<[Calamities seem to be multiplying in recent years, including mass shootings, fires, hurricanes and mudslides. Just last week, a gunman burst into the newsroom of the Capital Gazette in Annapolis, Md., killing five journalists and injuring two others. Many of the men and women who respond to these tragedies have become heroes and victims at once. Some firefighters, emergency medical providers, law enforcement officers and others say the scale, sadness and sometimes sheer gruesomeness of their experiences haunt them, leading to tearfulness and depression, job burnout, substance abuse, relationship problems, even suicide.](https://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2BJso9e57TEQA-2FDTodizlMRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2BdTWC8GZedkM7uVJ2cnSkx4gJZhTR4l7CXVy1juoIz0p0sE8XlSkz7Fdi-2FA9V-2BrM6_mHfaMGDSSOiBrZOSBeca8NqECsurHdPguJcPtyxJiQS9u03zHRltFPkztxngrYLRgulMisqP4xHzKAu5RWotcf352bG5bIgmP7agRW8A8CztDdl68RvIG-2FdfqHhBKgwrWRnbl9QnOVUvVZrB3zyqRbmlSjX5iXwaJDwk2zIPMCxYU6ZleBswLPD3z1W5rqzF-2B1CCsX7YAcFbxlutV-2FyLdiCpbnvhFKKeyLb71eZMX78g3wS3m6k2RXgvcLs-2B1ZAv0XcuIFxkSLqI3ggCzLka0Q0apyhsR2NZFvsoHSeNO6S30JVOQl3dcB57zar3uizot-2Fjh-2BNy-2B2hNfySu3kEm9Kw-3D-3D>

Recent advances in AI-powered computer vision have accelerated the race for self-driving cars and powered the increasingly sophisticated photo-tagging features found on Facebook and Google. But as these prying AI "eyes" find new applications in store checkout lines, police body cameras and war zones, the tech companies developing them are struggling to balance business opportunities with difficult moral decisions that could turn off customers or their own workers.

A nonprofit auto safety advocacy group is asking Ford to recall 1.35 million Explorer SUVs due to continued complaints of exhaust fumes in the passenger compartments. The Center for Auto Safety says it found 44 complaints in a government database about fumes and potential carbon monoxide after owners had taken Explorers in for free repairs in a Ford customer service campaign that started last October.

Recent instances where metro-area police have shot and killed persons armed with decorative swords have raised questions about officers' use of deadly force. We examined the Kansas City Police Department's de-escalation tactics, up to and including lethal measures, and looked at the various conditions officers face in critical moments. We interviewed Major Charles Huth of the Kansas City Police Department and Tom Wilson of the Police Executive Research Forum.

When government began closing asylums 50 years ago, few new institutions emerged to absorb this population. That's how jails, prisons and homeless shelters became the default housing options for those struggling with mental illness. But some people with serious mental illness still need asylum. Places that provide asylum can be psychiatric hospitals, psychiatric units in general hospitals, Department of Defense or Veterans Affairs medical centers, private psychiatric hospitals, or treatment centers that provide 24-hour care but are not licensed as hospitals. What they can't be are prisons or jails.

MAJOR EVENTS

Louisville Courier Journal: Anti-ICE rally surges in face of 'patriot' militia group counterprotest

A crowd hundreds deep turned out in support of an ongoing demonstration against federal immigration policy on Saturday, motivated in part by a counterprotest by a self-described "patriot" militia group one street away. The two groups never came face-to-face, but spent hours lobbing chants and insults at one another from across a police-lined buffer zone. Nearby roads were shut down and access to the protest areas were watched by police.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Seattle Times: Carmen Best back in running for Seattle police chief as 1 finalist exits

Carmen Best, interim chief of the Seattle Police Department, is back in the running to be permanent chief, after one of three finalists for the job withdrew from consideration, Mayor Jenny Durkan announced Saturday.

GUN REGULATIONS

Los Angeles Times: L.A. gangs stockpile untraceable 'ghost guns' that members make themselves

A small arsenal of weapons that authorities seized from gang members during a six-month undercover operation lay across the tables at LAPD's Hollywood station Thursday. It's not unusual for the Los Angeles Police Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives to grab high-power weapons during these types of sweeps. But these AR-15-style semiautomatic rifles and pistols were different - homemade, untraceable "ghost guns" without the traditional serial numbers, built from parts purchased over the internet. Authorities said they are seeing more gangs turn to homemade guns as it becomes more difficult to acquire real ones.

Toronto Star: Experts warn against return to policing that targets 'communities and not individuals'

The Toronto Anti-Violence Intervention Strategy (TAVIS) saw specialized teams of police doing what's called "surge policing" - upping the presence of uniform officers in areas host to shootings and gang-violence. The original idea was that TAVIS officers would serve as both as a deterrent to crime and a mechanism to collect intelligence about gang and violence-related activity. That information collection, however, ultimately earned TAVIS the notoriety of having a highest rate of any Toronto police unit for carding, the controversial practice of stopping and documenting people not suspected of a crime. The negative impact that caused, particularly on racialized communities, was among the reasons why the unit was disbanded in 2017. But amid high-profile incidents of gun violence this summer, some are now calling for the reinstatement of TAVIS-style policing and carding-gathered intelligence.

DHS

The Hill: Clash looms over ICE funding

The spotlight on U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) is about to become brighter as Congress weighs the Trump administration's request for a huge spending boost even as a growing number of Democrats want the agency abolished.

OPIOIDS

Kaiser Health News: What a U.S.-China trade war could mean for opioid epidemic

Though Chinese officials deny that most of the fentanyl or other opioid substances originate in their country, they have in the past cooperated with U.S. efforts to control the flow of fentanyl onto American soil. If the tariffs become permanent, though, "it's most likely going to have a negative effect on other areas" beyond trade, said Jeffrey Higgins, a former Drug Enforcement Administration supervisory special agent. "China could say 'We are no longer going to cooperate with the United States on controlling these synthetic opioids,'" he continued.

OFFICER WELLNESS

Kaiser Health News: The other victims: First responders to horrific disasters often suffer in solitude

Calamities seem to be multiplying in recent years, including mass shootings, fires, hurricanes and mudslides. Just last week, a gunman burst into the newsroom of the Capital Gazette in Annapolis, Md., killing five journalists and injuring two others. Many of the men and women who respond to these tragedies have become heroes and victims at once. Some firefighters, emergency medical providers, law enforcement officers and others say the scale, sadness and sometimes sheer gruesomeness of their experiences haunt them, leading to tearfulness and depression, job burnout, substance abuse, relationship problems, even suicide.

PRIVACY ISSUES

Associated Press: For tech firms, facial recognition means big markets and 'Orwellian' fears

Recent advances in AI-powered computer vision have accelerated the race for self-driving cars and powered the increasingly sophisticated photo-tagging features found on Facebook and Google. But as these prying AI "eyes" find new applications in store checkout lines, police body cameras and war zones, the tech companies developing them are struggling to balance business opportunities with difficult moral decisions that could turn off customers or their own workers.

Associated Press: Advocacy group seeking Ford Explorer recall because of fumes

A nonprofit auto safety advocacy group is asking Ford to recall 1.35 million Explorer SUVs due to continued complaints of exhaust fumes in the passenger compartments. The Center for Auto Safety says it found 44 complaints in a government database about fumes and potential carbon monoxide after owners had taken Explorers in for free repairs in a Ford customer service campaign that started last October.

DE-ESCALATION

KCUR Kansas City: Audio: Police de-escalation tactics

Recent instances where metro-area police have shot and killed persons armed with decorative swords have raised questions about officers' use of deadly force. We examined the Kansas City Police Department's de-escalation tactics, up to and including lethal measures, and looked at the various conditions officers face in critical moments. We interviewed Major Charles Huth of the Kansas City Police Department and Tom Wilson of the Police Executive Research Forum.

JAILS

New York Daily News: Op-ed by Greenburger Center for Social and Criminal Justice Executive Director Cheryl Roberts: Out of jail cells & into havens: Rikers must give way to humane alternatives for people with serious mental illness

When government began closing asylums 50 years ago, few new institutions emerged to absorb this population. That's how jails, prisons and homeless shelters became the default housing options for those struggling with mental illness. But some people with serious mental illness still need asylum. Places that provide asylum can be psychiatric hospitals, psychiatric units in general hospitals, Department of Defense or Veterans Affairs medical centers, private psychiatric hospitals, or treatment centers that provide 24-hour care but are not licensed as hospitals. What they can't be are prisons or jails.

Just over a week after becoming chief of the Los Angeles Police Department, Michel Moore has appointed his new command staff, opting for stability over major change.

MAJOR EVENTS

Louisville Courier Journal: Anti-ICE rally surges in face of 'patriot' militia group counterprotest

A crowd hundreds deep turned out in support of an ongoing demonstration against federal immigration policy on Saturday, motivated in part by a counterprotest by a self-described "patriot" militia group one street away. The two groups never came face-to-face, but spent hours lobbing chants and insults at one another from across a police-lined buffer zone. Nearby roads were shut down and access to the protest areas were watched by police.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Seattle Times: Carmen Best back in running for Seattle police chief as 1 finalist exits

Carmen Best, interim chief of the Seattle Police Department, is back in the running to be permanent chief, after one of three finalists for the job withdrew from consideration, Mayor Jenny Durkan announced Saturday.

GUN REGULATIONS

Los Angeles Times: L.A. gangs stockpile untraceable 'ghost guns' that members make themselves

A small arsenal of weapons that authorities seized from gang members during a six-month undercover operation lay across the tables at LAPD's Hollywood station Thursday. It's not unusual for the Los Angeles Police Department and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives to grab high-power weapons during these types of sweeps. But these AR-15-style semiautomatic rifles and pistols were different - homemade, untraceable "ghost guns" without the traditional serial numbers, built from parts purchased over the internet. Authorities said they are seeing more gangs turn to homemade guns as it becomes more difficult to acquire real ones.

Toronto Star: Experts warn against return to policing that targets 'communities and not individuals'

The Toronto Anti-Violence Intervention Strategy (TAVIS) saw specialized teams of police doing what's called "surge policing" - upping the presence of uniform officers in areas host to shootings and gang-violence. The original idea was that TAVIS officers would serve as both as a deterrent to crime and a mechanism to collect intelligence about gang and violence-related activity. That information collection, however, ultimately earned TAVIS the notoriety of having a highest rate of any Toronto police unit for carding, the controversial practice of stopping and documenting people not suspected of a crime. The negative impact that caused, particularly on racialized communities, was among the reasons why the unit was disbanded in 2017. But amid high-profile incidents of gun violence this summer, some are now calling for the reinstatement of TAVIS-style policing and carding-gathered intelligence.

DHS

The Hill: Clash looms over ICE funding

The spotlight on U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) is about to become brighter as Congress weighs the Trump administration's request for a huge spending boost even as a growing number of Democrats want the agency abolished.

OPIOIDS

Kaiser Health News: What a U.S.-China trade war could mean for opioid epidemic

Though Chinese officials deny that most of the fentanyl or other opioid substances originate in their country, they have in the past cooperated with U.S. efforts to control the flow of fentanyl onto American soil. If the tariffs become permanent, though, "it's most likely going to have a negative effect on other areas" beyond trade, said Jeffrey Higgins, a former Drug Enforcement Administration supervisory special agent. "China could say 'We are no longer going to cooperate with the United States on controlling these synthetic opioids,'" he continued.

OFFICER WELLNESS

Kaiser Health News: The other victims: First responders to horrific disasters often suffer in solitude

Calamities seem to be multiplying in recent years, including mass shootings, fires, hurricanes and mudslides. Just last week, a gunman burst into the newsroom of the Capital Gazette in Annapolis, Md., killing five journalists and injuring two others. Many of the men and women who respond to these tragedies have become heroes and victims at once. Some firefighters, emergency medical providers, law enforcement officers and others say the scale, sadness and sometimes sheer gruesomeness of their experiences haunt them, leading to tearfulness and depression, job burnout, substance abuse, relationship problems, even suicide.

PRIVACY ISSUES

Associated Press: For tech firms, facial recognition means big markets and 'Orwellian' fears

Recent advances in AI-powered computer vision have accelerated the race for self-driving cars and powered the increasingly sophisticated photo-tagging features found on Facebook and Google. But as these prying AI "eyes" find new applications in store checkout lines, police body cameras and war zones, the tech companies developing them are struggling to balance business opportunities with difficult moral decisions that could turn off customers or their own workers.

Associated Press: Advocacy group seeking Ford Explorer recall because of fumes

A nonprofit auto safety advocacy group is asking Ford to recall 1.35 million Explorer SUVs due to continued complaints of exhaust fumes in the passenger compartments. The Center for Auto Safety says it found 44 complaints in a government database about fumes and potential carbon monoxide after owners had taken Explorers in for free repairs in a Ford customer service campaign that started last October.

DE-ESCALATION

KCUR Kansas City: Audio: Police de-escalation tactics

Recent instances where metro-area police have shot and killed persons armed with decorative swords have raised questions about officers' use of deadly force. We examined the Kansas City Police Department's de-escalation tactics, up to and including lethal measures, and looked at the various conditions officers face in critical moments. We interviewed Major Charles Huth of the Kansas City Police Department and Tom Wilson of the Police Executive Research Forum.

JAILS

New York Daily News: Op-ed by Greenburger Center for Social and Criminal Justice Executive Director Cheryl Roberts: Out of jail cells & into havens: Rikers must give way to humane alternatives for people with serious mental illness

When government began closing asylums 50 years ago, few new institutions emerged to absorb this population. That's how jails, prisons and homeless shelters became the default housing options for those struggling with mental illness. But some people with serious mental illness still need asylum. Places that provide asylum can be psychiatric hospitals, psychiatric units in general hospitals, Department of Defense or Veterans Affairs medical centers, private psychiatric hospitals, or treatment centers that provide 24-hour care but are not licensed as hospitals. What they can't be are prisons or jails.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Los Angeles Times: New LAPD chief's command staff takes shape with few surprises; Robert Arcos to lead patrol operations

Just over a week after becoming chief of the Los Angeles Police Department, Michel Moore has appointed his new command staff, opting for stability over major change.

Share to Twitter (7/9, Perry) reports that the rise in motorcycle fatalities in Rhode Island has prompted state police to urge "motorcyclists to be careful, comply with rules of the road, and use helmets, even though most Rhode Island (RI) motorcyclists aren't required by law to wear them." In a press release, RI State Police Col. Ann Assumpico said, "We are extremely concerned about this increase in motorcycle fatalities, especially given that we're in the peak season for motorcycle riding." Assumpico added, "We strongly encourage all motorcycle riders and passengers to wear helmets and protective equipment. We also remind other motorists to be watchful for motorcyclists." According to the RI state police, NHTSA statistics show that nationwide the number of motorcycle fatalities nationwide increased by nearly 60 percent over the last 20 years.

Police spokesman Sgt. Vince Lewis said, "Phoenix police officers confirmed that the company...was contracted by ICE to perform transfers. ... Officers did not observe children, nor 'inspect' the facility." On Monday, Phoenix Councilwoman Kate Gallego said "police had returned to the facility over the weekend, after a media report raised questions about whether MVM had held [im]migrant children separated from their parents there," the article says. The piece notes that the "Health and Human Service's Office of Refugee Resettlement...awarded MVM an $8 million contract to provide 'emergency support services,' according to federal contract data."

Fatalities fell in almost every mode of transportation, with the exception of motorcycle deaths, which increased slightly. The decline in traffic deaths were attributed to the city's Vision Zero program. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said, "We will never rest on our laurels, and will keep fighting for the safety of our fellow New Yorkers," adding that the Senate's "failure to act on speed cams puts this progress, and the lives of school children, at risk." Bill Ferraro, President of the Brooklyn chapter of the American Bikers Aided Toward Education, a motorcycle advocacy group, said the city needs to do more to protect motorcyclists. The article mentions that the city has increased motorcycle enforcement with the Warm Weather Weekends initiative, where police checkpoints are set up to reduce reckless driving.

Nottinghamshire, UK Police Pilot "Misogyny Hate Crime Policy."

"The policy does not criminalise anything that was previously legal, and anything criminal is covered by existing legislation." Nottingham University Professor Louise Mullany, who was involved in the pilot program's adoption, said, "we were really shocked at how high the figures were in terms of people reporting the more serious end of crime, and that becoming part of a regular occurrence."

WANE says "the program will make one handheld metal detector device available for every 250 students in traditional public, charter and accredited non-public schools." The Indiana State Police and the Department of Administration will coordinated the program and those schools "that order are expected to receive them in time for the upcoming school year in mid-August." Holcomb said, "Controlling what comes into our school buildings is just one important part of keeping our schools safe, and our efforts to assist school corporations must be ongoing and evolving."

Amazon, Microsoft, and Facebook are developing the technology, and Amazon "has controversially lent its Recognition software to police departments in an effort to 'enable database matches.'" However, Geek says facial recognition isn't without "its upsides," as "the technology helped Maryland police arrest a suspect in last month's Capital Gazette newsroom shooting."

Amazon has marketed its Rekognition service to law enforcement, but critics have "argued it could easily be misused and harm marginalized people." However, AWS GM of AI Dr. Matt Wood said, "We believe it is the wrong approach to impose a ban on promising new technologies because they might be used by bad actors for nefarious purposes in the future. ... motorcycle fatalities in Rhode Island has prompted state police to urge "motorcyclists to be careful, comply with rules of the road, and use helmets, even though most Rhode Island (RI) motorcyclists aren't required by law to wear them." In a press release, RI State Police Col. Ann Assumpico said, "We are extremely concerned about this increase in motorcycle fatalities, especially given that we're in the peak season for motorcycle riding." Assumpico added, "We strongly encourage all motorcycle riders and passengers to wear helmets and protective equipment. We also remind other motorists to be watchful for motorcyclists." According to the RI state police, NHTSA statistics show that nationwide the number of motorcycle fatalities nationwide increased by nearly 60 percent over the last 20 years.

Police spokesman Sgt. Vince Lewis said, "Phoenix police officers confirmed that the company...was contracted by ICE to perform transfers. ... Officers did not observe children, nor 'inspect' the facility." On Monday, Phoenix Councilwoman Kate Gallego said "police had returned to the facility over the weekend, after a media report raised questions about whether MVM had held [im]migrant children separated from their parents there," the article says. Fatalities fell in almost every mode of transportation, with the exception of motorcycle deaths, which increased slightly. The decline in traffic deaths were attributed to the city's Vision Zero program. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said, "We will never rest on our laurels, and will keep fighting for the safety of our fellow New Yorkers," adding that the Senate's "failure to act on speed cams puts this progress, and the lives of school children, at risk." Bill Ferraro, President of the Brooklyn chapter of the American Bikers Aimed Toward Education, a motorcycle advocacy group, said the city needs to do more to protect motorcyclists. The article mentions that the city has increased motorcycle enforcement with the Warm Weather Weekends initiative, where police checkpoints are set up to reduce reckless driving.

Share to Twitter (7/9, Perry) reports that the rise in motorcycle fatalities in Rhode Island has prompted state police to urge "motorcyclists to be careful, comply with rules of the road, and use helmets, even though most Rhode Island (RI) motorcyclists aren't required by law to wear them." In a press release, RI State Police Col. Ann Assumpico said, "We are extremely concerned about this increase in motorcycle fatalities, especially given that we're in the peak season for motorcycle riding." Assumpico added, "We strongly encourage all motorcycle riders and passengers to wear helmets and protective equipment. We also remind other motorists to be watchful for motorcyclists." According to the RI state police, NHTSA statistics show that nationwide the number of motorcycle fatalities nationwide increased by nearly 60 percent over the last 20 years.

Police spokesman Sgt. Vince Lewis said, "Phoenix police officers confirmed that the company...was contracted by ICE to perform transfers. ... Officers did not observe children, nor 'inspect' the facility." On Monday, Phoenix Councilwoman Kate Gallego said "police had returned to the facility over the weekend, after a media report raised questions about whether MVM had held [im]migrant children separated from their parents there," the article says. The piece notes that the "Health and Human Service's Office of Refugee Resettlement...awarded MVM an $8 million contract to provide 'emergency support services,' according to federal contract data."

Fatalities fell in almost every mode of transportation, with the exception of motorcycle deaths, which increased slightly. The decline in traffic deaths were attributed to the city's Vision Zero program. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said, "We will never rest on our laurels, and will keep fighting for the safety of our fellow New Yorkers," adding that the Senate's "failure to act on speed cams puts this progress, and the lives of school children, at risk." Bill Ferraro, President of the Brooklyn chapter of the American Bikers Aided Toward Education, a motorcycle advocacy group, said the city needs to do more to protect motorcyclists. The article mentions that the city has increased motorcycle enforcement with the Warm Weather Weekends initiative, where police checkpoints are set up to reduce reckless driving.

"The policy does not criminalise anything that was previously legal, and anything criminal is covered by existing legislation." Nottingham University Professor Louise Mullany, who was involved in the pilot program's adoption, said, "we were really shocked at how high the figures were in terms of people reporting the more serious end of crime, and that becoming part of a regular occurrence."

WANE says "the program will make one handheld metal detector device available for every 250 students in traditional public, charter and accredited non-public schools." The Indiana State Police and the Department of Administration will coordinated the program and those schools "that order are expected to receive them in time for the upcoming school year in mid-August." Holcomb said, "Controlling what comes into our school buildings is just one important part of keeping our schools safe, and our efforts to assist school corporations must be ongoing and evolving."

Amazon, Microsoft, and Facebook are developing the technology, and Amazon "has controversially lent its Recognition software to police departments in an effort to 'enable database matches.'" However, Geek says facial recognition isn't without "its upsides," as "the technology helped Maryland police arrest a suspect in last month's Capital Gazette newsroom shooting."

Entrepreneur Magazine <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071001iacp&r=7979436-ab91&l=022-8d2&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071001iacp&r=7979436-ab91&l=023-2c1&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071001iacp&r=7979436-ab91&l=024-e21&t=c> Share to Twitter (7/9, Field) provides an overview of artificial intelligence and says that while it "may sound futuristic and scary," Amazon generally believes "the benefits of AI outweigh the risk." Amazon has marketed its Rekognition service to law enforcement, but critics have "argued it could easily be misused and harm marginalized people." However, AWS GM of AI Dr. Matt Wood said, "We believe it is the wrong approach to impose a ban on promising new technologies because they might be used by bad actors for nefarious purposes in the future. ... The world would be a very different place if we had restricted people from buying computers because it was possible to use that computer to do harm."

The article highlights police robots which kill shooters with bombs, drones fitted with cameras and stun guns, and surveillance bots "with facial recognition and license-plate-scanning ability." Newsday writes that "the challenge of this new era of police technology will be to respect civil liberties and maximize the good applications of emerging tech while minimizing its scarier uses."

British officials have said that a couple who were sickened this month "had been poisoned with the same powerful nerve agent used in March, a few miles away, against a former Russian spy and his daughter. But while government officials have accused the Kremlin of responsibility for the first poisonings, until Monday they refrained from assigning blame for the second, though they acknowledged a strong possibility that the two were related."

British officials have said that a couple who were sickened this month "had been poisoned with the same powerful nerve agent used in March, a few miles away, against a former Russian spy and his daughter. But while government officials have accused the Kremlin of responsibility for the first poisonings, until Monday they refrained from assigning blame for the second, though they acknowledged a strong possibility that the two were related."

Share to Twitter (7/9, Perry) reports that the rise in motorcycle fatalities in Rhode Island has prompted state police to urge "motorcyclists to be careful, comply with rules of the road, and use helmets, even though most Rhode Island (RI) motorcyclists aren't required by law to wear them." In a press release, RI State Police Col. Ann Assumpico said, "We are extremely concerned about this increase in motorcycle fatalities, especially given that we're in the peak season for motorcycle riding." Assumpico added, "We strongly encourage all motorcycle riders and passengers to wear helmets and protective equipment. We also remind other motorists to be watchful for motorcyclists." According to the RI state police, NHTSA statistics show that nationwide the number of motorcycle fatalities nationwide increased by nearly 60 percent over the last 20 years.

Fatalities fell in almost every mode of transportation, with the exception of motorcycle deaths, which increased slightly. The decline in traffic deaths were attributed to the city's Vision Zero program. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said, "We will never rest on our laurels, and will keep fighting for the safety of our fellow New Yorkers," adding that the Senate's "failure to act on speed cams puts this progress, and the lives of school children, at risk." Bill Ferraro, President of the Brooklyn chapter of the American Bikers Aided Toward Education, a motorcycle advocacy group, said the city needs to do more to protect motorcyclists. The article mentions that the city has increased motorcycle enforcement with the Warm Weather Weekends initiative, where police checkpoints are set up to reduce reckless driving.

motorcycle fatalities in Rhode Island has prompted state police to urge "motorcyclists to be careful, comply with rules of the road, and use helmets, even though most Rhode Island (RI) motorcyclists aren't required by law to wear them." In a press release, RI State Police Col. Ann Assumpico said, "We are extremely concerned about this increase in motorcycle fatalities, especially given that we're in the peak season for motorcycle riding." Assumpico added, "We strongly encourage all motorcycle riders and passengers to wear helmets and protective equipment. We also remind other motorists to be watchful for motorcyclists." According to the RI state police, NHTSA statistics show that nationwide the number of motorcycle fatalities nationwide increased by nearly 60 percent over the last 20 years.

Police spokesman Sgt. Vince Lewis said, "Phoenix police officers confirmed that the company...was contracted by ICE to perform transfers. ... Officers did not observe children, nor 'inspect' the facility." On Monday, Phoenix Councilwoman Kate Gallego said "police had returned to the facility over the weekend, after a media report raised questions about whether MVM had held [im]migrant children separated from their parents there," the article says. Fatalities fell in almost every mode of transportation, with the exception of motorcycle deaths, which increased slightly. The decline in traffic deaths were attributed to the city's Vision Zero program. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said, "We will never rest on our laurels, and will keep fighting for the safety of our fellow New Yorkers," adding that the Senate's "failure to act on speed cams puts this progress, and the lives of school children, at risk." Bill Ferraro, President of the Brooklyn chapter of the American Bikers Aimed Toward Education, a motorcycle advocacy group, said the city needs to do more to protect motorcyclists. The article mentions that the city has increased motorcycle enforcement with the Warm Weather Weekends initiative, where police checkpoints are set up to reduce reckless driving.

Share to Twitter (7/9, Perry) reports that the rise in motorcycle fatalities in Rhode Island has prompted state police to urge "motorcyclists to be careful, comply with rules of the road, and use helmets, even though most Rhode Island (RI) motorcyclists aren't required by law to wear them." In a press release, RI State Police Col. Ann Assumpico said, "We are extremely concerned about this increase in motorcycle fatalities, especially given that we're in the peak season for motorcycle riding." Assumpico added, "We strongly encourage all motorcycle riders and passengers to wear helmets and protective equipment. We also remind other motorists to be watchful for motorcyclists." According to the RI state police, NHTSA statistics show that nationwide the number of motorcycle fatalities nationwide increased by nearly 60 percent over the last 20 years.

Police spokesman Sgt. Vince Lewis said, "Phoenix police officers confirmed that the company...was contracted by ICE to perform transfers. ... Officers did not observe children, nor 'inspect' the facility." On Monday, Phoenix Councilwoman Kate Gallego said "police had returned to the facility over the weekend, after a media report raised questions about whether MVM had held [im]migrant children separated from their parents there," the article says. The piece notes that the "Health and Human Service's Office of Refugee Resettlement...awarded MVM an $8 million contract to provide 'emergency support services,' according to federal contract data."

Fatalities fell in almost every mode of transportation, with the exception of motorcycle deaths, which increased slightly. The decline in traffic deaths were attributed to the city's Vision Zero program. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said, "We will never rest on our laurels, and will keep fighting for the safety of our fellow New Yorkers," adding that the Senate's "failure to act on speed cams puts this progress, and the lives of school children, at risk." Bill Ferraro, President of the Brooklyn chapter of the American Bikers Aided Toward Education, a motorcycle advocacy group, said the city needs to do more to protect motorcyclists. The article mentions that the city has increased motorcycle enforcement with the Warm Weather Weekends initiative, where police checkpoints are set up to reduce reckless driving.

Nottinghamshire, UK Police Pilot "Misogyny Hate Crime Policy."

"The policy does not criminalise anything that was previously legal, and anything criminal is covered by existing legislation." Nottingham University Professor Louise Mullany, who was involved in the pilot program's adoption, said, "we were really shocked at how high the figures were in terms of people reporting the more serious end of crime, and that becoming part of a regular occurrence."

WANE says "the program will make one handheld metal detector device available for every 250 students in traditional public, charter and accredited non-public schools." The Indiana State Police and the Department of Administration will coordinated the program and those schools "that order are expected to receive them in time for the upcoming school year in mid-August." Holcomb said, "Controlling what comes into our school buildings is just one important part of keeping our schools safe, and our efforts to assist school corporations must be ongoing and evolving."

Amazon, Microsoft, and Facebook are developing the technology, and Amazon "has controversially lent its Recognition software to police departments in an effort to 'enable database matches.'" However, Geek says facial recognition isn't without "its upsides," as "the technology helped Maryland police arrest a suspect in last month's Capital Gazette newsroom shooting."

Entrepreneur Magazine <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071001iacp&r=7968590-a3e7&l=022-8d2&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071001iacp&r=7968590-a3e7&l=023-2c1&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071001iacp&r=7968590-a3e7&l=024-e21&t=c> Share to Twitter (7/9, Field) provides an overview of artificial intelligence and says that while it "may sound futuristic and scary," Amazon generally believes "the benefits of AI outweigh the risk." Amazon has marketed its Rekognition service to law enforcement, but critics have "argued it could easily be misused and harm marginalized people." However, AWS GM of AI Dr. Matt Wood said, "We believe it is the wrong approach to impose a ban on promising new technologies because they might be used by bad actors for nefarious purposes in the future. ... The world would be a very different place if we had restricted people from buying computers because it was possible to use that computer to do harm."

The article highlights police robots which kill shooters with bombs, drones fitted with cameras and stun guns, and surveillance bots "with facial recognition and license-plate-scanning ability." Newsday writes that "the challenge of this new era of police technology will be to respect civil liberties and maximize the good applications of emerging tech while minimizing its scarier uses."

British officials have said that a couple who were sickened this month "had been poisoned with the same powerful nerve agent used in March, a few miles away, against a former Russian spy and his daughter. But while government officials have accused the Kremlin of responsibility for the first poisonings, until Monday they refrained from assigning blame for the second, though they acknowledged a strong possibility that the two were related."

Fatalities fell in almost every mode of transportation, with the exception of motorcycle deaths, which increased slightly. The decline in traffic deaths were attributed to the city's Vision Zero program. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said, "We will never rest on our laurels, and will keep fighting for the safety of our fellow New Yorkers," adding that the Senate's "failure to act on speed cams puts this progress, and the lives of school children, at risk." Bill Ferraro, President of the Brooklyn chapter of the American Bikers Aimed Toward Education, a motorcycle advocacy group, said the city needs to do more to protect motorcyclists. The article mentions that the city has increased motorcycle enforcement with the Warm Weather Weekends initiative, where police checkpoints are set up to reduce reckless driving.

motorcycle fatalities in Rhode Island has prompted state police to urge "motorcyclists to be careful, comply with rules of the road, and use helmets, even though most Rhode Island (RI) motorcyclists aren't required by law to wear them." In a press release, RI State Police Col. Ann Assumpico said, "We are extremely concerned about this increase in motorcycle fatalities, especially given that we're in the peak season for motorcycle riding." Assumpico added, "We strongly encourage all motorcycle riders and passengers to wear helmets and protective equipment. We also remind other motorists to be watchful for motorcyclists." According to the RI state police, NHTSA statistics show that nationwide the number of motorcycle fatalities nationwide increased by nearly 60 percent over the last 20 years.

Police spokesman Sgt. Vince Lewis said, "Phoenix police officers confirmed that the company...was contracted by ICE to perform transfers. ... Officers did not observe children, nor 'inspect' the facility." On Monday, Phoenix Councilwoman Kate Gallego said "police had returned to the facility over the weekend, after a media report raised questions about whether MVM had held [im]migrant children separated from their parents there," the article says. Fatalities fell in almost every mode of transportation, with the exception of motorcycle deaths, which increased slightly. The decline in traffic deaths were attributed to the city's Vision Zero program. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio said, "We will never rest on our laurels, and will keep fighting for the safety of our fellow New Yorkers," adding that the Senate's "failure to act on speed cams puts this progress, and the lives of school children, at risk." Bill Ferraro, President of the Brooklyn chapter of the American Bikers Aimed Toward Education, a motorcycle advocacy group, said the city needs to do more to protect motorcyclists. The article mentions that the city has increased motorcycle enforcement with the Warm Weather Weekends initiative, where police checkpoints are set up to reduce reckless driving.

SCHOOLS

South Florida Sun Sentinel: School threats spike after Parkland shootings, but cops are cracking down

One student warned on social media that he planted explosives in the parking lot of his West Boca high school. Another student made a threat on YouTube about shooting up his Coral Springs campus. And Miami-Dade public schools at one point got up to 50 threats a day, including one that led to the arrest of a 13-year-old Miami Lakes Middle student. Authorities have been scouring social media for threats against schools since the mass shooting Feb. 14 at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High in Parkland. And when they find those responsible, they are taking them to court.

MAJOR EVENTS

The Guardian: Trump UK visit: police to mobilise in numbers not seen since 2011 riots

Police are planning the biggest mobilisation of officers since the 2011 riots as thousands of people in the UK prepare to protest against the arrival this week of Donald Trump. Thousands of officers will be moving across the country to contain demonstrations against the US president, who arrives on Thursday and will visit London, Windsor and Scotland during the two-day trip.

Idaho Statesman: A week after stabbings, his city gives Boise's police chief hope 'to create good out of horror'

The emotional calluses of a 25-year career in law enforcement appeared to have been ripped away when Boise Police Chief Bill Bones stepped in front of the cameras at City Hall West on July 1. The towering, soft-spoken chief choked back tears as he described the horror of the night before - an "evil" attack that left the largest number of victims in an incident in department history. Nine people were stabbed, including six children, who were at or near a 3-year-old's birthday party at the Wylie Street Station Apartments just off State Street. All of the victims were members of refugee families from Syria, Iraq and Ethiopia.

IMMIGRATION

New York Times: Border Patrol's last line of defense? It isn't at the border

The Border Patrol is charged with stopping migrants from illegally crossing over the southwestern frontier and, even more important, from getting into the interior of the country. Getting through the heavily patrolled 100-mile zone beyond the border can be just as difficult as getting into the country. So while people often think of the border as akin to a goal line that migrants are trying to cross, in many ways it's more like the 50-yard line.

TECHNOLOGY

Orlando Sentinel: Orlando police plan to extend test of Amazon facial-recognition software

The Orlando Police Department plans to continue its test of Amazon's facial recognition software, despite outcry from civil rights groups concerned that the technology could be abused. A memo informed Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer and the city council of the decision Friday, explaining more time was needed to make a "thoughtful, precise and comprehensive recommendation" to Dyer on whether or not the city should eventually purchase the technology.

CRIME STRATEGY

Chicago Tribune: With high-tech help, there's been less bloodshed in Chicago this year, but results are mixed on the West Side

At the halfway mark of 2018, shootings in Chicago overall have fallen by double-digit numbers for a second consecutive year, while homicides have dropped even further - a contrast to 2016 when violence hit levels unseen for two decades. But the violence is still outpacing 2015 and 2014 levels as some communities scattered mostly through the West and Southwest sides continue to struggle to make headway. While the Police Department has heralded new technological advances for playing a key part in the improved overall numbers, the success has been mixed, most notably in the stark contrast in results in the city's two historically most violent districts.

COMMUNITY POLICING

Washington Post: Two years after Philando Castile's death, programs aim to transform relations between police, residents

Scenes like this have been taking place across the Twin Cities thanks to the Lights On program, believed to be the first of its kind in the country. Instead of writing tickets for minor equipment problems, police officers are authorized to issue $50 coupons so motorists can have those problems fixed at area auto shops. Twenty participating police departments have given out approximately 660 coupons in a little more than a year. The program is among several changes after Philando Castile's death that are aimed at improving the lives of low-income residents here and transforming how police interact with them.

GANGS

Los Angeles Times: California moving away from gang injunctions amid criticism, falling crime rates

Recent court orders prohibiting police in Los Angeles and elsewhere in California from enforcing gang injunctions are prompting law enforcement leaders to rethink how they employ the tool that for decades was considered a critical weapon in the state's war on gangs. The shift away from the injunctions, which can severely restrict a suspected gang member's movements, relationships and even clothing choice in certain neighborhoods, comes amid growing criticism that they are overly broad and often ensnare people who have a tenuous connection to gang life. At the same time, gang crime has sharply declined since its peak in the 1990s, leading some law enforcement officials to question if the court orders are still needed.

UNITED KINGDOM

The Guardian: UK police chiefs urged to adopt harassment of women as hate crime

Police chiefs are being urged to recognise public harassment of women as a gender hate crime across the UK, as research finds overwhelming public support for the policy after a two-year pilot scheme in Nottingham. Campaigners believe the National Police Chiefs' Council should be more open to the strategy as part of the shift in approach kick-started by the #MeToo movement. The NPCC will discuss the case for adopting the policy across England, Wales and Northern Ireland on Wednesday.

One student warned on social media that he planted explosives in the parking lot of his West Boca high school. Another student made a threat on YouTube about shooting up his Coral Springs campus. And Miami-Dade public schools at one point got up to 50 threats a day, including one that led to the arrest of a 13-year-old Miami Lakes Middle student. Authorities have been scouring social media for threats against schools since the mass shooting Feb. 14 at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High in Parkland. And when they find those responsible, they are taking them to court.

Police are planning the biggest mobilisation of officers since the 2011 riots as thousands of people in the UK prepare to protest against the arrival this week of Donald Trump. Thousands of officers will be moving across the country to contain demonstrations against the US president, who arrives on Thursday and will visit London, Windsor and Scotland during the two-day trip.

The emotional calluses of a 25-year career in law enforcement appeared to have been ripped away when Boise Police Chief Bill Bones stepped in front of the cameras at City Hall West on July 1. The towering, soft-spoken chief choked back tears as he described the horror of the night before - an "evil" attack that left the largest number of victims in an incident in department history. Nine people were stabbed, including six children, who were at or near a 3-year-old's birthday party at the Wylie Street Station Apartments just off State Street. All of the victims were members of refugee families from Syria, Iraq and Ethiopia.

The Border Patrol is charged with stopping migrants from illegally crossing over the southwestern frontier and, even more important, from getting into the interior of the country. Getting through the heavily patrolled 100-mile zone beyond the border can be just as difficult as getting into the country. So while people often think of the border as akin to a goal line that migrants are trying to cross, in many ways it's more like the 50-yard line.

The Orlando Police Department plans to continue its test of Amazon's facial recognition software, despite outcry from civil rights groups concerned that the technology could be abused. A memo informed Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer and the city council of the decision Friday, explaining more time was needed to make a "thoughtful, precise and comprehensive recommendation" to Dyer on whether or not the city should eventually purchase the technology.

At the halfway mark of 2018, shootings in Chicago overall have fallen by double-digit numbers for a second consecutive year, while homicides have dropped even further - a contrast to 2016 when violence hit levels unseen for two decades. But the violence is still outpacing 2015 and 2014 levels as some communities scattered mostly through the West and Southwest sides continue to struggle to make headway. While the Police Department has heralded new technological advances for playing a key part in the improved overall numbers, the success has been mixed, most notably in the stark contrast in results in the city's two historically most violent districts.

Scenes like this have been taking place across the Twin Cities thanks to the Lights On program, believed to be the first of its kind in the country. Instead of writing tickets for minor equipment problems, police officers are authorized to issue $50 coupons so motorists can have those problems fixed at area auto shops. Twenty participating police departments have given out approximately 660 coupons in a little more than a year. The program is among several changes after Philando Castile's death that are aimed at improving the lives of low-income residents here and transforming how police interact with them.

Recent court orders prohibiting police in Los Angeles and elsewhere in California from enforcing gang injunctions are prompting law enforcement leaders to rethink how they employ the tool that for decades was considered a critical weapon in the state's war on gangs. The shift away from the injunctions, which can severely restrict a suspected gang member's movements, relationships and even clothing choice in certain neighborhoods, comes amid growing criticism that they are overly broad and often ensnare people who have a tenuous connection to gang life. At the same time, gang crime has sharply declined since its peak in the 1990s, leading some law enforcement officials to question if the court orders are still needed.

Police chiefs are being urged to recognise public harassment of women as a gender hate crime across the UK, as research finds overwhelming public support for the policy after a two-year pilot scheme in Nottingham. Campaigners believe the National Police Chiefs' Council should be more open to the strategy as part of the shift in approach kick-started by the #MeToo movement. The NPCC will discuss the case for adopting the policy across England, Wales and Northern Ireland on Wednesday.

SCHOOLS

South Florida Sun Sentinel: School threats spike after Parkland shootings, but cops are cracking down

One student warned on social media that he planted explosives in the parking lot of his West Boca high school. Another student made a threat on YouTube about shooting up his Coral Springs campus. And Miami-Dade public schools at one point got up to 50 threats a day, including one that led to the arrest of a 13-year-old Miami Lakes Middle student. Authorities have been scouring social media for threats against schools since the mass shooting Feb. 14 at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High in Parkland. And when they find those responsible, they are taking them to court.

The Guardian: Trump UK visit: police to mobilise in numbers not seen since 2011 riots

Police are planning the biggest mobilisation of officers since the 2011 riots as thousands of people in the UK prepare to protest against the arrival this week of Donald Trump. Thousands of officers will be moving across the country to contain demonstrations against the US president, who arrives on Thursday and will visit London, Windsor and Scotland during the two-day trip.

Idaho Statesman: A week after stabbings, his city gives Boise's police chief hope 'to create good out of horror'

The emotional calluses of a 25-year career in law enforcement appeared to have been ripped away when Boise Police Chief Bill Bones stepped in front of the cameras at City Hall West on July 1. The towering, soft-spoken chief choked back tears as he described the horror of the night before - an "evil" attack that left the largest number of victims in an incident in department history. Nine people were stabbed, including six children, who were at or near a 3-year-old's birthday party at the Wylie Street Station Apartments just off State Street. All of the victims were members of refugee families from Syria, Iraq and Ethiopia.

IMMIGRATION

New York Times: Border Patrol's last line of defense? It isn't at the border

The Border Patrol is charged with stopping migrants from illegally crossing over the southwestern frontier and, even more important, from getting into the interior of the country. Getting through the heavily patrolled 100-mile zone beyond the border can be just as difficult as getting into the country. So while people often think of the border as akin to a goal line that migrants are trying to cross, in many ways it's more like the 50-yard line.

TECHNOLOGY

Orlando Sentinel: Orlando police plan to extend test of Amazon facial-recognition software

The Orlando Police Department plans to continue its test of Amazon's facial recognition software, despite outcry from civil rights groups concerned that the technology could be abused. A memo informed Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer and the city council of the decision Friday, explaining more time was needed to make a "thoughtful, precise and comprehensive recommendation" to Dyer on whether or not the city should eventually purchase the technology.

CRIME STRATEGY

Chicago Tribune: With high-tech help, there's been less bloodshed in Chicago this year, but results are mixed on the West Side

At the halfway mark of 2018, shootings in Chicago overall have fallen by double-digit numbers for a second consecutive year, while homicides have dropped even further - a contrast to 2016 when violence hit levels unseen for two decades. But the violence is still outpacing 2015 and 2014 levels as some communities scattered mostly through the West and Southwest sides continue to struggle to make headway. While the Police Department has heralded new technological advances for playing a key part in the improved overall numbers, the success has been mixed, most notably in the stark contrast in results in the city's two historically most violent districts.

COMMUNITY POLICING

Washington Post: Two years after Philando Castile's death, programs aim to transform relations between police, residents

Scenes like this have been taking place across the Twin Cities thanks to the Lights On program, believed to be the first of its kind in the country. Instead of writing tickets for minor equipment problems, police officers are authorized to issue $50 coupons so motorists can have those problems fixed at area auto shops. Twenty participating police departments have given out approximately 660 coupons in a little more than a year. The program is among several changes after Philando Castile's death that are aimed at improving the lives of low-income residents here and transforming how police interact with them.

GANGS

Los Angeles Times: California moving away from gang injunctions amid criticism, falling crime rates

Recent court orders prohibiting police in Los Angeles and elsewhere in California from enforcing gang injunctions are prompting law enforcement leaders to rethink how they employ the tool that for decades was considered a critical weapon in the state's war on gangs. The shift away from the injunctions, which can severely restrict a suspected gang member's movements, relationships and even clothing choice in certain neighborhoods, comes amid growing criticism that they are overly broad and often ensnare people who have a tenuous connection to gang life. At the same time, gang crime has sharply declined since its peak in the 1990s, leading some law enforcement officials to question if the court orders are still needed.

UNITED KINGDOM

The Guardian: UK police chiefs urged to adopt harassment of women as hate crime

Police chiefs are being urged to recognise public harassment of women as a gender hate crime across the UK, as research finds overwhelming public support for the policy after a two-year pilot scheme in Nottingham. Campaigners believe the National Police Chiefs' Council should be more open to the strategy as part of the shift in approach kick-started by the #MeToo movement. The NPCC will discuss the case for adopting the policy across England, Wales and Northern Ireland on Wednesday.

One student warned on social media that he planted explosives in the parking lot of his West Boca high school. Another student made a threat on YouTube about shooting up his Coral Springs campus. And Miami-Dade public schools at one point got up to 50 threats a day, including one that led to the arrest of a 13-year-old Miami Lakes Middle student. Authorities have been scouring social media for threats against schools since the mass shooting Feb. 14 at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High in Parkland. And when they find those responsible, they are taking them to court.

Police are planning the biggest mobilisation of officers since the 2011 riots as thousands of people in the UK prepare to protest against the arrival this week of Donald Trump. Thousands of officers will be moving across the country to contain demonstrations against the US president, who arrives on Thursday and will visit London, Windsor and Scotland during the two-day trip.

The emotional calluses of a 25-year career in law enforcement appeared to have been ripped away when Boise Police Chief Bill Bones stepped in front of the cameras at City Hall West on July 1. The towering, soft-spoken chief choked back tears as he described the horror of the night before - an "evil" attack that left the largest number of victims in an incident in department history. Nine people were stabbed, including six children, who were at or near a 3-year-old's birthday party at the Wylie Street Station Apartments just off State Street. All of the victims were members of refugee families from Syria, Iraq and Ethiopia.

The Border Patrol is charged with stopping migrants from illegally crossing over the southwestern frontier and, even more important, from getting into the interior of the country. Getting through the heavily patrolled 100-mile zone beyond the border can be just as difficult as getting into the country. So while people often think of the border as akin to a goal line that migrants are trying to cross, in many ways it's more like the 50-yard line.

Orlando Sentinel: Orlando police plan to extend test of Amazon facial-recognition software
<[The Orlando Police Department plans to continue its test of Amazon's facial recognition software, despite outcry from civil rights groups concerned that the technology could be abused. A memo informed Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer and the city council of the decision Friday, explaining more time was needed to make a "thoughtful, precise and comprehensive recommendation" to Dyer on whether or not the city should eventually purchase the technology.](https://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2Bjso9e57TEQA-2FDTodiz1MRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2Bh9dAhtgqyFLGgX-2BFNXT87ulag6OcM8XC-2B-2BlWcgOi-2BlDC8a3DCIRkatu5Br-2BYmxZQ_mHfaMGDSSOiBrZOSBeca8NqECsurHdPguJcPtyxJiQS9u03zHRltFPkztxngrYLRgu1MisqP4xHzKAU5RWotab3xopQ3I1SUm4jaWJDLviGjP1-2B72MAC7JlnNHqSSJaLqUMs15jxTwWWCbW6q6t-2BWs-2BFmA7utvDdz-2BdJr5wQJNkAj59sU333eF2ZVB4cc5XSF4PdmLLm9taiOdeDvRly3lFQSxXnjHRIYb0asqMgDVB0C-2FsXxRzdSQ7On2GA54V5bGd0OC33DjoswggwJfwsMRNxtHR88z0L57vAbNalmdz7HEX5CpskYRie-2BE4djoHGd7GhBtP-2B-2BwUKKRadn4OIw-3D-3D><div data-bbox=)

<[Chicago Tribune: With high-tech help, there's been less bloodshed in Chicago this year, but results are mixed on the West Side
<\[At the halfway mark of 2018, shootings in Chicago overall have fallen by double-digit numbers for a second consecutive year, while homicides have dropped even further - a contrast to 2016 when violence hit levels unseen for two decades. But the violence is still outpacing 2015 and 2014 levels as some communities scattered mostly through the West and Southwest sides continue to struggle to make headway. While the Police Department has heralded new technological advances for playing a key part in the improved overall numbers, the success has been mixed, most notably in the stark contrast in results in the city's two historically most violent districts.\]\(https://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2Bjso9e57TEQA-2FDTodiz1MRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2Bh9dAhtgqyFLGgX-2BFNXT87ulag6OcM8XC-2B-2BlWcgOi-2BlAc-2BvvXBAr-2FyCzXdxR99150_mHfaMGDSSOiBrZOSBeca8NqECsurHdPguJcPtyxJiQS9u03zHRltFPkztxngrYLRgu1MisqP4xHzKAU5RWotab3xopQ3I1SUm4jaWJDLviGjP1-2B72MAC7JlnNHqSSJaLqUMs15jxTwWWCbW6q6t-2BWs-2BFmA7utvDdz-2BdJr5wQJNqMZDG-2BSgahcOnSQZtBM7GbFzLdMJiqM2zMz4vV-2B6muZ9MVP-2BgM-2FllkYUPm6GWYPzbDSURRK6PZmOuaybjJB3aktSbEUK96E2EMLBPhZXWM7MI2OI4nmkh3hAmoZxiTBZPhKtGsDamWOyHhhzkyFKZVCLQhAmYgpHm5Z3WKNRRig-3D-3D><div data-bbox=)

Scenes like this have been taking place across the Twin Cities thanks to the Lights On program, believed to be the first of its kind in the country. Instead of writing tickets for minor equipment problems, police officers are authorized to issue $50 coupons so motorists can have those problems fixed at area auto shops. Twenty participating police departments have given out approximately 660 coupons in a little more than a year. The program is among several changes after Philando Castile's death that are aimed at improving the lives of low-income residents here and transforming how police interact with them.

Recent court orders prohibiting police in Los Angeles and elsewhere in California from enforcing gang injunctions are prompting law enforcement leaders to rethink how they employ the tool that for decades was considered a critical weapon in the state's war on gangs. The shift away from the injunctions, which can severely restrict a suspected gang member's movements, relationships and even clothing choice in certain neighborhoods, comes amid growing criticism that they are overly broad and often ensnare people who have a tenuous connection to gang life. At the same time, gang crime has sharply declined since its peak in the 1990s, leading some law enforcement officials to question if the court orders are still needed.

Police chiefs are being urged to recognise public harassment of women as a gender hate crime across the UK, as research finds overwhelming public support for the policy after a two-year pilot scheme in Nottingham. Campaigners believe the National Police Chiefs' Council should be more open to the strategy as part of the shift in approach kick-started by the #MeToo movement. The NPCC will discuss the case for adopting the policy across England, Wales and Northern Ireland on Wednesday.

One student warned on social media that he planted explosives in the parking lot of his West Boca high school. Another student made a threat on YouTube about shooting up his Coral Springs campus. And Miami-Dade public schools at one point got up to 50 threats a day, including one that led to the arrest of a 13-year-old Miami Lakes Middle student. Authorities have been scouring social media for threats against schools since the mass shooting Feb. 14 at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High in Parkland. And when they find those responsible, they are taking them to court.

Police are planning the biggest mobilisation of officers since the 2011 riots as thousands of people in the UK prepare to protest against the arrival this week of Donald Trump. Thousands of officers will be moving across the country to contain demonstrations against the US president, who arrives on Thursday and will visit London, Windsor and Scotland during the two-day trip.

The emotional calluses of a 25-year career in law enforcement appeared to have been ripped away when Boise Police Chief Bill Bones stepped in front of the cameras at City Hall West on July 1. The towering, soft-spoken chief choked back tears as he described the horror of the night before - an "evil" attack that left the largest number of victims in an incident in department history. Nine people were stabbed, including six children, who were at or near a 3-year-old's birthday party at the Wylie Street Station Apartments just off State Street. All of the victims were members of refugee families from Syria, Iraq and Ethiopia.

The Border Patrol is charged with stopping migrants from illegally crossing over the southwestern frontier and, even more important, from getting into the interior of the country. Getting through the heavily patrolled 100-mile zone beyond the border can be just as difficult as getting into the country. So while people often think of the border as akin to a goal line that migrants are trying to cross, in many ways it's more like the 50-yard line.

<[Chicago Tribune: With high-tech help, there's been less bloodshed in Chicago this year, but results are mixed on the West Side
<\[At the halfway mark of 2018, shootings in Chicago overall have fallen by double-digit numbers for a second consecutive year, while homicides have dropped even further - a contrast to 2016 when violence hit levels unseen for two decades. But the violence is still outpacing 2015 and 2014 levels as some communities scattered mostly through the West and Southwest sides continue to struggle to make headway. While the Police Department has heralded new technological advances for playing a key part in the improved overall numbers, the success has been mixed, most notably in the stark contrast in results in the city's two historically most violent districts.\]\(https://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2BJso9e57TEQA-2FDTodizlMRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2B7c-2FQ2StI7WqWcn-2FwyKzeKtTvDy3HYFZ203bUenOtTI69zQ-2BWFks1SYE9dEwWOQWe uuIJaiSyymF3tUvgSwKhglN08jJHOHl9kXJLpwQrjDBvX5nq-2FDow5ojX4-2BB9q8BtZ9AJeamB6t7JnrX0qpsKl173MaYMu08-2F0o41E4FX3Ys2Zu6E4Rgha9riewmCjqNW2ZPZ2dLxQxXh0mU2CQF6gzaVuOwPTKk3f1xZ7QeKDGB18XVulrfIddgat-2Buoglf-2Fx1rscg056MVgDeUilVe5FRRh63eyaNgu3pdmciQ5HPJDZwKyVwbji2bCJZSO-2BJctInaReGZBRTr3bPzybtGQIMomsY4fz8LCGoyrCAJl-2B0xgO7dsPmd2NNb-2B5eFMQ-2BCi0NW9yxG2dD7CA-2FNrWh3UmcQ-3D-3D><div data-bbox=)

Scenes like this have been taking place across the Twin Cities thanks to the Lights On program, believed to be the first of its kind in the country. Instead of writing tickets for minor equipment problems, police officers are authorized to issue $50 coupons so motorists can have those problems fixed at area auto shops. Twenty participating police departments have given out approximately 660 coupons in a little more than a year. The program is among several changes after Philando Castile's death that are aimed at improving the lives of low-income residents here and transforming how police interact with them.

Recent court orders prohibiting police in Los Angeles and elsewhere in California from enforcing gang injunctions are prompting law enforcement leaders to rethink how they employ the tool that for decades was considered a critical weapon in the state's war on gangs. The shift away from the injunctions, which can severely restrict a suspected gang member's movements, relationships and even clothing choice in certain neighborhoods, comes amid growing criticism that they are overly broad and often ensnare people who have a tenuous connection to gang life. At the same time, gang crime has sharply declined since its peak in the 1990s, leading some law enforcement officials to question if the court orders are still needed.

Police chiefs are being urged to recognise public harassment of women as a gender hate crime across the UK, as research finds overwhelming public support for the policy after a two-year pilot scheme in Nottingham. Campaigners believe the National Police Chiefs' Council should be more open to the strategy as part of the shift in approach kick-started by the #MeToo movement. The NPCC will discuss the case for adopting the policy across England, Wales and Northern Ireland on Wednesday.

Violations also include "sale within 100 yards of schools and pictorial warnings on all tobacco product packaging (currently 85% of pack area)." Sambandh Health Foundation (SHF) refreshed the police on COTPA. Also reporting on the fines are the Press Trust of India <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=007-9e9&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=008-179&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=009-fca&t=c> Share to Twitter (7/11) and the Shillong (IND) Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=00a-aad&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=00b-0b9&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=00c-17e&t=c> Share to Twitter (7/10)

Burlington, North Carolina Police Implement NIBRS.

The Burlington (NC) Times-News <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=00d-6ef&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=00e-7b2&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2018071101iacp&r=8737284-ff20&l=00f-01a&t=c> Share to Twitter (7/10) reports that "the Burlington Police Department is the first in North Carolina to implement a new crime reporting system, the department said Tuesday, July 10." The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is reported, details about crimes and relationships of victims to offenders." The Times-News says "Burlington police, working with the department's records system vendor, began preparing for the transition in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are better allocated to best protect the community.”

The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is reported, details about crimes and relationships of victims to offenders." The Times-News says "Burlington police, working with the department's records system vendor, began preparing for the transition in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are better allocated to best protect the community.”

Department is the first in North Carolina to implement a new crime reporting system, the department said Tuesday, July 10." The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is reported, details about crimes and relationships of victims to offenders." The Times-News says "Burlington police, working with the department's records system vendor, began preparing for the transition in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are better allocated to best protect the community."

Department is the first in North Carolina to implement a new crime reporting system, the department said Tuesday, July 10." The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is

in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are better allocated to best protect the community."

The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is reported, details about crimes and relationships of victims to offenders." The Times-News says "Burlington police, working with the department's records system vendor, began preparing for the transition in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are

(7/10) reports that "the Burlington Police Department is the first in North Carolina to implement a new crime reporting system, the department said Tuesday, July 10." The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is reported, details about crimes and relationships of victims to offenders." The Times-News says "Burlington police, working with the department's records system vendor, began preparing for the transition in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are better allocated to best protect the community."

The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is reported, details about crimes and relationships of victims to offenders." The Times-News says "Burlington police, working with the department's records system vendor, began preparing for the transition in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are

Department is the first in North Carolina to implement a new crime reporting system, the department said Tuesday, July 10." The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is

in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are better allocated to best protect the community."

Department is the first in North Carolina to implement a new crime reporting system, the department said Tuesday, July 10." The Times-News explains that "this system, known today as National Incident-Based Reporting System, gathers more comprehensive data by expanding what is

in January." The department said, "This transition is an important piece of the Burlington Police Department's overall goal of Intelligence-Led Policing. ... ILP is using robust and accurate data to determine enforcement priorities in a scientific manner by which limited resources are better allocated to best protect the community."

Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer explained, "I think we didn't have enough time to finish the testing that we wanted to do to see if we could perfect, along with Amazon, the technology for facial recognition, using it in crowds." He "said Rekognition will be used in Orlando to incorporate extra technology-based policing to get more criminals off the streets, stressing that the service will not be used for investigative purposes." According to Fox News, civil rights organizations and more than "100 Amazon employees [have] demanded...that the company stop selling the facial-recognition software to law enforcement agencies."

Michael Dewayne Dennis "was still in the hospital and expected to survive as of late Thursday, a Houston police spokesman said." According to the Chronicle, "Gunfire broke out around 6 a.m. Wednesday in the 6100 block of Grapevine, where the Drug Enforcement Administration and Immigration and Customs Enforcement's Homeland Security Investigations branch spearheaded a raid looking for guns and drugs," and "when three agents forced their way into one of the buildings, they spotted the suspect carrying a gun, according to Houston police." The man "allegedly refused to obey their verbal commands, authorities said," and court records indicate "he threatened two agents with a weapon." The Chronicle adds, "Fearing for their lives, at least one of the lawmen opened fire."

590-65df&l=02b-2df&t=c> (7/12, Raffa) reports in continuing coverage that the Orlando Police Department once again will test "Amazon's controversial facial recognition software...despite widespread criticism and privacy concerns by civil rights groups after the first sixth-month trial period ended late last month." Orlando Mayor Buddy Dyer explained, "I think we didn't have enough time to finish the testing that we wanted to do to see if we could perfect, along with Amazon, the technology for facial recognition, using it in crowds." He "said Rekognition will be used in Orlando to incorporate extra technology-based policing to get more criminals off the streets, stressing that the service will not be used for investigative purposes." According to Fox News, civil rights organizations and more than "100 Amazon employees [have] demanded...that the company stop selling the facial-recognition software to law enforcement agencies."

PUTIN' ON THE CHARM

The Story

This week on "The Bachelor": President Trump and Russian President Putin are in exotic Finland for their first one-on-one <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=497c665b3519ddc5d66bad0421a66880fd563e3842570b67622a494374ba89a13103a16bd812ad48908937618a364d9ea5485501e285dd64>> .

Why Finland?

The country's been a neutral host to a few US-Russia meetings, including one near the end of the Cold War. But some Finns are tired of the neutral host vibe and came out to protest <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=497c665b3519ddc5c9f1d3635191336ba44169c3b5df1ac15d8484a9cdc03f4d9c1606ff6156e474591036bf8228fa84aac2f01ce29bf26e>> .

Why is this meeting a big deal?

Because Russia and the West have had frosty relations for years. Things blew up in 2014 when Russia annexed Crimea
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=497c665b3519ddc5de4774dc26ab8db931296007ae1cff23f0bb49d26988cc42a2a2f76cc725ee7bdf620ab1fb64a124d31ef67b6377b7c5>> . The West said 'nyet ok' and sanctioned the country. And kicked it out of international orgs like the G8

Is that all?

Nope. This meeting comes days after special counsel Robert Mueller - who's looking into whether the Trump campaign colluded with Russia - indicted

Trump is throwing out the old diplomatic rule book. And leaving many Western allies on edge - especially after a tense NATO summit <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=d8721325f1221a164ef9eebb981d9b53c0be3d08672f6c5325e98a25787ce14a192580eac11c7ff3d02cd36f0445b127dc0c00db4b8800e1>> . This one-on-one with Putin gives Russia more legitimacy on the world stage than it's had in years. TBD what Trump gets in return.

Movie, meet real life. Yesterday, we got more info on what's been going on with Iran's nuclear program
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=78e68cc77b434fe8a5c8fd6bba737fca238a55c95a6c022162208cd6cc3775beb7817b26ed0a04e1d6fe4139eb62bae6481a67f6f816b763>> . Reminder: earlier this year, Israel's PM said Israeli agents broke into an Iranian warehouse and stole tens of thousands of documents. Now we're getting a sneak peek. The docs apparently show that Iran had been secretly trying to build nuclear weapons. And that it used a military base to conduct explosions tests - avoiding international inspectors. There's no proof in the docs that Iran violated the 2015 nuclear deal. But Israel said this shows that the country will likely try to revamp the program ASAP.

This weekend, gov-backed forces attacked a university in the country's capital. Let's back up: earlier this year, people started protesting the gov's changes to a social security program. Which turned into protests over gov repression. Hundreds of people have been killed since the start of the violence. This weekend, forces fired on students who had been protesting the gov, killing two people and injuring at least 10 others. People are calling for early elections and for the prez to step down. In other news of unpopular leaders, Haiti

This weekend, the country's prime minister resigned a week after deadly protests in the country. Here's what's going on: the gov decided to raise fuel prices by up to 51% to balance the country's budget and get some back up from the IMF. But a lot of Haitians weren't down. Now, the prez has to name a new PM - and the IMF recommends taking changes like this slow.

PUTIN' ON THE CHARM

The Story

This week on "The Bachelor": President Trump and Russian President Putin are in exotic Finland for their first one-on-one <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=d8d614ab5a2ec28bd3801e8f9ce3773953b089c9001bebea0b683bf2b13caa090d4a3f1bf3cdc7b24f1d63cbc54971d3fd795e7f285ffcla>> .

Why Finland?

The country's been a neutral host to a few US-Russia meetings, including one near the end of the Cold War. But some Finns are tired of the neutral host vibe and came out to protest <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=d8d614ab5a2ec28bb3cc2f2a6cd93cd6e60cc6bd7e16ee33da76e109481912e82e11ee5e0e6c6fc255b8b7cb5b8cfd0da817582b44f08440>> .

Why is this meeting a big deal?

Because Russia and the West have had frosty relations for years. Things blew up in 2014 when Russia annexed Crimea
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=d8d614ab5a2ec28bd9c9a9f62f761778fa674e0609dd0e9e278c599aa2db09abbe7640324e56d3cf00c64b55f50d7f4179d93a00a28e3d95>> . The West said 'nyet ok' and sanctioned the country. And kicked it out of international orgs like the G8
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=d8d614ab5a2ec28b85d58153a4c8b18f1bc510912f2226c64178476f4739266b9ef5489f99a19bd4345b85c941a4566008a55fbd a79413a5>> (now called the G7). Then in 2016, Russia attacked
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=d8d614ab5a2ec28ba49bdb6b053e97bc11f97994338217c2c3333ee3911b1a64c03f06e157006625486cf82adc9188bc7d677c98587ddf78>> the US election - in part to help Trump win.

Is that all?

Nope. This meeting comes days after special counsel Robert Mueller - who's looking into whether the Trump campaign colluded with Russia - indicted <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=2927044f2b500c00d132dd0a380717f1f0a21614101c0c423497f8e51f83021a9418f953ec168dc8bb4aae031a80a50cedf2c6474bc884b9>> 12 Russian intelligence agents for hacking the DNC in 2016. Got it. So what's on the agenda?

Things like Ukraine
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=2927044f2b500c00b9658393c8931bfff8c378ff62c630ad4712056aa530fd0ebac9c1b81d8aad14c45d0a8e63787cb8ac89e9ad740a3c20>> , the Syrian civil war

Trump is throwing out the old diplomatic rule book. And leaving many Western allies on edge - especially after a tense NATO summit <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=2927044f2b500c009ad1a362f40a94c6f6937fb51486dda999e241130409c353f03d8c52b920f05c20df28c4a131f22e57d9e76a632788f>> . This one-on-one with Putin gives Russia more legitimacy on the world stage than it's had in years. TBD what Trump gets in return.

Movie, meet real life. Yesterday, we got more info on what's been going on with Iran's nuclear program
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=a4ffd88bff6ef83063c3f3398fd7e15bb62e32386cc55ablccfd2c1dec418c824ec24056c5996062f3afe10ca29ce86aa3cb23cd3854fc3>> . Reminder: earlier this year, Israel's PM said Israeli agents broke into an Iranian warehouse and stole tens of thousands of documents. Now we're getting a sneak peek. The docs apparently show that Iran had been secretly trying to build nuclear weapons. And that it used a military base to conduct explosions tests - avoiding international inspectors. There's no proof in the docs that Iran violated the 2015 nuclear deal. But Israel said this shows that the country will likely try to revamp the program ASAP.

This weekend, gov-backed forces attacked a university in the country's capital. Let's back up: earlier this year, people started protesting the gov's changes to a social security program. Which turned into protests over gov repression. Hundreds of people have been killed since the start of the violence. This weekend, forces fired on students who had been protesting the gov, killing two people and injuring at least 10 others. People are calling for early elections and for the prez to step down. In other news of unpopular leaders, Haiti

This weekend, the country's prime minister resigned a week after deadly protests in the country. Here's what's going on: the gov decided to raise fuel prices by up to 51% to balance the country's budget and get some back up from the IMF. But a lot of Haitians weren't down. Now, the prez has to name a new PM - and the IMF recommends taking changes like this slow.

PUTIN' ON THE CHARM

The Story

This week on "The Bachelor": President Trump and Russian President Putin are in exotic Finland for their first one-on-one <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479>.

Why Finland?

The country's been a neutral host to a few US-Russia meetings, including one near the end of the Cold War. But some Finns are tired of the neutral host vibe and came out to protest <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479>.

Why is this meeting a big deal?

Because Russia and the West have had frosty relations for years. Things blew up in 2014 when Russia annexed Crimea <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> (now called the Crimea Crisis). Trump may or may not ask for those 12 Russian agents to be extradited. And Putin might try to get the US to acknowledge <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> in the US election - in part to help Trump win.

Is that all?

Hope. This meeting comes days after special counsel Robert Mueller - who's looking into whether the Trump campaign colluded with Russia - indicated <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> 12 Russian intelligence agents for hacking the DNC in 2016. The same group of ops that may reportedly be involved with the recent nerve agent attacks <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> in the UK.

Got it. So what's on the agenda?

Things like Ukraine <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479>, the Syrian civil war <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479>, and nuclear arms control <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479>.

Trump is throwing out the old diplomatic rule book. And leaving many Western allies on edge - especially after a tense NATO summit <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479>. This one-on-one with Putin gives Russia more legitimacy on the world stage than it's had in years. TBD what Trump gets in return.

Yesterday, France's Les Bleus kicked past Croatia to become World Cup champs <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> for the first time in 20 years. Merit, Mhape. Pussy Riot <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> showed up on the field to call a penalty on Russia (the host country) for its policies toward political dissent. But in case you missed the World Cup, it might have been because you were watching tennis. Serbia's Novak Djokovic <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> took the 1st Wimbledon...for the fourth time. And Germany's seagull Werner beat out Serena Williams - who was playing for all the more <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> out there.

What to say when you rewatch all of the "Ocean's" movies...

Movie, meet real life. Yesterday, we got more info on what's been going on with Iran's nuclear program <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479>. Reminder: earlier this year, Israel's PM said Israeli agents broke into an Iranian warehouse and stole tens of thousands of documents. Now we're getting a sneak peek. The docs apparently show that Iran had been secretly trying to build nuclear weapons. And that it used a military base to conduct explosions tests - avoiding international inspectors. There's no proof in the docs that Iran violated the 2015 nuclear deal. But Israel said this shows that the country will likely try to renege the program ADAP.

What people are watching...

Nicaragua <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479>. This weekend, go-backed forces attacked a university in the country's capital. Let's back up: earlier this year, people started protesting the gov's changes to a social security program. Which turned into protests over gun possession. Hundreds of people have been killed since the start of the violence. This weekend, forces fired on students who had been protesting the gov, killing two people and injuring at least 10 others. People are calling for early elections and for the prez to step down. In other news of unpopular leaders, Haiti <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?page=47&id=51354557084148986d46317d10e5ab1d0161e4827075810c9316a4647f4973927a75975ea0b31d10b135429485479> down. Now, the prez has to name a new PM - and the IMF recommends taking changes like this slow.

Hi Kade,

We have received your request regarding the Revere Police Department's acquisition and use of any facial recognition products. So far I have not found any information responsive to your request, except for one e-mail sent to the Chief's Administrative Assistant. This e-mail is from a company by the name of, "FaceFirst", in which the author is extending an invitation to attend a webinar.

I am waiting on a response from our MIS Supervisor, Capt. Ford and the OIC of the Criminal Investigations Division, Lt. Lavita. Lt. Lavita is currently working on a sensitive investigation, so she might not be able to get back to me for a few days.

Thank you in advance for understanding,

Lt. John M. Azzari

USCIS opens office focused on denaturalization cases

<http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kjurCAxUsLDeAWrCievcOBWcNKKIh?format=multipart>

US Citizenship and Immigration Services, part of the Department of Homeland Security, is creating a centralized office to focus on denaturalization matters. USCIS plans to expand the conditions under which it requires immigrants to appear before immigration judges, and it also plans to reduce its leniency concerning missing information and other discrepancies in documentation, while a spokesperson said people can appeal denials of immigration benefits.

Class action targets Mo. officials over medications given to foster children

<http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kjurCAxUsLDeAWrCCievcOBWcNLgpV?format=multipart>

A lawsuit that gained class status on Thursday alleges that Missouri's foster care system lacks a sufficient policy to ensure that psychotropic drugs are administered appropriately to children within the system. US District Judge Nanette Laughrey said the effects of such drugs can include aggression, Type 2 diabetes and suicidal thoughts.

A three-judge federal appeals panel on Friday upheld a lower court's dismissal of a complaint accusing Costco of knowingly selling prawns harvested using slave labor. The panel cited the plaintiff's purchase of the prawns without relying on Costco's statements about human rights among the reasons for affirming the lawsuit's dismissal.

Ga. Superior Court upholds citizenship-based denial of woman's candidacy <<http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kjurCAxUsLDeAWrICievcOBWcNkkKv?format=multipart>>

Maria Palacios of Gainesville, Ga., initially qualified to run for as a Democratic candidate for the state House, but Republican Secretary of State Brian Kemp said Palacios doesn't meet a constitutional requirement that candidates must be a Georgia citizen for at least two years. Last week, a state Superior Court judge affirmed Kemp's decision, and Palacios' attorney expects to appeal the case to Georgia's high court.

Appeals panel upholds dismissal of Costco supply-chain lawsuit <<http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kjurCAxUsLDeAWrJCievcOBWcNtmZg?format=multipart>>

A three-judge federal appeals panel on Friday upheld a lower court's dismissal of a complaint accusing Costco of knowingly selling prawns harvested using slave labor. The panel cited the plaintiff's purchase of the prawns without relying on Costco's statements about human rights among the reasons for affirming the lawsuit's dismissal.

Timing is key to a successful strategy <http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kjwNCAxUsLDeBfzZCievcOBWcNFRoa?format=multipart>
ExxonMobil's spending-heavy plan to boost profit is not going over well with investors, as it failed to account for a less-than-perfect timeline, writes George Bradt. "The art of strategic timing is stepping up your capabilities ahead of program delivery requirements -- but not too far ahead," he writes.

How do you deal with slackers on your team?

- I use a combination of tactics. <http://www.smartbrief.com/images/briefs2/common/polls/1.gif> 50.70%
  - I try to figure out how to motivate them. <http://www.smartbrief.com/images/briefs2/common/polls/2.gif> 36.90%
  - I immediately counsel them and put them on performance plans. <http://www.smartbrief.com/images/briefs2/common/polls/3.gif> 8.17%
  - I ignore things and hope their performance improves. <http://www.smartbrief.com/images/briefs2/common/polls/4.gif> 2.54%
  - I restructure their roles to make them happy. <http://www.smartbrief.com/images/briefs2/common/polls/5.gif> 1.69%
- It's about motivation ... and consequences. Clearly the majority of you focus on finding your slackers' motivation. That's the key. They often have the skills and abilities to do great work -- they just choose not to. Decline of existing-home sales in US extends to 3rd month <http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kkblCAxUsLDfageJCievcOBWcNMtCX?format=multipart>

June sales of existing homes in the US posted a 2.2% decline compared with a year earlier, reaching a five-month low and marking the third consecutive month of slowdown. National Association of Realtors Chief Economist Lawrence Yun said a shortage of inventory and prices rising faster than homebuyers' incomes hurt sales.

Fed's Quarles: Short-term wholesale funding indicates vulnerability <http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kkblCAxUsLDfageJCievcOBWcNndOq?format=multipart>

Federal Reserve Vice Chairman for Supervision Randal Quarles said that banks' use of short-term wholesale funding "may serve as a proxy for liquidity vulnerability" and that it could help regulators. Banking groups objected to the indicator in 2017, when the Basel Committee on Banking Supervision suggested it, and Basel again excluded it last month.

Concerns resurface as Fannie Mae, Freddie Mac widen scope <http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kkblCAxUsLDfageWCievcOBWcNpiwr?format=multipart>>

Lawmakers and industry bodies have expressed concerns that government-sponsored enterprises Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac are broadening their offerings and effectively re-entering the competitive mortgage market, 10 years after their near-collapse. The developments could have an effect on overall government policy regarding GSEs, and Republican lawmakers have voiced their concerns to Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin, who appears sympathetic to their stance.

Anticipating disruption: Millennials and innovation <http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kkblCAxUsLDfageGCievcOBWcNWRHW?format=multipart>>

At the age of 33, Facebook co-founder and chief executive officer Mark Zuckerberg became the youngest person to have delivered a commencement speech at Harvard. In his address to the students and staff, Zuckerberg forecast that our society will see autonomous vehicles and automation replace "tens of millions of jobs" in just a few short years. In Aon's 2017 Global Risk Management Survey, senior leaders said they expected "disruptive technologies/innovation" to be one of their top 10 risks before 2020. As companies grapple with disruptive technologies, understanding the role millennials play in forcing innovation will become increasingly important. Read more.

Fed's Bullard: Threat of yield-curve inversion is real

<<http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kkblCAxUsLDfaqezCievcOBWcNdPru?format=multi>>

The Federal Reserve should suspend interest-rate increases to avoid a yield-curve inversion, says James Bullard, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. "Imminent yield-curve inversion in the US has become a real possibility," Bullard says.

Anticipating disruption: Millennials and innovation

<http://r.smartbrief.com/resp/kkblCAxUsLDfageGCievcQBWcNWRHW?format=multi>

At the age of 33, Facebook co-founder and chief executive officer Mark Zuckerberg became the youngest person to have delivered a commencement speech at Harvard. In his address to the students and staff, Zuckerberg forecast that our society will see autonomous vehicles and automation replace "tens of millions of jobs" in just a few short years. In Aon's 2017 Global Risk Management Survey, senior leaders said they expected "disruptive technologies/innovation" to be one of their top 10 risks before 2020. As companies grapple with disruptive technologies, understanding the role millennials play in forcing innovation will become increasingly important. Read more.

Pakistan

The Story

Pakistan is getting a new prime minister. His name's Imran Khan
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=dda33b2e50ea364a990d674e50a5a4b9e2594d5d87dececd37c347086b6c949a6a142f9c56e01b9409b8de12ee77e44143e0de0b5aa6f901>> and he's made a big career shift from being a cricket star. He can't wait to join the team, rid Pakistan of corruption, and create an Islamic welfare state. Fun fact: he's not a fan of US counterterrorism policy and wants to build ties with China. Don't forget to stop by his desk and introduce yourself.

theSkimm

Some people are saying 'not so fast.' The incumbent party is calling the election a fraud and rejecting the results. People are saying the military meddled. And Khan will have to cobble together a coalition <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=dda33b2e50ea364ad6764b62a1e20c0f8e4d3053d623a53aa8ba0b27d90e2b9383352ac8fc4d9ac94342427992c87eb74cd383389f77de89>> in order to rule. But this is only the second civilian transfer of power in Pakistan's history. And shows that the country's very large young population (over 60% is under 30) was ready to switch things up.

Victims don't need to provide proof that they're victims. And they're entitled to other assists from their workplace, like getting some flexibility over where they work.

theSkimm

New Zealand has one of the highest rates of domestic violence in the world. The Philippines and parts of Canada already have laws like this on the books. New Zealand's law goes into effect next year.

Turkey

The Story

Yesterday, the Trump administration threatened to hit Turkey with sanctions <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=dda33b2e50ea364a08c020359f17f49b1462dfd36a752acc5f6d193a2af2b84d90a3e664ed490c4927bf237eb318f602608f21de c62254de>> if it doesn't release an American pastor. Turkey's foreign minister said 'don't hold your breath.' This is about a guy named Andrew Brunson - a pastor from North Carolina who was arrested in 2016, during the Turkish government's mass arrests after a failed coup. Earlier this week, Brunson - who's lived in Turkey for decades - was moved from prison to house arrest. But is still facing up to 35 years in prison for espionage and terror charges.

theSkimm

President Trump is threatening to sanction Turkey if Brunson isn't released ASAP. The rise in US-Turkey tensions comes after the recent re-election of prez Recep Tayyip Erdogan - who's been consolidating power

What people are talking about...

North Korea. Yesterday, the North handed over <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=elb7fal6c1401d58c41f93bfe2b577bc0ef472a543887e216b1c32155c57732f711e59e746a05515f8a17d0cde76753ff77561e2a14521bf>> the remains of some US soldiers from the 1950s Korean War. This didn't come out of nowhere - it fulfilled a promise its leader made to President Trump during last month's nuclear talks in Singapore, something that kept getting pushed off. No, this doesn't mean we can cross off the North as a threat just yet. But the Trump administration is taking this as a sign of goodwill.

What you wish wasn't true...

This investigation

Maternal deaths in the US have been on the rise. Every year, more than 50,000 mothers are severely injured during or after childbirth. And about 700 die. The investigation found that this is because hospitals and medical workers don't always follow proper safety measures.

THINGS HAPPENING OVERSEAS

Pakistan

The Story

Pakistan is getting a new prime minister. His name's Imran Khan
<<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=f01438cc8bdd9fb405551cc23c43affa08baeb7b2c7eef9c907275c9098204e34f6e330fcfedf184641b7446f32607a877fef0fe2f762c38>> and he's made a big career shift from being a cricket star. He can't wait to join the team, rid Pakistan of corruption, and create an Islamic welfare state. Fun fact: he's not a fan of US counterterrorism policy and wants to build ties with China. Don't forget to stop by his desk and introduce yourself.

theSkimm

Some people are saying 'not so fast.' The incumbent party is calling the election a fraud and rejecting the results. People are saying the military meddled. And Khan will have to cobble together a coalition <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=f01438cc8bdd9fb414460ee06c18b23fed42db4dafd20c910589b2f290a8a2323ccfb6c3e5059914b87da607ce52e3992aa64565b49alc38>> in order to rule. But this is only the second civilian transfer of power in Pakistan's history. And shows that the country's very large young population (over 60% is under 30) was ready to switch things up.

Victims don't need to provide proof that they're victims. And they're entitled to other assists from their workplace, like getting some flexibility over where they work.

theSkimm

New Zealand has one of the highest rates of domestic violence in the world. The Philippines and parts of Canada already have laws like this on the books. New Zealand's law goes into effect next year.

Turkey

The Story

Yesterday, the Trump administration threatened to hit Turkey with sanctions <<http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=f01438cc8bdd9fb48bd6f2c98a063c78bfe53501ac15a0f8ab1302c490b17e74ed0873aa7e4fb8e4401078a42567afc3f8aa85aa27cc1533>> if it doesn't release an American pastor. Turkey's foreign minister said 'don't hold your breath.' This is about a guy named Andrew Brunson - a pastor from North Carolina who was arrested in 2016, during the Turkish government's mass arrests after a failed coup. Earlier this week, Brunson - who's lived in Turkey for decades - was moved from prison to house arrest. But is still facing up to 35 years in prison for espionage and terror charges.

theSkimm

President Trump is threatening to sanction Turkey if Brunson isn't released ASAP. The rise in US-Turkey tensions comes after the recent re-election of prez Recep Tayyip Erdogan - who's been consolidating power

What people are talking about...

North Korea. Yesterday, the North handed over <http://click.morning7.theskimm.com/?qs=f01438cc8bdd9fb47b7d9f00140a0c9a86dcb947096d746c752cfb36cf896d3b9a3f3c23d3f14f5497a2479c77e95a02f69f89df05be0367> the remains of some US soldiers from the 1950s Korean War. This didn't come out of nowhere - it fulfilled a promise its leader made to President Trump during last month's nuclear talks in Singapore, something that kept getting pushed off. No, this doesn't mean we can cross off the North as a threat just yet. But the Trump administration is taking this as a sign of goodwill.

Maternal deaths in the US have been on the rise. Every year, more than 50,000 mothers are severely injured during or after childbirth. And about 700 die. The investigation found that this is because hospitals and medical workers don't always follow proper safety measures.

Surrounded by families of fallen police officers, Gov. Charlie Baker on Wednesday signed a bill adding a new $2 fee to car rentals in order to pay for municipal police training. The new law, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 2019, will let the Municipal Police Training Committee collect up to $10 million a year from the new car rental fee. Any money raised above that would go into the state's general fund.

A hastily drawn plan to combat recent gun violence was approved after a daylong debate at city hall on Tuesday, in the wake of Sunday's deadly shooting on the Danforth. Councillors approved the $44-million, five-year plan with few major amendments. It included the controversial listening technology called ShotSpotter.

U.S. government officials are increasingly worried about the potential national security threat posed by the rise of cryptocurrencies. In the past week, the Department of Justice, congressional lawmakers and even Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell have voiced concern about the misuse of digital currencies, especially for money laundering. The topic sparked new interest following Bitcoin's prominent mention in the indictments of Russian military intelligence officers by special counsel Robert Mueller earlier this month.

Over the course of the next two decades, the Supreme Court will likely undertake some of the most consequential digital privacy cases that will reverberate across generations to come. And Judge Brett Kavanaugh's likely addition to the high court, along with President Trump's first nominee, Justice Neil Gorsuch, will be deciding voices. More and more, the courts are going to have to decide where to draw the line, as law enforcement looks to things like drones, facial recognition software and predictive policing - determining who might commit a crime before they do - through social media, said Christopher Slobogin, a law professor at Vanderbilt University Law School and director of the school's Criminal Justice Program.

The school shooting at Santa Fe High School that left 10 people dead sparked new interest in a Texas law designed to protect victims of domestic violence and keep guns away from their abusers, setting up a showdown over firearms restrictions in the 2019 legislative session. But after hours of public testimony, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick dashed the hopes of groups calling for broader restrictions that would force gun owners to surrender their weapons in other cases, such as when they make threats.

Soon, Iowa officials will gather information on where drunken drivers got drunk. Officials with the Iowa agency that approves liquor licenses are pairing up with a national organization to track where intoxicated drivers were last served or provided alcoholic beverages.

A deeper look into how several police agencies handle key functions - from surveillance to use of force to department diversity - is a big step toward transparency, its creators say. The Albany police department is among the first seven of 23 police forces available for review on the New York Civil Liberties Union's site, launched Wednesday.

Homicides in Mexico rose by 16% in the first half of 2018, as the country again broke its own records for violence. The interior department said over the weekend there were 15,973 homicides in the first six months of the year, compared with 13,751 killings in the same period in 2017. The number is the highest since comparable records began being kept in 1997, including the peak year of Mexico's drug war in 2011.

Luke, who sniffed more than five million of dollars' worth of drugs during his time on the force, is one of 14 canines across the country who will be out of a job before October 17. Traffic and interdiction dogs like Luke are trained to detect cannabis, but once the substance is legal, they can no longer be used to establish grounds for search in a traffic stop.

Surrounded by families of fallen police officers, Gov. Charlie Baker on Wednesday signed a bill adding a new $2 fee to car rentals in order to pay for municipal police training. The new law, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 2019, will let the Municipal Police Training Committee collect up to $10 million a year from the new car rental fee. Any money raised above that would go into the state's general fund.

A hastily drawn plan to combat recent gun violence was approved after a daylong debate at city hall on Tuesday, in the wake of Sunday's deadly shooting on the Danforth. Councillors approved the $44-million, five-year plan with few major amendments. It included the controversial listening technology called ShotSpotter.

U.S. government officials are increasingly worried about the potential national security threat posed by the rise of cryptocurrencies. In the past week, the Department of Justice, congressional lawmakers and even Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell have voiced concern about the misuse of digital currencies, especially for money laundering. The topic sparked new interest following Bitcoin's prominent mention in the indictments of Russian military intelligence officers by special counsel Robert Mueller earlier this month.

Over the course of the next two decades, the Supreme Court will likely undertake some of the most consequential digital privacy cases that will reverberate across generations to come. And Judge Brett Kavanaugh's likely addition to the high court, along with President Trump's first nominee, Justice Neil Gorsuch, will be deciding voices. More and more, the courts are going to have to decide where to draw the line, as law enforcement looks to things like drones, facial recognition software and predictive policing - determining who might commit a crime before they do - through social media, said Christopher Slobogin, a law professor at Vanderbilt University Law School and director of the school's Criminal Justice Program.

The school shooting at Santa Fe High School that left 10 people dead sparked new interest in a Texas law designed to protect victims of domestic violence and keep guns away from their abusers, setting up a showdown over firearms restrictions in the 2019 legislative session. But after hours of public testimony, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick dashed the hopes of groups calling for broader restrictions that would force gun owners to surrender their weapons in other cases, such as when they make threats.

A deeper look into how several police agencies handle key functions - from surveillance to use of force to department diversity - is a big step toward transparency, its creators say. The Albany police department is among the first seven of 23 police forces available for review on the New York Civil Liberties Union's site, launched Wednesday.

Homicides in Mexico rose by 16% in the first half of 2018, as the country again broke its own records for violence. The interior department said over the weekend there were 15,973 homicides in the first six months of the year, compared with 13,751 killings in the same period in 2017. The number is the highest since comparable records began being kept in 1997, including the peak year of Mexico's drug war in 2011.

TRAINING

MassLive.com: Surrounded by families of fallen officers, Gov. Charlie Baker signs police training bill

Surrounded by families of fallen police officers, Gov. Charlie Baker on Wednesday signed a bill adding a new $2 fee to car rentals in order to pay for municipal police training. The new law, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 2019, will let the Municipal Police Training Committee collect up to $10 million a year from the new car rental fee. Any money raised above that would go into the state's general fund.

GUN VIOLENCE

Toronto Star: Toronto city council approves $44-million plan to address gun violence

A hastily drawn plan to combat recent gun violence was approved after a daylong debate at city hall on Tuesday, in the wake of Sunday's deadly shooting on the Danforth. Councillors approved the $44-million, five-year plan with few major amendments. It included the controversial listening technology called ShotSpotter.

Politico: Virtual currencies spark real concern about national security threat

U.S. government officials are increasingly worried about the potential national security threat posed by the rise of cryptocurrencies. In the past week, the Department of Justice, congressional lawmakers and even Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell have voiced concern about the misuse of digital currencies, especially for money laundering. The topic sparked new interest following Bitcoin's prominent mention in the indictments of Russian military intelligence officers by special counsel Robert Mueller earlier this month.

PRIVACY ISSUES

CBS News: How Kavanaugh could shape the coming "watershed" moment for digital privacy

Over the course of the next two decades, the Supreme Court will likely undertake some of the most consequential digital privacy cases that will reverberate across generations to come. And Judge Brett Kavanaugh's likely addition to the high court, along with President Trump's first nominee, Justice Neil Gorsuch, will be deciding voices. More and more, the courts are going to have to decide where to draw the line, as law enforcement looks to things like drones, facial recognition software and predictive policing - determining who might commit a crime before they do - through social media, said Christopher Slobogin, a law professor at Vanderbilt University Law School and director of the school's Criminal Justice Program.

---

GUN REGULATIONS

Houston Chronicle: After Santa Fe school shooting, Texas unlikely to expand weak red-flag gun law

The school shooting at Santa Fe High School that left 10 people dead sparked new interest in a Texas law designed to protect victims of domestic violence and keep guns away from their abusers, setting up a showdown over firearms restrictions in the 2019 legislative session. But after hours of public testimony, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick dashed the hopes of groups calling for broader restrictions that would force gun owners to surrender their weapons in other cases, such as when they make threats.

Des Moines Register: Iowa is preparing to track where drunk drivers had their last drinks

Soon, Iowa officials will gather information on where drunken drivers got drunk. Officials with the Iowa agency that approves liquor licenses are pairing up with a national organization to track where intoxicated drivers were last served or provided alcoholic beverages.

Albany Times Union: Website a peek into police operations

A deeper look into how several police agencies handle key functions - from surveillance to use of force to department diversity - is a big step toward transparency, its creators say. The Albany police department is among the first seven of 23 police forces available for review on the New York Civil Liberties Union's site, launched Wednesday.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Brookline Patch: Search for next Brookline police chief edges forward

After 41 police officials who applied to be the next Brookline Chief of Police, 13 candidates will go on to the interview round, which starts next week.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

KROC Rochester: Rochester's new police chief reports for work

Rochester's new police chief begins work Thursday. James Franklin was recently selected to become the city's top cop after a drawn-out process.

CRIME RATES

Associated Press: Mexico: homicides up 16% in 2018, breaking own records for violence

Homicides in Mexico rose by 16% in the first half of 2018, as the country again broke its own records for violence. The interior department said over the weekend there were 15,973 homicides in the first six months of the year, compared with 13,751 killings in the same period in 2017. The number is the highest since comparable records began being kept in 1997, including the peak year of Mexico's drug war in 2011.

Canadian Press: Looming cannabis legalization forces 14 RCMP sniffer dogs into early retirement

TRAINING

MassLive.com: Surrounded by families of fallen officers, Gov. Charlie Baker signs police training bill

Surrounded by families of fallen police officers, Gov. Charlie Baker on Wednesday signed a bill adding a new $2 fee to car rentals in order to pay for municipal police training. The new law, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 2019, will let the Municipal Police Training Committee collect up to $10 million a year from the new car rental fee. Any money raised above that would go into the state's general fund.

GUN VIOLENCE

Toronto Star: Toronto city council approves $44-million plan to address gun violence

A hastily drawn plan to combat recent gun violence was approved after a daylong debate at city hall on Tuesday, in the wake of Sunday's deadly shooting on the Danforth. Councillors approved the $44-million, five-year plan with few major amendments. It included the controversial listening technology called ShotSpotter.

CYBERCRIME

Politico: Virtual currencies spark real concern about national security threat

U.S. government officials are increasingly worried about the potential national security threat posed by the rise of cryptocurrencies. In the past week, the Department of Justice, congressional lawmakers and even Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell have voiced concern about the misuse of digital currencies, especially for money laundering. The topic sparked new interest following Bitcoin's prominent mention in the indictments of Russian military intelligence officers by special counsel Robert Mueller earlier this month.

PRIVACY ISSUES

CBS News: How Kavanaugh could shape the coming "watershed" moment for digital privacy

Over the course of the next two decades, the Supreme Court will likely undertake some of the most consequential digital privacy cases that will reverberate across generations to come. And Judge Brett Kavanaugh's likely addition to the high court, along with President Trump's first nominee, Justice Neil Gorsuch, will be deciding voices. More and more, the courts are going to have to decide where to draw the line, as law enforcement looks to things like drones, facial recognition software and predictive policing - determining who might commit a crime before they do - through social media, said Christopher Slobogin, a law professor at Vanderbilt University Law School and director of the school's Criminal Justice Program.

---

GUN REGULATIONS

Houston Chronicle: After Santa Fe school shooting, Texas unlikely to expand weak red-flag gun law

The school shooting at Santa Fe High School that left 10 people dead sparked new interest in a Texas law designed to protect victims of domestic violence and keep guns away from their abusers, setting up a showdown over firearms restrictions in the 2019 legislative session. But after hours of public testimony, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick dashed the hopes of groups calling for broader restrictions that would force gun owners to surrender their weapons in other cases, such as when they make threats.

DUI

Des Moines Register: Iowa is preparing to track where drunk drivers had their last drinks

Soon, Iowa officials will gather information on where drunken drivers got drunk. Officials with the Iowa agency that approves liquor licenses are pairing up with a national organization to track where intoxicated drivers were last served or provided alcoholic beverages.

Albany Times Union: Website a peek into police operations

A deeper look into how several police agencies handle key functions - from surveillance to use of force to department diversity - is a big step toward transparency, its creators say. The Albany police department is among the first seven of 23 police forces available for review on the New York Civil Liberties Union's site, launched Wednesday.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Brookline Patch: Search for next Brookline police chief edges forward

After 41 police officials who applied to be the next Brookline Chief of Police, 13 candidates will go on to the interview round, which starts next week.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

KROC Rochester: Rochester's new police chief reports for work

Rochester's new police chief begins work Thursday. James Franklin was recently selected to become the city's top cop after a drawn-out process.

CRIME RATES

Associated Press: Mexico: homicides up 16% in 2018, breaking own records for violence

Homicides in Mexico rose by 16% in the first half of 2018, as the country again broke its own records for violence. The interior department said over the weekend there were 15,973 homicides in the first six months of the year, compared with 13,751 killings in the same period in 2017. The number is the highest since comparable records began being kept in 1997, including the peak year of Mexico's drug war in 2011.

K-9

Canadian Press: Looming cannabis legalization forces 14 RCMP sniffer dogs into early retirement

Luke, who sniffed more than five million of dollars' worth of drugs during his time on the force, is one of 14 canines across the country who will be out of a job before October 17. Traffic and interdiction dogs like Luke are trained to detect cannabis, but once the substance is legal, they can no longer be used to establish grounds for search in a traffic stop.

A hastily drawn plan to combat recent gun violence was approved after a daylong debate at city hall on Tuesday, in the wake of Sunday's deadly shooting on the Danforth. Councillors approved the $44-million, five-year plan with few major amendments. It included the controversial listening technology called ShotSpotter.

U.S. government officials are increasingly worried about the potential national security threat posed by the rise of cryptocurrencies. In the past week, the Department of Justice, congressional lawmakers and even Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell have voiced concern about the misuse of digital currencies, especially for money laundering. The topic sparked new interest following Bitcoin's prominent mention in the indictments of Russian military intelligence officers by special counsel Robert Mueller earlier this month.

Over the course of the next two decades, the Supreme Court will likely undertake some of the most consequential digital privacy cases that will reverberate across generations to come. And Judge Brett Kavanaugh's likely addition to the high court, along with President Trump's first nominee, Justice Neil Gorsuch, will be deciding voices. More and more, the courts are going to have to decide where to draw the line, as law enforcement looks to things like drones, facial recognition software and predictive policing - determining who might commit a crime before they do - through social media, said Christopher Slobogin, a law professor at Vanderbilt University Law School and director of the school's Criminal Justice Program.

The school shooting at Santa Fe High School that left 10 people dead sparked new interest in a Texas law designed to protect victims of domestic violence and keep guns away from their abusers, setting up a showdown over firearms restrictions in the 2019 legislative session. But after hours of public testimony, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick dashed the hopes of groups calling for broader restrictions that would force gun owners to surrender their weapons in other cases, such as when they make threats.

A deeper look into how several police agencies handle key functions - from surveillance to use of force to department diversity - is a big step toward transparency, its creators say. The Albany police department is among the first seven of 23 police forces available for review on the New York Civil Liberties Union's site, launched Wednesday.

Homicides in Mexico rose by 16% in the first half of 2018, as the country again broke its own records for violence. The interior department said over the weekend there were 15,973 homicides in the first six months of the year, compared with 13,751 killings in the same period in 2017. The number is the highest since comparable records began being kept in 1997, including the peak year of Mexico's drug war in 2011.

Luke, who sniffed more than five million of dollars' worth of drugs during his time on the force, is one of 14 canines across the country who will be out of a job before October 17. Traffic and interdiction dogs like Luke are trained to detect cannabis, but once the substance is legal, they can no longer be used to establish grounds for search in a traffic stop.

TRAINING

MassLive.com: Surrounded by families of fallen officers, Gov. Charlie Baker signs police training bill

Surrounded by families of fallen police officers, Gov. Charlie Baker on Wednesday signed a bill adding a new $2 fee to car rentals in order to pay for municipal police training. The new law, which goes into effect Jan. 1, 2019, will let the Municipal Police Training Committee collect up to $10 million a year from the new car rental fee. Any money raised above that would go into the state's general fund.

GUN VIOLENCE

Toronto Star: Toronto city council approves $44-million plan to address gun violence

A hastily drawn plan to combat recent gun violence was approved after a daylong debate at city hall on Tuesday, in the wake of Sunday's deadly shooting on the Danforth. Councillors approved the $44-million, five-year plan with few major amendments. It included the controversial listening technology called ShotSpotter.

CYBERCRIME

Politico: Virtual currencies spark real concern about national security threat

U.S. government officials are increasingly worried about the potential national security threat posed by the rise of cryptocurrencies. In the past week, the Department of Justice, congressional lawmakers and even Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell have voiced concern about the misuse of digital currencies, especially for money laundering. The topic sparked new interest following Bitcoin's prominent mention in the indictments of Russian military intelligence officers by special counsel Robert Mueller earlier this month.

PRIVACY ISSUES

CBS News: How Kavanaugh could shape the coming "watershed" moment for digital privacy

Over the course of the next two decades, the Supreme Court will likely undertake some of the most consequential digital privacy cases that will reverberate across generations to come. And Judge Brett Kavanaugh's likely addition to the high court, along with President Trump's first nominee, Justice Neil Gorsuch, will be deciding voices. More and more, the courts are going to have to decide where to draw the line, as law enforcement looks to things like drones, facial recognition software and predictive policing - determining who might commit a crime before they do - through social media, said Christopher Slobogin, a law professor at Vanderbilt University Law School and director of the school's Criminal Justice Program.

---

GUN REGULATIONS

Houston Chronicle: After Santa Fe school shooting, Texas unlikely to expand weak red-flag gun law

The school shooting at Santa Fe High School that left 10 people dead sparked new interest in a Texas law designed to protect victims of domestic violence and keep guns away from their abusers, setting up a showdown over firearms restrictions in the 2019 legislative session. But after hours of public testimony, Lt. Gov. Dan Patrick dashed the hopes of groups calling for broader restrictions that would force gun owners to surrender their weapons in other cases, such as when they make threats.

DUI

Des Moines Register: Iowa is preparing to track where drunk drivers had their last drinks

Soon, Iowa officials will gather information on where drunken drivers got drunk. Officials with the Iowa agency that approves liquor licenses are pairing up with a national organization to track where intoxicated drivers were last served or provided alcoholic beverages.

Albany Times Union: Website a peek into police operations

A deeper look into how several police agencies handle key functions - from surveillance to use of force to department diversity - is a big step toward transparency, its creators say. The Albany police department is among the first seven of 23 police forces available for review on the New York Civil Liberties Union's site, launched Wednesday.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Brookline Patch: Search for next Brookline police chief edges forward

After 41 police officials who applied to be the next Brookline Chief of Police, 13 candidates will go on to the interview round, which starts next week.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

KROC Rochester: Rochester's new police chief reports for work

Rochester's new police chief begins work Thursday. James Franklin was recently selected to become the city's top cop after a drawn-out process.

CRIME RATES

Associated Press: Mexico: homicides up 16% in 2018, breaking own records for violence

Homicides in Mexico rose by 16% in the first half of 2018, as the country again broke its own records for violence. The interior department said over the weekend there were 15,973 homicides in the first six months of the year, compared with 13,751 killings in the same period in 2017. The number is the highest since comparable records began being kept in 1997, including the peak year of Mexico's drug war in 2011.

K-9

Canadian Press: Looming cannabis legalization forces 14 RCMP sniffer dogs into early retirement

Luke, who sniffed more than five million of dollars' worth of drugs during his time on the force, is one of 14 canines across the country who will be out of a job before October 17. Traffic and interdiction dogs like Luke are trained to detect cannabis, but once the substance is legal, they can no longer be used to establish grounds for search in a traffic stop.

(7/30, Otárola) reports the Minnetonka, Minnesota Police Department has partnered with mental health treatment center Relate Counseling Center. "The plan is that after a police call involving a mental health crisis, officers will return within the next few days with a therapist from Relate." Minnetonka Police Chief Scott Boerboom said, "At the end of the day, the Police Department is not equipped to be able to manage a crisis and to be able to provide long-term solutions."

When hackers took over two-thirds of D.C. police's surveillance cameras days before the 2017 presidential inauguration, it appeared that the cyberattack was limited to elicit a single ransom payment. But court documents show that the alleged scheme that January was far more ambitious.

Despite "real-time" facial recognition's dazzling potential for crime-prevention, it is also raising alarms of the risks of mistakes and abuse. Those concerns are not only coming from privacy and civil rights advocates, but increasingly from tech firms themselves.

As new Denver Police Department Chief Paul Pazen makes his introductory speeches across the city, he throws out buzzwords to describe his policing philosophy. Innovation. Collaboration. Social harms. Precision policing. What does he mean? Basically, Pazen wants to use data analysis to figure out who and what is driving crime and then ask others to help the police combat problems that lead to crime - mental illness, addiction, unstable families. He also recognizes society's expectations for police are changing, and he is ready to lead Denver's 1,500 officers in that direction.

The vast majority of Detroit's police officers, nearly 75 percent, do not live in the city they serve, according to data provided at a Detroit Police Commission meeting earlier this month. As of June 30, 584 of Detroit's 2,411 sworn, active officers lived within city limits, according to Brian Tennille, employee services manager for the city's human resources department. The statistic led Commissioner Jim Holley to question how far from the city those nonresident officers live and whether the department would be able to respond to an emergency mobilization in a timely manner.

We recently reported on the Houston Police Department's partnership with the University of St. Thomas for Chinese language training for its officers. After the first 10 weeks of classes for 25 officers, we wanted to see how the training is helping cops in the field. So, we went on a ride-along with one officer who took the class, Michael Prause, a 26-year veteran at HPD's Westside Station, which covers Houston's Chinatown.

The South Carolina Criminal Justice Academy trains 70 recruits every three weeks to become law enforcement officers. Even though the academy is seeing packed classrooms, departments across the state are still having trouble putting officers on the road. The director of the academy, Jackie Swindler, says the issue is retaining new officers.

When hackers took over two-thirds of D.C. police's surveillance cameras days before the 2017 presidential inauguration, it appeared that the cyberattack was limited to elicit a single ransom payment. But court documents show that the alleged scheme that January was far more ambitious.

The vast majority of Detroit's police officers, nearly 75 percent, do not live in the city they serve, according to data provided at a Detroit Police Commission meeting earlier this month. As of June 30, 584 of Detroit's 2,411 sworn, active officers lived within city limits, according to Brian Tennille, employee services manager for the city's human resources department. The statistic led Commissioner Jim Holley to question how far from the city those nonresident officers live and whether the department would be able to respond to an emergency mobilization in a timely manner.

We recently reported on the Houston Police Department's partnership with the University of St. Thomas for Chinese language training for its officers. After the first 10 weeks of classes for 25 officers, we wanted to see how the training is helping cops in the field. So, we went on a ride-along with one officer who took the class, Michael Prause, a 26-year veteran at HPD's Westside Station, which covers Houston's Chinatown.

The South Carolina Criminal Justice Academy trains 70 recruits every three weeks to become law enforcement officers. Even though the academy is seeing packed classrooms, departments across the state are still having trouble putting officers on the road. The director of the academy, Jackie Swindler, says the issue is retaining new officers.

CYBERCRIME

Washington Post: Hack of D.C. police cameras was part of ransomware scheme, prosecutors say

When hackers took over two-thirds of D.C. police's surveillance cameras days before the 2017 presidential inauguration, it appeared that the cyberattack was limited to elicit a single ransom payment. But court documents show that the alleged scheme that January was far more ambitious.

TECHNOLOGY

NBC News: Facial recognition gives police a powerful new tracking tool. It's also raising alarms.

Despite "real-time" facial recognition's dazzling potential for crime-prevention, it is also raising alarms of the risks of mistakes and abuse. Those concerns are not only coming from privacy and civil rights advocates, but increasingly from tech firms themselves.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Denver Post: Buzzwords aside, new Denver police chief Paul Pazen wants the department to become more progressive

As new Denver Police Department Chief Paul Pazen makes his introductory speeches across the city, he throws out buzzwords to describe his policing philosophy. Innovation. Collaboration. Social harms. Precision policing. What does he mean? Basically, Pazen wants to use data analysis to figure out who and what is driving crime and then ask others to help the police combat problems that lead to crime - mental illness, addiction, unstable families. He also recognizes society's expectations for police are changing, and he is ready to lead Denver's 1,500 officers in that direction.

RESIDENCY RULES

MLive.com: 3 of 4 Detroit police don't live in Detroit, raising mobilization concerns

The vast majority of Detroit's police officers, nearly 75 percent, do not live in the city they serve, according to data provided at a Detroit Police Commission meeting earlier this month. As of June 30, 584 of Detroit's 2,411 sworn, active officers lived within city limits, according to Brian Tennille, employee services manager for the city's human resources department. The statistic led Commissioner Jim Holley to question how far from the city those nonresident officers live and whether the department would be able to respond to an emergency mobilization in a timely manner.

Houston Public Media: How language training is helping police officers in Houston's Chinatown

We recently reported on the Houston Police Department's partnership with the University of St. Thomas for Chinese language training for its officers. After the first 10 weeks of classes for 25 officers, we wanted to see how the training is helping cops in the field. So, we went on a ride-along with one officer who took the class, Michael Prause, a 26-year veteran at HPD's Westside Station, which covers Houston's Chinatown.

IMMIGRATION

Chicago Tribune: Federal judge rules against Trump Justice Department in Chicago 'sanctuary city' case

A federal judge Friday sided with the city of Chicago in its sanctuary city lawsuit, ruling that the Trump administration does not have the authority to withhold federal public safety funding from the city if it limits its cooperation with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement officials.

IMMIGRATION

Philadelphia Inquirer: Mayor Kenney won't renew Philadelphia's data-sharing contract with ICE

Mayor Kenney won't renew a controversial city contract that allows federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents to access a key law-enforcement database, known as PARS, and use that information against undocumented but otherwise law-abiding immigrants in Philadelphia.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Albany Times Union: Albany's new police chief talks of community policing, internal tension

The city's incoming police chief says he'll keep the department focused on its years-long strategy of community policing. Eric Hawkins said the department can't arrest its way out of crime problems and needs to find ways to connect with the people who live in the city.

---

STAFFING

WBTW 13 Myrtle Beach: Help Wanted: SC law enforcement departments need more officers

The South Carolina Criminal Justice Academy trains 70 recruits every three weeks to become law enforcement officers. Even though the academy is seeing packed classrooms, departments across the state are still having trouble putting officers on the road. The director of the academy, Jackie Swindler, says the issue is retaining new officers.

BODY-WORN CAMERAS

Arizona Republic: Scottsdale police work to fix gaps in body camera program after audit identifies problems

A city audit released in June shows Scottsdale police must better monitor body camera footage, tighten access and enforce protocols on how videos are deleted. The department is now implementing fixes on the fairly new but fast growing use of body-worn cameras.

---

USE OF FORCE

Las Vegas Review-Journal: Panel recounts Las Vegas police efforts to reduce deadly force

A panel this week recounted the Metropolitan Police Department's efforts to reform its use of force guidelines over the past several years. The forum took place Wednesday night at the Mob Museum, which has an interactive exhibit on deadly use of force.

When hackers took over two-thirds of D.C. police's surveillance cameras days before the 2017 presidential inauguration, it appeared that the cyberattack was limited to elicit a single ransom payment. But court documents show that the alleged scheme that January was far more ambitious.

Despite "real-time" facial recognition's dazzling potential for crime-prevention, it is also raising alarms of the risks of mistakes and abuse. Those concerns are not only coming from privacy and civil rights advocates, but increasingly from tech firms themselves.

As new Denver Police Department Chief Paul Pazen makes his introductory speeches across the city, he throws out buzzwords to describe his policing philosophy. Innovation. Collaboration. Social harms. Precision policing. What does he mean? Basically, Pazen wants to use data analysis to figure out who and what is driving crime and then ask others to help the police combat problems that lead to crime - mental illness, addiction, unstable families. He also recognizes society's expectations for police are changing, and he is ready to lead Denver's 1,500 officers in that direction.

<[The vast majority of Detroit's police officers, nearly 75 percent, do not live in the city they serve, according to data provided at a Detroit Police Commission meeting earlier this month. As of June 30, 584 of Detroit's 2,411 sworn, active officers lived within city limits, according to Brian Tennille, employee services manager for the city's human resources department. The statistic led Commissioner Jim Holley to question how far from the city those nonresident officers live and whether the department would be able to respond to an emergency mobilization in a timely manner.

Houston Public Media: How language training is helping police officers in Houston's Chinatown

<[We recently reported on the Houston Police Department's partnership with the University of St. Thomas for Chinese language training for its officers. After the first 10 weeks of classes for 25 officers, we wanted to see how the training is helping cops in the field. So, we went on a ride-along with one officer who took the class, Michael Prause, a 26-year veteran at HPD's Westside Station, which covers Houston's Chinatown.

The South Carolina Criminal Justice Academy trains 70 recruits every three weeks to become law enforcement officers. Even though the academy is seeing packed classrooms, departments across the state are still having trouble putting officers on the road. The director of the academy, Jackie Swindler, says the issue is retaining new officers.

CYBERCRIME

Washington Post: Hack of D.C. police cameras was part of ransomware scheme, prosecutors say

When hackers took over two-thirds of D.C. police's surveillance cameras days before the 2017 presidential inauguration, it appeared that the cyberattack was limited to elicit a single ransom payment. But court documents show that the alleged scheme that January was far more ambitious.

TECHNOLOGY

NBC News: Facial recognition gives police a powerful new tracking tool. It's also raising alarms.

Despite "real-time" facial recognition's dazzling potential for crime-prevention, it is also raising alarms of the risks of mistakes and abuse. Those concerns are not only coming from privacy and civil rights advocates, but increasingly from tech firms themselves.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Denver Post: Buzzwords aside, new Denver police chief Paul Pazen wants the department to become more progressive

As new Denver Police Department Chief Paul Pazen makes his introductory speeches across the city, he throws out buzzwords to describe his policing philosophy. Innovation. Collaboration. Social harms. Precision policing. What does he mean? Basically, Pazen wants to use data analysis to figure out who and what is driving crime and then ask others to help the police combat problems that lead to crime - mental illness, addiction, unstable families. He also recognizes society's expectations for police are changing, and he is ready to lead Denver's 1,500 officers in that direction.

RESIDENCY RULES

Mlive.com: 3 of 4 Detroit police don't live in Detroit, raising mobilization concerns

The vast majority of Detroit's police officers, nearly 75 percent, do not live in the city they serve, according to data provided at a Detroit Police Commission meeting earlier this month. As of June 30, 584 of Detroit's 2,411 sworn, active officers lived within city limits, according to Brian Tennille, employee services manager for the city's human resources department. The statistic led Commissioner Jim Holley to question how far from the city those nonresident officers live and whether the department would be able to respond to an emergency mobilization in a timely manner.

Houston Public Media: How language training is helping police officers in Houston's Chinatown

We recently reported on the Houston Police Department's partnership with the University of St. Thomas for Chinese language training for its officers. After the first 10 weeks of classes for 25 officers, we wanted to see how the training is helping cops in the field. So, we went on a ride-along with one officer who took the class, Michael Prause, a 26-year veteran at HPD's Westside Station, which covers Houston's Chinatown.

IMMIGRATION

Chicago Tribune: Federal judge rules against Trump Justice Department in Chicago 'sanctuary city' case

A federal judge Friday sided with the city of Chicago in its sanctuary city lawsuit, ruling that the Trump administration does not have the authority to withhold federal public safety funding from the city if it limits its cooperation with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement officials.

IMMIGRATION

Philadelphia Inquirer: Mayor Kenney won't renew Philadelphia's data-sharing contract with ICE

Mayor Kenney won't renew a controversial city contract that allows federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents to access a key law-enforcement database, known as PARS, and use that information against undocumented but otherwise law-abiding immigrants in Philadelphia.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Albany Times Union: Albany's new police chief talks of community policing, internal tension

The city's incoming police chief says he'll keep the department focused on its years-long strategy of community policing. Eric Hawkins said the department can't arrest its way out of crime problems and needs to find ways to connect with the people who live in the city.

STAFFING

WBTW 13 Myrtle Beach: Help Wanted: SC law enforcement departments need more officers

The South Carolina Criminal Justice Academy trains 70 recruits every three weeks to become law enforcement officers. Even though the academy is seeing packed classrooms, departments across the state are still having trouble putting officers on the road. The director of the academy, Jackie Swindler, says the issue is retaining new officers.

BODY-WORN CAMERAS

Arizona Republic: Scottsdale police work to fix gaps in body camera program after audit identifies problems

A city audit released in June shows Scottsdale police must better monitor body camera footage, tighten access and enforce protocols on how videos are deleted. The department is now implementing fixes on the fairly new but fast growing use of body-worn cameras.

USE OF FORCE

Las Vegas Review-Journal: Panel recounts Las Vegas police efforts to reduce deadly force

A panel this week recounted the Metropolitan Police Department's efforts to reform its use of force guidelines over the past several years. The forum took place Wednesday night at the Mob Museum, which has an interactive exhibit on deadly use of force.

Hi Kade,

Here are some answers to the records request that you submitted. We are still waiting on Capt. Ford to complete an e-mail search and will send the results as soon as he is finished. Lt. Lavita provided some information, but is on vacation until next and will complete her search when she returns.

1. Communications between any representative of the Revere Police Department and any representative of any vendor offering any facial-recognition product or service.

Attached are 7 pages of e-mail correspondence with facial-recognition vendors. Waiting on further response from Capt. Ford.

5. Manuals, policies, procedures, and practices governing the use or monitoring of a facial-recognition product or service or related information or databases.

To the best of our knowledge, the Revere Police Department does not have any manuals, policies or procedures responsive to this request.

6. Training materials related to any facial-recognition product or service by employees of the Revere Police Department.

According to the Revere Police Department's Training Officer, Joe Turner, the department has no training records responsive to this request.

7. Records relating to any mobile application related to any facial-recognition product or service.

To the best of our knowledge, the Revere Police Department does not have any information responsive to this request.

8. Records relating to an public process or debate about any facial-recognition product or service, including meeting agendas or minutes, public notice, analysis, or communications between the Revere Police Department and elected leaders or county officials.

To the best of our knowledge, the Revere Police Department has no information responsive to this request.

As soon as we receive further information from Capt. Ford and Lt. Lavita, we should be able answer questions 2, 3 and 4, as well as updating earlier responses accordingly.

Thank you,

John

We just received a records request from the ACLU, asking if our department uses facial recognition products. I have highlighted several questions that you may be able to answer. This request is time sensitive.

Thank you,
John

FBI-LEEDA recognizes that with various shifts and responsibilities, law enforcement officers cannot always get away to attend a brick-and-mortar school or class. That's why FBI-LEEDA offers three classes via distance. Although there are hard timelines for assignments, each module can be taken at the student's leisure - any time of day or night.

Earn your FBI-LEEDA eTrilogy by successfully completing FBI-LEEDA's Distance Learning Basic Supervisor Liability, Advanced Supervisor Liability, and Distance Learning Ethics courses!

For more information about the eTrilogy Click Here

If you are interested in attending a Master Public Information Officer course, class locations and offerings can be found at www.fbileeda.org <https://fbileeda.org/link.asp?e=kmonsalve@reverepolice.org&job=3450402&mlink=266540525&finalurl=https%3A%2F%2Ffbileeda%2Eorg%2Fpage%32FMPO> or you may contact FBI-LEEDA at 877-772-7712.

2019 Executive Education Conference

https://fbileeda.org/resource/resmgr/Virginia\_Beach/VB2.png

SAVE THE DATE: APRIL 29 - MAY 1

Planning for the 2019 Executive Education Conference in Virginia Beach, Virginia is well underway!

Please visit the conference page <https://fbileeda.org/link.asp?e=kmonsalve@reverepolice.org&job=3450402&mlink=266540525&finalurl=http%3A%2F%2Ffbileeda2019%2Eorg%2F> for information and updates.

<https://fbileeda.org/link.asp?e=kmonsalve@reverepolice.org&job=3450402&mlink=266540525&finalurl=http%3A%2F%2Ffbileeda%2Eorg%2F%3Fpage%3DeTrilogyCert>

FBI-LEEDA recognizes that with various shifts and responsibilities, law enforcement officers cannot always get away to attend a brick-and-mortar school or class. That's why FBI-LEEDA offers three classes via distance. Although there are hard timelines for assignments, each module can be taken at the student's leisure - any time of day or night.

Earn your FBI-LEEDA eTrilogy by successfully completing FBI-LEEDA's Distance Learning Basic Supervisor Liability, Advanced Supervisor Liability, and Distance Learning Ethics courses!

For more information about the eTrilogy Click Here <https://fbileeda.org/link.asp?e=kmonsalve@reverepolice.org&job=3450402&mlink=266540525&finalurl=http%3A%2F%2Ffbileeda%2Eorg%2F%3Fpage%3DDistance>.

Data Science is Key to Readying Facial Recognition Software for Use by Law Enforcement
<http://go.dlt.com/c0203x900eIP03xLH0XFq00>

The use of facial recognition software in law enforcement currently raises more questions than answers. Yet, even as civil rights groups and the courts hash out the legal arguments, today's increasingly challenging policing environment indicates the technology is here to stay.
