech firms, facial recognition means big markets and 'Orwellian' fears

Recent advances in AI-powered computer vision have accelerated the race for self-driving cars and powered the increasingly sophisticated photo-tagging features found on Facebook and Google. But as these prying AI "eyes" find new applications in store checkout lines, police body cameras and war zones, the tech companies developing them are struggling to balance business opportunities with difficult moral decisions that could turn off customers or their own workers.

Associated Press: Advocacy group seeking Ford Explorer recall because of fumes

A nonprofit auto safety advocacy group is asking Ford to recall 1.35 million Explorer SUVs due to continued complaints of exhaust fumes in the passenger compartments. The Center for Auto Safety says it found 44 complaints in a government database about fumes and potential carbon monoxide after owners had taken Explorers in for free repairs in a Ford customer service campaign that started last October.

DE-ESCALATION

KCUR Kansas City: Audio: Police de-escalation tactics

Recent instances where metro-area police have shot and killed persons armed with decorative swords have raised questions about officers' use of deadly force. We examined the Kansas City Police Department's de-escalation tactics, up to and including lethal measures, and looked at the various conditions officers face in critical moments. We interviewed Major Charles Huth of the Kansas City Police Department and Tom Wilson of the Police Executive Research Forum.

JAILS

New York Daily News: Op-ed by Greenburger Center for Social and Criminal Justice Executive Director Cheryl Roberts: Out of jail cells & into havens: Rikers must give way to humane alternatives for people with serious mental illness

When government began closing asylums 50 years ago, few new institutions emerged to absorb this population. That's how jails, prisons and homeless shelters became the default housing options for those struggling with mental illness. But some people with serious mental illness still need asylum. Places that provide asylum can be psychiatric hospitals, psychiatric units in general hospitals, Department of Defense or Veterans Affairs medical centers, private psychiatric hospitals, or treatment centers that provide 24-hour care but are not licensed as hospitals. What they can't be are prisons or jails.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Los Angeles Times: New LAPD chief's command staff takes shape with few surprises; Robert Arcos to lead patrol operations

Just over a week after becoming chief of the Los Angeles Police Department, Michel Moore has appointed his new command staff, opting for stability over major change.

A crowd hundreds deep turned out in support of an ongoing demonstration against federal immigration policy on Saturday, motivated in part by a counterprotest by a self-described "patriot" militia group one street away. The two groups never came face-to-face, but spent hours lobbing chants and insults at one another from across a police-lined buffer zone. Nearby roads were shut down and access to the protest areas were watched by police.

A small arsenal of weapons that authorities seized from gang members during a six-month undercover operation lay across the tables at LAPD's Hollywood station Thursday. It's not unusual for the Los Angeles Police Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives to grab high-power weapons during these types of sweeps. But these AR-15-style semiautomatic rifles and pistols were different - homemade, untraceable "ghost guns" without the traditional serial numbers, built from parts purchased over the internet. Authorities said they are seeing more gangs turn to homemade guns as it becomes more difficult to acquire real ones.

The Toronto Anti-Violence Intervention Strategy (TAVIS) saw specialized teams of police doing what's called "surge policing" - upping the presence of uniform officers in areas host to shootings and gang-violence. The original idea was that TAVIS officers would serve as both as a deterrent to crime and a mechanism to collect intelligence about gang and violence-related activity. That information collection, however, ultimately earned TAVIS the notoriety of having a highest rate of any Toronto police unit for carding, the controversial practice of stopping and documenting people not suspected of a crime. The negative impact that caused, particularly on racialized communities, was among the reasons why the unit was disbanded in 2017. But amid high-profile incidents of gun violence this summer, some are now calling for the reinstatement of TAVIS-style policing and carding-gathered intelligence.

The spotlight on U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) is about to become brighter as Congress weighs the Trump administration's request for a huge spending boost even as a growing number of Democrats want the agency abolished.

Though Chinese officials deny that most of the fentanyl or other opioid substances originate in their country, they have in the past cooperated with U.S. efforts to control the flow of fentanyl onto American soil. If the tariffs become permanent, though, "it's most likely going to have a negative effect on other areas" beyond trade, said Jeffrey Higgins, a former Drug Enforcement Administration supervisory special agent. "China could say 'We are no longer going to cooperate with the United States on controlling these synthetic opioids,'" he continued.
