Research Brief: "The Police-Community Interaction Survey: Measuring Police Performance in New Ways"

Editor's Note: PERF is adding a new feature to the Daily Clips. Approximately once a month, we will include an item summarizing a new research study that we believe will be of interest to PERF members. Today's Research Brief describes the development and initial findings of nationally-tested, standardized community survey for police use. The "Police-Community Interaction Survey" was created and fielded by the National Police Research Platform, featuring PERF Research Advisory Board member Prof. Dennis Rosenbaum of the University of Chicago. Police agencies can use the survey to obtain feedback from community members who have had recent interactions with officers, for example, because they reported a crime or traffic accident or were stopped for a traffic violation.

18 Texas sheriffs sign up to join forces with federal immigration officers

Eighteen counties in Texas, including Tarrant County, have entered into new pacts with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement that allow local officers to enforce federal immigration laws, officials said Monday. One Texas city - Carrollton - also is party to such an arrangement, called a 287(g) agreement. With 19 local entities on board, Texas accounts for almost one-third of the 60 pacts nationwide.

Trump's opioid commission listened to public health experts

President Trump's drug commission says the opioids epidemic has become a national crisis that requires aggressive federal action to improve treatment and collect better data. Those conclusions line up with the views of many health policy researchers.

18 Texas sheriffs sign up to join forces with federal immigration officers

Eighteen counties in Texas, including Tarrant County, have entered into new pacts with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement that allow local officers to enforce federal immigration laws, officials said Monday. One Texas city - Carrollton - also is party to such an arrangement, called a 287(g) agreement. With 19 local entities on board, Texas accounts for almost one-third of the 60 pacts nationwide.

Research Brief: "The Police-Community Interaction Survey: Measuring Police Performance in New Ways"

Editor's Note: PERF is adding a new feature to the Daily Clips. Approximately once a month, we will include an item summarizing a new research study that we believe will be of interest to PERF members. Today's Research Brief describes the development and initial findings of nationally-tested, standardized community survey for police use. The "Police-Community Interaction Survey" was created and fielded by the National Police Research Platform, featuring PERF Research Advisory Board member Prof. Dennis Rosenbaum of the University of Chicago. Police agencies can use the survey to obtain feedback from community members who have had recent interactions with officers, for example, because they reported a crime or traffic accident or were stopped for a traffic violation.

Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7979436-105b&l=006-724&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/5, Corasaniti) reports the Dar Al Farooq mosque in Bloomington, Minnesota was rocked by a blast on Saturday as worshipers were gathering for morning prayers. No injuries were reported, though the "building sustained damage to its front." Police said that a "preliminary investigation indicates the explosion was caused by a destructive device." The FBI is taking the lead on the investigation, with assistance from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives.

GOP Governors Deploying State Troopers In Response To Rise In Violent Crime.

In an analysis, the Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7979436-105b&l=013-8fc&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7979436-105b&l=014-6d4&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7979436-105b&l=015-4b9&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/6, Craig, Ockerman) reports Republican governors around the country are responding to rising homicide rates in major cities by dispatching additional state troopers to violent areas. The Post highlights Missouri Gov. Eric Greitens' recent deployment of state troopers to St. Louis highways - an effort that has received support from Democratic city officials - and also examines similar efforts in Arkansas, Texas, and South Carolina. The Post adds, however, that "the implementation of the state response can clash with local policing strategies" and that some on the left "fear a shift away from Obama-era initiatives such as community policing, fewer mandatory minimum sentences and limits on the militarization of police units."

According to Fox, "both have members covered in head-to-toe tattoos, are well known for their murderous tactics and originated in some of the same Los Angeles neighborhoods." Fox says the two gangs "are bitter rivals whose ongoing feud is responsible for the deaths of thousands across the U.S., Mexico and Central America." Barrio 18 is "believed to operate in around 120 cities in 30 states, but has made its presence most felt in its home state of California." Fox News, adds, "Much of the street crime in Los Angeles County is believed to be related to the gang and federal law enforcement said that while street-level drug dealing is Barrio 18's main income source, the group has been linked to murders, assaults, arson, copyright infringement, extortion, human trafficking, illegal immigration, kidnapping, prostitution, robbery and weapons trafficking."

The article quotes Gottlieb as saying, "Given the scope of the opioid crisis, and the risk posed by these synthetic drugs, it's my belief that we need to devote even more resources and attention to these risks." The FDA also plans to deploy employees "to the FDA's cybercrime and forensic-chemistry units," the Post adds.

At the Smart Gun Symposium in Washington D.C. on Thursday, supporters of the technology "discussed how upgrading firearms with gun-locking features like fingerprint scanners and radio-frequency identification tags could help protect police and prevent shootings," and "also dismissed concerns that hackers could find ways to trick the features." CNET adds, "Safety and reliability are key issues when it comes to the potential for widespread adoption of high-tech firearms. Nearly 60 percent of police officers told the symposium they'd be interested in using smart guns, once the weapons prove reliable from a security and effectiveness perspective."

London Police To Use Facial Recognition Software At Upcoming Festival.

The agency "has described the planned deployment as a pilot project intended to look for suspected troublemakers to keep those attending safe." Police at the two-day event "will use the facial recognition system and match faces in the crowd against databases of people they suspect will cause trouble, comparing them with images of people previously arrested or under bail conditions to keep away from the event." The Met released a statement that said, "The technology involves the use of overt cameras which scan the faces of those passing by and flag up potential matches against a database of custody images. The database will be populated with images of individuals who are forbidden from attending carnival, as well as individuals wanted by police."

Chicago Police Use New Technology To Fight Violent Crime.

With the city's murder rate up by 3 percent overall, the 7th District saw a 39 percent drop in the rate from January through July of this year over the same period last year. Three other districts using the same technology also saw "between 15 percent and 29 percent fewer shootings, and 9 percent to 18 percent fewer homicides, according to the department's data." The technology involves police "scan[ning] digital maps on big screens to see where a computer algorithm predicts crime will happen next." It is "part of a roughly $6 million experiment," which is "aimed at complimenting traditional police work" and overhauling "the force of some 12,500 officers."

The boy's mother Kristi Goll, turned to Facebook to make the "desperate plea" for her child Jackson, after finding out that no family members were a match to donate a kidney. Goll's Facebook post was "shared more than 1,400 times," but after a month "there were no matches." In mid-March, Bittorf saw the Facebook post and contacted Goll. Bittorf is quoted as saying, "If roles were reversed and it were my kid, I would move hell and earth for my kid, too." Bittorf began the testing to see if she was a match for the kidney donation. After finding out the good news, Bittorf showed up to Goll's home "in uniform" to surprise the family. Bittorf said, "I took an oath to serve and protect my community and now my kidney will serve and protect you." CNN adds that Bittorf's "resolve to help Jackson was similar to her drive to become a police officer: She simply wants to help people."

According to Fox, "both have members covered in head-to-toe tattoos, are well known for their murderous tactics and originated in some of the same Los Angeles neighborhoods." Fox says the two gangs "are bitter rivals whose ongoing feud is responsible for the deaths of thousands across the U.S., Mexico and Central America." Barrio 18 is "believed to operate in around 120 cities in 30 states, but has made its presence most felt in its home state of California." Fox News, adds, "Much of the street crime in Los Angeles County is believed to be related to the gang and federal law enforcement said that while street-level drug dealing is Barrio 18's main income source, the group has been linked to murders, assaults, arson, copyright infringement, extortion, human trafficking, illegal immigration, kidnapping, prostitution, robbery and weapons trafficking."

The article quotes Gottlieb as saying, "Given the scope of the opioid crisis, and the risk posed by these synthetic drugs, it's my belief that we need to devote even more resources and attention to these risks." The FDA also plans to deploy employees "to the FDA's cybercrime and forensic-chemistry units," the Post adds.

At the Smart Gun Symposium in Washington D.C. on Thursday, supporters of the technology "discussed how upgrading firearms with gun-locking features like fingerprint scanners and radio-frequency identification tags could help protect police and prevent shootings," and "also dismissed concerns that hackers could find ways to trick the features." CNET adds, "Safety and reliability are key issues when it comes to the potential for widespread adoption of high-tech firearms. Nearly 60 percent of police officers told the symposium they'd be interested in using smart guns, once the weapons prove reliable from a security and effectiveness perspective."

London Police To Use Facial Recognition Software At Upcoming Festival.

With the city's murder rate up by 3 percent overall, the 7th District saw a 39 percent drop in the rate from January through July of this year over the same period last year. Three other districts using the same technology also saw "between 15 percent and 29 percent fewer shootings, and 9 percent to 18 percent fewer homicides, according to the department's data." The technology involves police "scan[ning] digital maps on big screens to see where a computer algorithm predicts crime will happen next." It is "part of a roughly $6 million experiment," which is "aimed at complimenting traditional police work" and overhauling "the force of some 12,500 officers."

<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7979436-105b&l=02e-dd8&t=c> (8/4, Moghe) reports, in its weekly "beyond the call of duty" segment, about Milton, Wisconsin, Police Department Officer Lindsey Bittorf, who donated a kidney to a 8-year-old child after seeing a Facebook post. The boy's mother Kristi Goll, turned to Facebook to make the "desperate plea" for her child Jackson, after finding out that no family members were a match to donate a kidney. Goll's Facebook post was "shared more than 1,400 times," but after a month "there were no matches." In mid-March, Bittorf saw the Facebook post and contacted Goll. Bittorf is quoted as saying, "If roles were reversed and it were my kid, I would move hell and earth for my kid, too." Bittorf began the testing to see if she was a match for the kidney donation. After finding out the good news, Bittorf showed up to Goll's home "in uniform" to surprise the family. Bittorf said, "I took an oath to serve and protect my community and now my kidney will serve and protect you." CNN adds that Bittorf's "resolve to help Jackson was similar to her drive to become a police officer: She simply wants to help people."

GOP Governors Deploying State Troopers In Response To Rise In Violent Crime.

In an analysis, the Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7972275-d6e8&l=013-8fc&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7972275-d6e8&l=014-6d4&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7972275-d6e8&l=015-4b9&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/6, Craig, Ockerman) reports Republican governors around the country are responding to rising homicide rates in major cities by dispatching additional state troopers to violent areas. The Post highlights Missouri Gov. Eric Greitens' recent deployment of state troopers to St. Louis highways - an effort that has received support from Democratic city officials - and also examines similar efforts in Arkansas, Texas, and South Carolina. The Post adds, however, that "the implementation of the state response can clash with local policing strategies" and that some on the left "fear a shift away from Obama-era initiatives such as community policing, fewer mandatory minimum sentences and limits on the militarization of police units."

Each year, individual members, committees, sections, and divisions are given the opportunity to submit resolutions for the membership's consideration. The resolutions process is the cornerstone of IACP's policy development. Through this process, the association membership addresses critical issues facing law enforcement. The resolution binds the official actions of the IACP staff and activities and serves as the guiding statement in accomplishing the work of the association.

The deadline to submit all 2017 resolutions for consideration is August 22, 2017. Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7972275-d6e8&l=02e-dd8&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/4, Moghe) reports, in its weekly "beyond the call of duty" segment, about Milton, Wisconsin, Police Department Officer Lindsey Bittorf, who donated a kidney to a 8-year-old child after seeing a Facebook post. The boy's mother Kristi Goll, turned to Facebook to make the "desperate plea" for her child Jackson, after finding out that no family members were a match to donate a kidney. Goll's Facebook post was "shared more than 1,400 times," but after a month "there were no matches." In mid-March, Bittorf saw the Facebook post and contacted Goll. Bittorf is quoted as saying, "If roles were reversed and it were my kid, I would move hell and earth for my kid, too." Bittorf began the testing to see if she was a match for the kidney donation. After finding out the good news, Bittorf showed up to Goll's home "in uniform" to surprise the family. Bittorf said, "I took an oath to serve and protect my community and now my kidney will serve and protect you." CNN adds that Bittorf's "resolve to help Jackson was similar to her drive to become a police officer: She simply wants to help people."

GOP Governors Deploying State Troopers In Response To Rise In Violent Crime.

In an analysis, the Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7968590-fc23&l=013-8fc&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7968590-fc23&l=014-6d4&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7968590-fc23&l=015-4b9&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/6, Craig, Ockerman) reports Republican governors around the country are responding to rising homicide rates in major cities by dispatching additional state troopers to violent areas. The Post highlights Missouri Gov. Eric Greitens' recent deployment of state troopers to St. Louis highways - an effort that has received support from Democratic city officials - and also examines similar efforts in Arkansas, Texas, and South Carolina. The Post adds, however, that "the implementation of the state response can clash with local policing strategies" and that some on the left "fear a shift away from Obama-era initiatives such as community policing, fewer mandatory minimum sentences and limits on the militarization of police units."

According to Fox, "both have members covered in head-to-toe tattoos, are well known for their murderous tactics and originated in some of the same Los Angeles neighborhoods." Fox says the two gangs "are bitter rivals whose ongoing feud is responsible for the deaths of thousands across the U.S., Mexico and Central America." Barrio 18 is "believed to operate in around 120 cities in 30 states, but has made its presence most felt in its home state of California." Fox News, adds, "Much of the street crime in Los Angeles County is believed to be related to the gang and federal law enforcement said that while street-level drug dealing is Barrio 18's main income source, the group has been linked to murders, assaults, arson, copyright infringement, extortion, human trafficking, illegal immigration, kidnapping, prostitution, robbery and weapons trafficking."

Bittorf is quoted as saying, "If roles were reversed and it were my kid, I would move hell and earth for my kid, too." Bittorf began the testing to see if she was a match for the kidney donation. After finding out the good news, Bittorf showed up to Goll's home "in uniform" to surprise the family. Bittorf said, "I took an oath to serve and protect my community and now my kidney will serve and protect you." CNN adds that Bittorf's "resolve to help Jackson was similar to her drive to become a police officer: She simply wants to help people."

Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=006-724&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/5, Corasaniti) reports the Dar Al Farooq mosque in Bloomington, Minnesota was rocked by a blast on Saturday as worshipers were gathering for morning prayers. No injuries were reported, though the "building sustained damage to its front." Police said that a "preliminary investigation indicates the explosion was caused by a destructive device." The FBI is taking the lead on the investigation, with assistance from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives.

Policing & Policy

GOP Governors Deploying State Troopers In Response To Rise In Violent Crime.

In an analysis, the Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=013-8fc&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=014-6d4&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=015-4b9&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/6, Craig, Ockerman) reports Republican governors around the country are responding to rising homicide rates in major cities by dispatching additional state troopers to violent areas. The Post highlights Missouri Gov. Eric Greitens' recent deployment of state troopers to St. Louis highways - an effort that has received support from Democratic city officials - and also examines similar efforts in Arkansas, Texas, and South Carolina. The Post adds, however, that "the implementation of the state response can clash with local policing strategies" and that some on the left "fear a shift away from Obama-era initiatives such as community policing, fewer mandatory minimum sentences and limits on the militarization of police units."

Each year, individual members, committees, sections, and divisions are given the opportunity to submit resolutions for the membership's consideration. The resolutions process is the cornerstone of IACP's policy development. Through this process, the association membership addresses critical issues facing law enforcement. The resolution binds the official actions of the IACP staff and activities and serves as the guiding statement in accomplishing the work of the association.

The deadline to submit all 2017 resolutions for consideration is August 22, 2017. To view previously passed resolutions, please visit the resolutions page on the IACP website at <http://www.theiacp.org/Resolutions> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=016-7b7&t=c> . According to Fox, "both have members covered in head-to-toe tattoos, are well known for their murderous tactics and originated in some of the same Los Angeles neighborhoods." Fox says the two gangs "are bitter rivals whose ongoing feud is responsible for the deaths of thousands across the U.S., Mexico and Central America." Barrio 18 is "believed to operate in around 120 cities in 30 states, but has made its presence most felt in its home state of California." Fox News, adds, "Much of the street crime in Los Angeles County is believed to be related to the gang and federal law enforcement said that while street-level drug dealing is Barrio 18's main income source, the group has been linked to murders, assaults, arson, copyright infringement, extortion, human trafficking, illegal immigration, kidnapping, prostitution, robbery and weapons trafficking."

FDA To Bolster Fentanyl Detection Efforts At Mail Facilities.

The article quotes Gottlieb as saying, "Given the scope of the opioid crisis, and the risk posed by these synthetic drugs, it's my belief that we need to devote even more resources and attention to these risks." The FDA also plans to deploy employees "to the FDA's cybercrime and forensic-chemistry units," the Post adds.

Smart Gun Advocates Urge Public Not To Be Worried About Hacked Firearms.

CNET News <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=023-179&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=024-149&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=025-334&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/5, Ng) reports, "Even after a hacker at Defcon showed that smart guns aren't all that smart, advocates for new firearm technology aren't worried." At the Smart Gun Symposium in Washington D.C. on Thursday, supporters of the technology "discussed how upgrading firearms with gun-locking features like fingerprint scanners and radio-frequency identification tags could help protect police and prevent shootings," and "also dismissed concerns that hackers could find ways to trick the features." CNET adds, "Safety and reliability are key issues when it comes to the potential for widespread adoption of high-tech firearms. Nearly 60 percent of police officers told the symposium they'd be interested in using smart guns, once the weapons prove reliable from a security and effectiveness perspective."

London Police To Use Facial Recognition Software At Upcoming Festival.

The Guardian (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=026-152&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=027-6f9&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=028-087&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/5, Dodd) reports London Metropolitan Police "will use facial recognition software to scan the faces of tens of thousands of revellers at this year's Notting Hill carnival even though civil liberties groups believe such an action would be discriminatory." The agency "has described the planned deployment as a pilot project intended to look for suspected troublemakers to keep those attending safe." Police at the two-day event "will use the facial recognition system and match faces in the crowd against databases of people they suspect will cause trouble, comparing them with images of people previously arrested or under bail conditions to keep away from the event." The Met released a statement that said, "The technology involves the use of overt cameras which scan the faces of those passing by and flag up potential matches against a database of custody images. The database will be populated with images of individuals who are forbidden from attending carnival, as well as individuals wanted by police."

Chicago Police Use New Technology To Fight Violent Crime.

Reuters <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=029-d53&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=02a-e36&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=02b-344&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/5, McLaughlin) reports Chicago police on the city's South Side are "using technology to try to rein in a surging murder rate." With the city's murder rate up by 3 percent overall, the 7th District saw a 39 percent drop in the rate from January through July of this year over the same period last year. Three other districts using the same technology also saw "between 15 percent and 29 percent fewer shootings, and 9 percent to 18 percent fewer homicides, according to the department's data." The technology involves police "scan[ning] digital maps on big screens to see where a computer algorithm predicts crime will happen next." It is "part of a roughly $6 million experiment," which is "aimed at complimenting traditional police work" and overhauling "the force of some 12,500 officers."

Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017080701iacp&r=7963908-0d69&l=02e-dd8&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/4, Moghe) reports, in its weekly "beyond the call of duty" segment, about Milton, Wisconsin, Police Department Officer Lindsey Bittorf, who donated a kidney to a 8-year-old child after seeing a Facebook post. The boy's mother Kristi Goll, turned to Facebook to make the "desperate plea" for her child Jackson, after finding out that no family members were a match to donate a kidney. Goll's Facebook post was "shared more than 1,400 times," but after a month "there were no matches." In mid-March, Bittorf saw the Facebook post and contacted Goll. Bittorf is quoted as saying, "If roles were reversed and it were my kid, I would move hell and earth for my kid, too." Bittorf began the testing to see if she was a match for the kidney donation. After finding out the good news, Bittorf showed up to Goll's home "in uniform" to surprise the family. Bittorf said, "I took an oath to serve and protect my community and now my kidney will serve and protect you." CNN adds that Bittorf's "resolve to help Jackson was similar to her drive to become a police officer: She simply wants to help people."

Webinar: Using Facial Recognition in Investigations that Involve Children

Thursday, August 31st, 3:00 PM - 4:00 PM EST

Register Now <http://www2.vigilantsolutions.com/e/43142/facial-recognition-webinar/5vgcdx/683289393>

Roger Rodriguez, Retired NYPD Detective, shares best practices, techniques and strategies.

Agencies like the NYPD have analyzed images for investigations including crimes against children that span trafficking, abuse, child prostitution and exploitation. Attend this webinar and go step-by-step through the facial recognition investigative process, learn essential best practices, techniques and strategies to produce facial recognition leads. Get the facts on how to deal with less than perfect images from sources including CCTV cameras, bank ATM's, social media, and sources where faces are often rejected for facial recognition.

Join Vigilant Solutions law enforcement facial recognition expert, Roger Rodriguez, as he discusses how a unique approach can make use of these images to generate quality leads in any investigation.

the terror cell accused in last week's van attack in Barcelona told a judge Tuesday that the group planned to attack monuments around the city and that the imam who led the group intended to blow himself up in the process." Suspect Mohamed Houli Chemlal "said plans were scaled back after the accidental blast Wednesday, which killed two other cell members and destroyed a home packed with gas canisters in the town of Alcanar, 120 miles southwest of Barcelona." vehicle-into-crowd attacks will alter the look of South Beach's Lincoln Road - concrete barriers will soon frame the internationally known shopping and socializing promenade." Miami Beach Mayor Phillip Levin announced on Tuesday that "temporary concrete barriers will be placed along the curb line on the Alton Road and Washington Avenue entrances to the Lincoln Road pedestrian mall. The barriers will be temporary, until a more permanent and aesthetically pleasing option can be implemented." Levine "said last week's Barcelona attack by a van, which killed 13 people and injured more than 100 by barreling down a walkway, prompted a reexamination of how vulnerable Miami Beach's pedestrian-heavy areas would be to such an attack." Miami Beach Police Chief Dan Oates said law enforcement is on "appropriate alert because of the events in Europe." Oates added, "We are evaluating our existing security measures for all our high-volume pedestrian areas. ... Plans have been in the works to permanently upgrade physical security on Lincoln Road and Española Way. We are considering interim, temporary measures as well."

436-a555&l=021-948&t=c> (8/22, Lebeaux) reports the Franklin, Massachusetts, Police Department will use a state grant to "aid in its efforts to remove impaired drivers from the road." The grant, which relates to this year's "Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over" campaign, will "allow the department to increase the number of impaired-driving patrols on local roads." The Globe says this year's campaign will "feature a focus on marijuana impairment in drivers, including the exponentially increased impairment caused by the combination of marijuana and alcohol." Franklin Police Chief Thomas Lynch is quoted as saying, "This grant funding will allow us to add patrols to specifically target impaired driving, with the goal of increasing the safety for the entire community of Franklin."

436-a555&l=024-699&t=c> (8/21, Tsiaperas, Writer) reports the Dallas Police Department recently used federal funding to "launch in-house forensic testing that helps detectives track down who is posting online ads selling children for sex." Collin County Sheriff Jim Skinner said efforts to stop child exploitation "would be nearly impossible without the North Texas Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force." The task force's funding, which is currently at $60 million per year, is part of the Protect Our Children Act. Collin County authorities "have arrested 195 sexual predators since joining the task force," while Dallas has arrested "more than 38 people...this year on charges of solicitation of a minor or sex trafficking of a child."

Miami Beach Mayor Phillip Levin announced on Tuesday that "temporary concrete barriers will be placed along the curb line on the Alton Road and Washington Avenue entrances to the Lincoln Road pedestrian mall. The barriers will be temporary, until a more permanent and aesthetically pleasing option can be implemented." Levine "said last week's Barcelona attack by a van, which killed 13 people and injured more than 100 by barreling down a walkway, prompted a reexamination of how vulnerable Miami Beach's pedestrian-heavy areas would be to such an attack." Miami Beach Police Chief Dan Oates said law enforcement is on "appropriate alert because of the events in Europe." Oates added, "We are evaluating our existing security measures for all our high-volume pedestrian areas. ... Plans have been in the works to permanently upgrade physical security on Lincoln Road and Española Way. We are considering interim, temporary measures

as well."

Share to Twitter (8/22) reports that the state of New York "says its driver's license facial recognition technology has led to the arrest of 4,000 people in connection to identify theft or fraud crimes," and that
"this number is likely to skyrocket in the wake of the state doubling the number of measurement points for photographs." Ars adds that "as many as 16,000 people face some type of non-criminal administrative action in connection to the state's facial-recognition program, which was adopted in 2010." Ars notes that New York's DMV photo database "is not among those databases forwarded to an FBI program containing about 411.9 million facial recognition images of people who have committed no crimes."

Share to Twitter (8/22) reports on FBI criminal profiler James R. Fitzgerald's work on the Unabomber case beginning on 1995. Fitzgerald says that although Ted Kaczynski was a "'criminal mastermind' who went to extraordinary lengths to erase any trace of physical evidence," the FBI "did have one important source of evidence," the letters he sent "to the media and some of his victims," including "sprawling, 35,000-word
'manifesto.'" According to Fitzgerald, "the Unabomber's writings were a 'pivotal factor' in cracking the
case."

Miami Beach Mayor Phillip Levin announced on Tuesday that "temporary concrete barriers will be placed along the curb line on the Alton Road and Washington Avenue entrances to the Lincoln Road pedestrian mall. The barriers will be temporary, until a more permanent and aesthetically pleasing option can be implemented." Levine "said last week's Barcelona attack by a van, which killed 13 people and injured more than 100 by barreling down a walkway, prompted a reexamination of how vulnerable Miami Beach's pedestrian-heavy areas would be to such an attack." Miami Beach Police Chief Dan Oates said law enforcement is on "appropriate alert because of the events in Europe." Oates added, "We are evaluating our existing security measures for all our high-volume pedestrian areas. ... Plans have been in the works to permanently upgrade physical security on Lincoln Road and Española Way. We are considering interim, temporary measures

as well."

Collin County Sheriff Jim Skinner said efforts to stop child exploitation "would be nearly impossible without the North Texas Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force." The task force's funding, which is currently at $60 million per year, is part of the Protect Our Children Act. Collin County authorities "have arrested 195 sexual predators since joining the task force," while Dallas has arrested "more than 38 people...this year on charges of solicitation of a minor or sex trafficking of a child."

vehicle-into-crowd attacks will alter the look of South Beach's Lincoln Road - concrete barriers will soon frame the internationally known shopping and socializing promenade." Miami Beach Mayor Phillip Levin announced on Tuesday that "temporary concrete barriers will be placed along the curb line on the Alton Road and Washington Avenue entrances to the Lincoln Road pedestrian mall. The barriers will be temporary, until a more permanent and aesthetically pleasing option can be implemented." Levine "said last week's Barcelona attack by a van, which killed 13 people and injured more than 100 by barreling down a walkway, prompted a reexamination of how vulnerable Miami Beach's pedestrian-heavy areas would be to such an attack." Miami Beach Police Chief Dan Oates said law enforcement is on "appropriate alert because of the events in Europe." Oates added, "We are evaluating our existing security measures for all our high-volume pedestrian areas. ... Plans have been in the works to permanently upgrade physical security on Lincoln Road and Española Way. We are considering interim, temporary measures as well."

908-4c5d&l=021-948&t=c> (8/22, Lebeaux) reports the Franklin, Massachusetts, Police Department will use a state grant to "aid in its efforts to remove impaired drivers from the road." The grant, which relates to this year's "Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over" campaign, will "allow the department to increase the number of impaired-driving patrols on local roads." The Globe says this year's campaign will "feature a focus on marijuana impairment in drivers, including the exponentially increased impairment caused by the combination of marijuana and alcohol." Franklin Police Chief Thomas Lynch is quoted as saying, "This grant funding will allow us to add patrols to specifically target impaired driving, with the goal of increasing the safety for the entire community of Franklin."

908-4c5d&l=024-699&t=c> (8/21, Tsiaperas, Writer) reports the Dallas Police Department recently used federal funding to "launch in-house forensic testing that helps detectives track down who is posting online ads selling children for sex." Collin County Sheriff Jim Skinner said efforts to stop child exploitation "would be nearly impossible without the North Texas Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force." The task force's funding, which is currently at $60 million per year, is part of the Protect Our Children Act. Collin County authorities "have arrested 195 sexual predators since joining the task force," while Dallas has arrested "more than 38 people...this year on charges of solicitation of a minor or sex trafficking of a child."

Miami Beach Mayor Phillip Levin announced on Tuesday that "temporary concrete barriers will be placed along the curb line on the Alton Road and Washington Avenue entrances to the Lincoln Road pedestrian mall. The barriers will be temporary, until a more permanent and aesthetically pleasing option can be implemented." Levine "said last week's Barcelona attack by a van, which killed 13 people and injured more than 100 by barreling down a walkway, prompted a reexamination of how vulnerable Miami Beach's pedestrian-heavy areas would be to such an attack." Miami Beach Police Chief Dan Oates said law enforcement is on "appropriate alert because of the events in Europe." Oates added, "We are evaluating our existing security measures for all our high-volume pedestrian areas. ... Plans have been in the works to permanently upgrade physical security on Lincoln Road and Española Way. We are considering interim, temporary measures

Los Angeles Sues US Department Of Justice Over Sanctuary Policies.

The CPS "will consider the impact online hate could have not only on the targeted victim, but also on the broader community." Director of public prosecutions Alison Saunders is quoted as saying, "When an ever greater amount of our time is spent online, it is only right that we do everything possible to ensure that people are protected from abuse that can now follow them everywhere via the screen of their smartphone or tablet."

Massachusetts Police Department To Use State Grant To Combat Impaired Driving.

The grant, which relates to this year's "Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over" campaign, will "allow the department to increase the number of impaired-driving patrols on local roads." The Globe says this year's campaign will "feature a focus on marijuana impairment in drivers, including the exponentially increased impairment caused by the combination of marijuana and alcohol." Franklin Police Chief Thomas Lynch is quoted as saying, "This grant funding will allow us to add patrols to specifically target impaired driving, with the goal of increasing the safety for the entire community of Franklin."

Dallas Police Using Federally Funded Forensic Tools To Track Online Child Exploitation.

Collin County Sheriff Jim Skinner said efforts to stop child exploitation "would be nearly impossible without the North Texas Internet Crimes Against Children Task Force." The task force's funding, which is currently at $60 million per year, is part of the Protect Our Children Act. Collin County authorities "have arrested 195 sexual predators since joining the task force," while Dallas has arrested "more than 38 people...this year on charges of solicitation of a minor or sex trafficking of a child."

Share to Twitter (8/22) reports that the state of New York "says its driver's license facial recognition technology has led to the arrest of 4,000 people in connection to identify theft or fraud crimes," and that
"this number is likely to skyrocket in the wake of the state doubling the number of measurement points for photographs." Ars adds that "as many as 16,000 people face some type of non-criminal administrative action in connection to the state's facial-recognition program, which was adopted in 2010." Ars notes that New York's DMV photo database "is not among those databases forwarded to an FBI program containing about 411.9 million facial recognition images of people who have committed no crimes."

Share to Twitter (8/22) reports on FBI criminal profiler James R. Fitzgerald's work on the Unabomber case beginning on 1995. Fitzgerald says that although Ted Kaczynski was a "'criminal mastermind' who went to extraordinary lengths to erase any trace of physical evidence," the FBI "did have one important source of evidence," the letters he sent "to the media and some of his victims," including "sprawling, 35,000-word
'manifesto.'" According to Fitzgerald, "the Unabomber's writings were a 'pivotal factor' in cracking the
case."

As Taser warns of more and more risks, cities bear a burden in court

At least 442 wrongful death suits have been filed over fatalities that followed the use of a Taser, almost all since the stun guns began gaining widespread popularity with police in the early 2000s, Reuters found in a nationwide review of legal filings. Police departments and the municipalities they represent have faced 435 of these suits. The manufacturer was a defendant in 128 of them.

Trump didn't pardon Joe Arpaio in Phoenix - but hints that he will

President Donald Trump did not pardon former Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio while Trump was in Phoenix, but he indicated support for the idea in his speech Tuesday night. Post bail

The bail system, enshrined in the Bill of Rights, is meant to ensure that all defendants, presumed innocent before trial, get a shot at freedom and return to court. But allowing people to pay for their release has proved unfair to people who don't have much money. The poor are far more likely to get stuck in jail, which makes them far more likely to get fired from jobs, lose custody of children, plead guilty to something they didn't do, serve time in prison and suffer the lifelong consequences of a criminal conviction. Those who borrow from a bail bondsman often fall into crippling debt. At the same time, the wealthy can buy their way out of pretrial detention on just about any offense, including murder. The bald inequity of this system has triggered a national movement to eliminate bail altogether. But what to replace it with? In New Jersey, the answer is an algorithm, a mathematical formula to determine whether someone is likely to return to court for trial or get arrested again.

Solving a murder mystery with ancestry websites

As new DNA-testing techniques have reshaped the criminal-justice landscape, leading to both arrests and exonerations, they may also open up new opportunities to address unidentified bodies. Some popular DNA-testing services like Ancestry.com and 23andMe won't readily work with law-enforcement agencies. And that's with good reason, according to Mechthild Prinz, a forensic-science professor at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. Cooperating with law enforcement could put such companies in a tight spot with their customers, she says. "You are doing your genealogy, but all of a sudden you're putting your family into forensic investigations?"

As Taser warns of more and more risks, cities bear a burden in court

At least 442 wrongful death suits have been filed over fatalities that followed the use of a Taser, almost all since the stun guns began gaining widespread popularity with police in the early 2000s, Reuters found in a nationwide review of legal filings. Police departments and the municipalities they represent have faced 435 of these suits. The manufacturer was a defendant in 128 of them.

Facial recognition technology helped lead to more than 4,000 arrests since 2010, Cuomo says

Special facial recognition technology used by the state has helped lead to the arrest of more than 4,000 people involved in identity theft or fraud since 2010, the Cuomo administration announced Monday.

Trump didn't pardon Joe Arpaio in Phoenix - but hints that he will

President Donald Trump did not pardon former Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio while Trump was in Phoenix, but he indicated support for the idea in his speech Tuesday night. The 85-year-old lawman is scheduled to be sentenced on Oct. 5 for a federal criminal-contempt conviction stemming from a racial-profiling case. Arpaio could face up to six months in jail.

Post bail

The bail system, enshrined in the Bill of Rights, is meant to ensure that all defendants, presumed innocent before trial, get a shot at freedom and return to court. But allowing people to pay for their release has proved unfair to people who don't have much money. The poor are far more likely to get stuck in jail, which makes them far more likely to get fired from jobs, lose custody of children, plead guilty to something they didn't do, serve time in prison and suffer the lifelong consequences of a criminal conviction. Those who borrow from a bail bondsman often fall into crippling debt. At the same time, the wealthy can buy their way out of pretrial detention on just about any offense, including murder. The bald inequity of this system has triggered a national movement to eliminate bail altogether. But what to replace it with? In New Jersey, the answer is an algorithm, a mathematical formula to determine whether someone is likely to return to court for trial or get arrested again.

Solving a murder mystery with ancestry websites

As new DNA-testing techniques have reshaped the criminal-justice landscape, leading to both arrests and exonerations, they may also open up new opportunities to address unidentified bodies. Some popular DNA-testing services like Ancestry.com and 23andMe won't readily work with law-enforcement agencies. And that's with good reason, according to Mechthild Prinz, a forensic-science professor at John Jay College of Criminal Justice. Cooperating with law enforcement could put such companies in a tight spot with their customers, she says. "You are doing your genealogy, but all of a sudden you're putting your family into forensic investigations?"

a "landmark ruling" in what "police describe as the largest ever gang injunction." Eighteen men "from two rival criminal groups" have been "banned from parts of Birmingham and must register phones and vehicles with police." After recent incidents of gun crime in the city, the Police and City Council "sought to secure the injunctions in a civil case heard at Birmingham Crown Court earlier this year." During the civil case, "more than 80 people from the Home Office and police gave evidence between February and June ahead of the orders being granted in July." The gang members are "forbidden from associating with each other and entering the city centre," and the incarcerated gang members will "receive the orders in jail where restrictions will be imposed on certain visitors to limit any gang associations, police said." "following around 20 firearms offences involving gangs in Birmingham during the summer of 2015 and start of 2016." The Telegraph adds that another condition of the injunctions is that the gang members "are banned from participating in music videos that may promote or support gang-related violence."

Johnson Crew and the Burger Bar Boys, became "national news" after the "cold-blooded murders of two girls at a new year party in Birmingham in 2003." intervention team within the Baltimore Police Department helped peacefully resolve a barricade situation on Wednesday involving a suicidal woman who sent a picture of a gun to family members from a West Baltimore apartment where she was holed up with two children, according to police." Members of the team responded to the scene and "after 'extensive conversations, they were able to get her to come out of the home and the situation was resolved without further incident,' police said." The Sun explains that the team, which has been piloted for several months, "pairs police with social workers under a partnership with Behavioral Health Systems of Baltimore." Police Commissioner Kevin Davis "praised the team for helping to bring the barricade to a peaceful resolution." Davis is quoted as saying, "People are dealing with various degrees of trauma and mental health crisis. ... We started this team for situations like this. Pairing a sworn officer with a licensed clinician is a deescalation method necessary in 21st century policing. I'm grateful for a peaceful resolution."

save money in the long term, the Orlando Police and Fire departments are asking the city for permission to spend $1.9 million in bond money for a new dispatch system." The Sentinel explains that fire and police dispatchers "work in the same room at the city's Emergency Operations Center, [but] the agencies work on two call dispatch platforms that don't share data, said Orlando Fire Department spokeswoman Ashley Papagni." The new dispatch system would be akin to a "group text message - everyone gets the information at the same time, eliminating the middle man." OFD Deputy Chief Rich Wales "says the new system could shave crucial seconds off response times." OPD Deputy Chief Mark Canty "said streamlined communications would be especially beneficial during major incidents where there are multiple injured patients or many factors involved."

and Berkeley are planning a large show of force this weekend at two right-wing rallies, enlisting hundreds of officers each day in a bid to prevent violence from erupting in the wake of the killing of an antiracism protester in Charlottesville, Va." Officials are "urging people to stay home," and "said Tuesday that they were boosting staffing and bringing in outside help to ensure order among what could be dueling crowds at Saturday's Patriot Prayer rally at Crissy Field and Sunday's No Marxism in America event at Berkeley's Civic Center Park." The Chronicle adds, "The idea behind using hundreds of officers, said Bay Area officials and law enforcement experts, is to maintain the ability to separate people who may clash, while not having to resort to heavy use of force." The San Francisco Police Department "said all available officers would be on the job, with overtime shifts required."

Law enforcement officials testified to a legislative committee on Tuesday and "told the panel that they supported the current law under which Indiana State Police check people who want to legally carry a gun." State police Maj. Mike White "said a few thousand people a year are typically denied permits because they are prohibited for reasons including criminal history or mental health issues," and "said removing the permit requirement could put police officers at greater risk." Kendallville Police Chief Rob Wiley is quoted as saying, "The law that is currently in existence in Indiana is a very Second Amendment friendly law, quite frankly, while still allowing law enforcement to do what it needs to do, which is protect the general public."

According to the News, "whether they're being shot at, cussed at, zapped with a stun gun or denied service at a restaurant, many police officers in Metro Detroit and across the country feel they're being disrespected more than ever. 'Everybody thinks it's cool to not talk to the police, and to hate the police,' Detroit Police officer Ki'Juan Anderson said. 'The bad guys love this. A criminal will commit a crime, and nobody wants to tell us what happened.' Anderson "was in the Special Operations crew of Kenneth Steil in September, when Steil was killed in a shootout with a carjacking suspect," and since then, "10 Detroit officers have been shot in the line of duty, while shots were fired at several other officers."

Individuals who seek help through the program "will not face any charges, even if they are in possession of drugs when they come in for help, according to authorities." The News-Sun says 177 people have "walked into a participating police station[s] since the program was initiated in June 2016." Officials announced on Tuesday that "four new local agencies - the Zion, Deerfield and Fox Lake police departments and the Lake County Sheriff's Office - have now joined the initial seven departments in the program." The program "was founded by the Lake County Opioid Initiative, in conjunction with private and public sector support and the original seven police departments to participate - Gurnee, Mundelein, Lake Forest, Grayslake, Libertyville, Round Lake Beach and Round Lake Park." Lake County Sheriff Mark Curran said, "As leaders in public safety, we continuously seek solutions that keep families intact and ensure jails house criminals, not people suffering from substance abuse disorders. ... We cannot cure addiction through arrests and incarceration, but we can be a supportive link to services for those who are ready for help."

reaction to its proposal to fly drones during a one-year pilot program." The Times says drones have been "hailed by law enforcement across the country as a valuable technology that could help find missing hikers or monitor armed suspects without jeopardizing the safety of officers," but have also been met with criticism from "privacy advocates and police critics." The LAPD "envision[s] flying the drones in a limited number of situations, such as standoffs with hostage-takers or barricaded suspects, bomb scares and shootings in which a gunman is still targeting people." Assistant Chief Beatrice Girmala "said earlier this month that if the LAPD were to fly drones, each use would require the approval of a high-ranking officer and would be documented for later review."

UK Police Laud "Landmark Ruling" For Gang Member Injunctions.

BBC News (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7972275-c4f1&l=004-28b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7972275-c4f1&l=005-e83&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7972275-c4f1&l=006-39d&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports West Midlands Police are lauding a "landmark ruling" in what "police describe as the largest ever gang injunction." Eighteen men "from two rival criminal groups" have been "banned from parts of Birmingham and must register phones and vehicles with police." After recent incidents of gun crime in the city, the Police and City Council "sought to secure the injunctions in a civil case heard at Birmingham Crown Court earlier this year." During the civil case, "more than 80 people from the Home Office and police gave evidence between February and June ahead of the orders being granted in July." The gang members are "forbidden from associating with each other and entering the city centre," and the incarcerated gang members will "receive the orders in jail where restrictions will be imposed on certain visitors to limit any gang associations, police said." The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7972275-c4f1&l=007-5a2&t=c> Telegraph (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7972275-c4f1&l=008-c83&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7972275-c4f1&l=009-7d3&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports the injunction was sought "following around 20 firearms offences involving gangs in Birmingham during the summer of 2015 and start of 2016." The Telegraph adds that another condition of the injunctions is that the gang members "are banned from participating in music videos that may promote or support gang-related violence."

new year party in Birmingham in 2003." Police allege the gangs were "involved in local drug dealing, robberies, and kidnappings before shootings started taking place outside nightclubs and community centres."

Members of the team responded to the scene and "after 'extensive conversations, they were able to get her to come out of the home and the situation was resolved without further incident,' police said." The Sun explains that the team, which has been piloted for several months, "pairs police with social workers under a partnership with Behavioral Health Systems of Baltimore." Police Commissioner Kevin Davis "praised the team for helping to bring the barricade to a peaceful resolution." Davis is quoted as saying, "People are dealing with various degrees of trauma and mental health crisis. ... We started this team for situations like this. Pairing a sworn officer with a licensed clinician is a deescalation method necessary in 21st century policing. I'm grateful for a peaceful resolution."

Orlando Police Seek City Permission To Purchase New Dispatch System.

The Sentinel explains that fire and police dispatchers "work in the same room at the city's Emergency Operations Center, [but] the agencies work on two call dispatch platforms that don't share data, said Orlando Fire Department spokeswoman Ashley Papagni." The new dispatch system would be akin to a "group text message - everyone gets the information at the same time, eliminating the middle man." OFD Deputy Chief Rich Wales "says the new system could shave crucial seconds off response times." OPD Deputy Chief Mark Canty "said streamlined communications would be especially beneficial during major incidents where there are multiple injured patients or many factors involved."

Law enforcement officials testified to a legislative committee on Tuesday and "told the panel that they supported the current law under which Indiana State Police check people who want to legally carry a gun." State police Maj. Mike White "said a few thousand people a year are typically denied permits because they are prohibited for reasons including criminal history or mental health issues," and "said removing the permit requirement could put police officers at greater risk." Kendallville Police Chief Rob Wiley is quoted as saying, "The law that is currently in existence in Indiana is a very Second Amendment friendly law, quite frankly, while still allowing law enforcement to do what it needs to do, which is protect the general public."

According to the News, "whether they're being shot at, cussed at, zapped with a stun gun or denied service at a restaurant, many police officers in Metro Detroit and across the country feel they're being disrespected more than ever. 'Everybody thinks it's cool to not talk to the police, and to hate the police,' Detroit Police officer Ki'Juan Anderson said. 'The bad guys love this. A criminal will commit a crime, and nobody wants to tell us what happened.'" Anderson "was in the Special Operations crew of Kenneth Steil in September, when Steil was killed in a shootout with a carjacking suspect," and since then, "10 Detroit officers have been shot in the line of duty, while shots were fired at several other officers."

Trenton, New Jersey, Police Director Ernest Parrey Jr. "said they hope to have more and more 'community engagement' overall in the fight against gun crimes." NJ News says the Trenton Police Department started a program last year "whereby police officers took youths violating a city curfew to participating churches, where parents had to pick them up." This year, Parrey "said the department, on Aug. 7, created a Violence Interdiction Team made of a surge of officers from other street crimes units."

Share to Twitter (8/23) reports on the program "A Way Out" in Lake County, Illinois, which "offers drug addicts the option of seeking help at local police stations." Individuals who seek help through the program "will not face any charges, even if they are in possession of drugs when they come in for help, according to authorities." The News-Sun says 177 people have "walked into a participating police station[s] since the program was initiated in June 2016." Officials announced on Tuesday that "four new local agencies - the Zion, Deerfield and Fox Lake police departments and the Lake County Sheriff's Office - have now joined the initial seven departments in the program." The program "was founded by the Lake County Opioid Initiative, in conjunction with private and public sector support and the original seven police departments to participate - Gurnee, Mundelein, Lake Forest, Grayslake, Libertyville, Round Lake Beach and Round Lake Park." Lake County Sheriff Mark Curran said, "As leaders in public safety, we continuously seek solutions that keep families intact and ensure jails house criminals, not people suffering from substance abuse disorders. ... We cannot cure addiction through arrests and incarceration, but we can be a supportive link to services for those who are ready for help."

The Times says drones have been "hailed by law enforcement across the country as a valuable technology that could help find missing hikers or monitor armed suspects without jeopardizing the safety of officers," but have also been met with criticism from "privacy advocates and police critics." The LAPD "envisions flying the drones in a limited number of situations, such as standoffs with hostage-takers or barricaded suspects, bomb scares and shootings in which a gunman is still targeting people." Assistant Chief Beatrice Girmala "said earlier this month that if the LAPD were to fly drones, each use would require the approval of a high-ranking officer and would be documented for later review."

UK Police Laud "Landmark Ruling" For Gang Member Injunctions.

BBC News (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=004-28b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=005-e83&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=006-39d&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports West Midlands Police are lauding a "landmark ruling" in what "police describe as the largest ever gang injunction." Eighteen men "from two rival criminal groups" have been "banned from parts of Birmingham and must register phones and vehicles with police." After recent incidents of gun crime in the city, the Police and City Council "sought to secure the injunctions in a civil case heard at Birmingham Crown Court earlier this year." During the civil case, "more than 80 people from the Home Office and police gave evidence between February and June ahead of the orders being granted in July." The gang members are "forbidden from associating with each other and entering the city centre," and the incarcerated gang members will "receive the orders in jail where restrictions will be imposed on certain visitors to limit any gang associations, police said." The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=007-5a2&t=c> Telegraph (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=008-c83&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=009-7d3&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports the injunction was sought "following around 20 firearms offences involving gangs in Birmingham during the summer of 2015 and start of 2016." The Telegraph adds that another condition of the injunctions is that the gang members "are banned from participating in music videos that may promote or support gang-related violence."

new year party in Birmingham in 2003." Police allege the gangs were "involved in local drug dealing, robberies, and kidnappings before shootings started taking place outside nightclubs and community centres."

Baltimore Crisis Intervention Team Peacefully Resolves Barricade Situation.

Members of the team responded to the scene and "after 'extensive conversations, they were able to get her to come out of the home and the situation was resolved without further incident,' police said." The Sun explains that the team, which has been piloted for several months, "pairs police with social workers under a partnership with Behavioral Health Systems of Baltimore." Police Commissioner Kevin Davis "praised the team for helping to bring the barricade to a peaceful resolution." Davis is quoted as saying, "People are dealing with various degrees of trauma and mental health crisis. ... We started this team for situations like this. Pairing a sworn officer with a licensed clinician is a deescalation method necessary in 21st century policing. I'm grateful for a peaceful resolution."

Orlando Police Seek City Permission To Purchase New Dispatch System.

The Sentinel explains that fire and police dispatchers "work in the same room at the city's Emergency Operations Center, [but] the agencies work on two call dispatch platforms that don't share data, said Orlando Fire Department spokeswoman Ashley Papagni." The new dispatch system would be akin to a "group text message - everyone gets the information at the same time, eliminating the middle man." OFD Deputy Chief Rich Wales "says the new system could shave crucial seconds off response times." OPD Deputy Chief Mark Canty "said streamlined communications would be especially beneficial during major incidents where there are multiple injured patients or many factors involved."

San Francisco, Berkeley Police Department Prepares For Weekend Rallies.

Officials are "urging people to stay home," and "said Tuesday that they were boosting staffing and bringing in outside help to ensure order among what could be dueling crowds at Saturday's Patriot Prayer rally at Crissy Field and Sunday's No Marxism in America event at Berkeley's Civic Center Park." The Chronicle adds, "The idea behind using hundreds of officers, said Bay Area officials and law enforcement experts, is to maintain the ability to separate people who may clash, while not having to resort to heavy use of force." The San Francisco Police Department "said all available officers would be on the job, with overtime shifts required."

Florida Sheriff's Office Warns Of Danger Of Weapons At School.

The Tampa Bay (FL) Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=016-1f4&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=017-61d&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=018-b1b&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/22) reports a Florida Middle School "was put on lockdown Tuesday after the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office received social media reports of a gun on campus, the agency said." Officers eventually found several students in possession of a BB gun, and they were charged with misdemeanors for disrupting school and resisting arrest. The Sheriff's Office "asked parents to remind their children that weapons aren't allowed in school." The Sheriff's Office added, "Even toy guns can get students in trouble and become problematic for law enforcement when confronting students in these situations."

Law Enforcement Argues Against Repealing Indiana Gun Permit Law.

Law enforcement officials testified to a legislative committee on Tuesday and "told the panel that they supported the current law under which Indiana State Police check people who want to legally carry a gun." State police Maj. Mike White "said a few thousand people a year are typically denied permits because they are prohibited for reasons including criminal history or mental health issues," and "said removing the permit requirement could put police officers at greater risk." Kendallville Police Chief Rob Wiley is quoted as saying, "The law that is currently in existence in Indiana is a very Second Amendment friendly law, quite frankly, while still allowing law enforcement to do what it needs to do, which is protect the general public."

According to the News, "whether they're being shot at, cussed at, zapped with a stun gun or denied service at a restaurant, many police officers in Metro Detroit and across the country feel they're being disrespected more than ever. 'Everybody thinks it's cool to not talk to the police, and to hate the police,' Detroit Police officer Ki'Juan Anderson said. 'The bad guys love this. A criminal will commit a crime, and nobody wants to tell us what happened.'" Anderson "was in the Special Operations crew of Kenneth Steil in September, when Steil was killed in a shootout with a carjacking suspect," and since then, "10 Detroit officers have been shot in the line of duty, while shots were fired at several other officers."

Trenton Police Director, Mayor Call On Community To Help Curb Violence.

Trenton, New Jersey, Police Director Ernest Parrey Jr. "said they hope to have more and more 'community engagement' overall in the fight against gun crimes." NJ News says the Trenton Police Department started a program last year "whereby police officers took youths violating a city curfew to participating churches, where parents had to pick them up." This year, Parrey "said the department, on Aug. 7, created a Violence Interdiction Team made of a surge of officers from other street crimes units."

Share to Twitter (8/23) reports on the program "A Way Out" in Lake County, Illinois, which "offers drug addicts the option of seeking help at local police stations." Individuals who seek help through the program "will not face any charges, even if they are in possession of drugs when they come in for help, according to authorities." The News-Sun says 177 people have "walked into a participating police station[s] since the program was initiated in June 2016." Officials announced on Tuesday that "four new local agencies - the Zion, Deerfield and Fox Lake police departments and the Lake County Sheriff's Office - have now joined the initial seven departments in the program." The program "was founded by the Lake County Opioid Initiative, in conjunction with private and public sector support and the original seven police departments to participate - Gurnee, Mundelein, Lake Forest, Grayslake, Libertyville, Round Lake Beach and Round Lake Park." Lake County Sheriff Mark Curran said, "As leaders in public safety, we continuously seek solutions that keep families intact and ensure jails house criminals, not people suffering from substance abuse disorders. ... We cannot cure addiction through arrests and incarceration, but we can be a supportive link to services for those who are ready for help."

The Times says drones have been "hailed by law enforcement across the country as a valuable technology that could help find missing hikers or monitor armed suspects without jeopardizing the safety of officers," but have also been met with criticism from "privacy advocates and police critics." The LAPD "envision[s] flying the drones in a limited number of situations, such as standoffs with hostage-takers or barricaded suspects, bomb scares and shootings in which a gunman is still targeting people." Assistant Chief Beatrice Girmala "said earlier this month that if the LAPD were to fly drones, each use would require the approval of a high-ranking officer and would be documented for later review."

a "landmark ruling" in what "police describe as the largest ever gang injunction." Eighteen men "from two rival criminal groups" have been "banned from parts of Birmingham and must register phones and vehicles with police." After recent incidents of gun crime in the city, the Police and City Council "sought to secure the injunctions in a civil case heard at Birmingham Crown Court earlier this year." During the civil case, "more than 80 people from the Home Office and police gave evidence between February and June ahead of the orders being granted in July." The gang members are "forbidden from associating with each other and entering the city centre," and the incarcerated gang members will "receive the orders in jail where restrictions will be imposed on certain visitors to limit any gang associations, police said." "following around 20 firearms offences involving gangs in Birmingham during the summer of 2015 and start of 2016." The Telegraph adds that another condition of the injunctions is that the gang members "are banned from participating in music videos that may promote or support gang-related violence."

Johnson Crew and the Burger Bar Boys, became "national news" after the "cold-blooded murders of two girls at a new year party in Birmingham in 2003." intervention team within the Baltimore Police Department helped peacefully resolve a barricade situation on Wednesday involving a suicidal woman who sent a picture of a gun to family members from a West Baltimore apartment where she was holed up with two children, according to police." Members of the team responded to the scene and "after 'extensive conversations, they were able to get her to come out of the home and the situation was resolved without further incident,' police said." The Sun explains that the team, which has been piloted for several months, "pairs police with social workers under a partnership with Behavioral Health Systems of Baltimore." Police Commissioner Kevin Davis "praised the team for helping to bring the barricade to a peaceful resolution." Davis is quoted as saying, "People are dealing with various degrees of trauma and mental health crisis. ... We started this team for situations like this. Pairing a sworn officer with a licensed clinician is a deescalation method necessary in 21st century policing. I'm grateful for a peaceful resolution."

save money in the long term, the Orlando Police and Fire departments are asking the city for permission to spend $1.9 million in bond money for a new dispatch system." The Sentinel explains that fire and police dispatchers "work in the same room at the city's Emergency Operations Center, [but] the agencies work on two call dispatch platforms that don't share data, said Orlando Fire Department spokeswoman Ashley Papagni." The new dispatch system would be akin to a "group text message - everyone gets the information at the same time, eliminating the middle man." OFD Deputy Chief Rich Wales "says the new system could shave crucial seconds off response times." OPD Deputy Chief Mark Canty "said streamlined communications would be especially beneficial during major incidents where there are multiple injured patients or many factors involved."

and Berkeley are planning a large show of force this weekend at two right-wing rallies, enlisting hundreds of officers each day in a bid to prevent violence from erupting in the wake of the killing of an antiracism protester in Charlottesville, Va." Officials are "urging people to stay home," and "said Tuesday that they were boosting staffing and bringing in outside help to ensure order among what could be dueling crowds at Saturday's Patriot Prayer rally at Crissy Field and Sunday's No Marxism in America event at Berkeley's Civic Center Park." The Chronicle adds, "The idea behind using hundreds of officers, said Bay Area officials and law enforcement experts, is to maintain the ability to separate people who may clash, while not having to resort to heavy use of force." The San Francisco Police Department "said all available officers would be on the job, with overtime shifts required."

Law enforcement officials testified to a legislative committee on Tuesday and "told the panel that they supported the current law under which Indiana State Police check people who want to legally carry a gun." State police Maj. Mike White "said a few thousand people a year are typically denied permits because they are prohibited for reasons including criminal history or mental health issues," and "said removing the permit requirement could put police officers at greater risk." <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7963908-8e2b&l=027-315&t=c> (8/23) reports on the program "A Way Out" in Lake County, Illinois, which "offers drug addicts the option of seeking help at local police stations." Individuals who seek help through the program "will not face any charges, even if they are in possession of drugs when they come in for help, according to authorities." The News-Sun says 177 people have "walked into a participating police station[s] since the program was initiated in June 2016." Officials announced on Tuesday that "four new local agencies - the Zion, Deerfield and Fox Lake police departments and the Lake County Sheriff's Office - have now joined the initial seven departments in the program." The program "was founded by the Lake County Opioid Initiative, in conjunction with private and public sector support and the original seven police departments to participate - Gurnee, Mundelein, Lake Forest, Grayslake, Libertyville, Round Lake Beach and Round Lake Park." Lake County Sheriff Mark Curran said, "As leaders in public safety, we continuously seek solutions that keep families intact and ensure jails house criminals, not people suffering from substance abuse disorders. ... We cannot cure addiction through arrests and incarceration, but we can be a supportive link to services for those who are ready for help."

reaction to its proposal to fly drones during a one-year pilot program." The Times says drones have been "hailed by law enforcement across the country as a valuable technology that could help find missing hikers or monitor armed suspects without jeopardizing the safety of officers," but have also been met with criticism from "privacy advocates and police critics." The LAPD "envision[s] flying the drones in a limited number of situations, such as standoffs with hostage-takers or barricaded suspects, bomb scares and shootings in which a gunman is still targeting people." Assistant Chief Beatrice Girmala "said earlier this month that if the LAPD were to fly drones, each use would require the approval of a high-ranking officer and would be documented for later review."

UK Police Laud "Landmark Ruling" For Gang Member Injunctions.

BBC News (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=004-28b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=005-e83&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=006-39d&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports West Midlands Police are lauding a "landmark ruling" in what "police describe as the largest ever gang injunction." Eighteen men "from two rival criminal groups" have been "banned from parts of Birmingham and must register phones and vehicles with police." After recent incidents of gun crime in the city, the Police and City Council "sought to secure the injunctions in a civil case heard at Birmingham Crown Court earlier this year." During the civil case, "more than 80 people from the Home Office and police gave evidence between February and June ahead of the orders being granted in July." The gang members are "forbidden from associating with each other and entering the city centre," and the incarcerated gang members will "receive the orders in jail where restrictions will be imposed on certain visitors to limit any gang associations, police said." The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=007-5a2&t=c> Telegraph (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=008-c83&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=009-7d3&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports the injunction was sought "following around 20 firearms offences involving gangs in Birmingham during the summer of 2015 and start of 2016." The Telegraph adds that another condition of the injunctions is that the gang members "are banned from participating in music videos that may promote or support gang-related violence."

In separate coverage, <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=00a-c16&t=c> BBC News (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=00b-223&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=00c-ed3&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports the rival factions, known as the Johnson Crew and the Burger Bar Boys, became "national news" after the "cold-blooded murders of two girls at a new year party in Birmingham in 2003." Police allege the gangs were "involved in local drug dealing, robberies, and kidnappings before shootings started taking place outside nightclubs and community centres."

Baltimore Crisis Intervention Team Peacefully Resolves Barricade Situation.

The Baltimore Sun <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=00d-afb&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=00e-66f&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7968590-8eba&l=00f-190&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23, Rector) reports, "A new crisis intervention team within the Baltimore Police Department helped peacefully resolve a barricade situation on Wednesday involving a suicidal woman who sent a picture of a gun to family members from a West Baltimore apartment where she was holed up with two children, according to police." Members of the team responded to the scene and "after 'extensive conversations, they were able to get her to come out of the home and the situation was resolved without further incident,' police said." The Sun explains that the team, which has been piloted for several months, "pairs police with social workers under a partnership with Behavioral Health Systems of Baltimore." Police Commissioner Kevin Davis "praised the team for helping to bring the barricade to a peaceful resolution." Davis is quoted as saying, "People are dealing with various degrees of trauma and mental health crisis. ... We started this team for situations like this. Pairing a sworn officer with a licensed clinician is a deescalation method necessary in 21st century policing. I'm grateful for a peaceful resolution."

Orlando Police Seek City Permission To Purchase New Dispatch System.

The Sentinel explains that fire and police dispatchers "work in the same room at the city's Emergency Operations Center, [but] the agencies work on two call dispatch platforms that don't share data, said Orlando Fire Department spokeswoman Ashley Papagni." The new dispatch system would be akin to a "group text message - everyone gets the information at the same time, eliminating the middle man." OFD Deputy Chief Rich Wales "says the new system could shave crucial seconds off response times." OPD Deputy Chief Mark Canty "said streamlined communications would be especially beneficial during major incidents where there are multiple injured patients or many factors involved."

San Francisco, Berkeley Police Department Prepares For Weekend Rallies.

Officials are "urging people to stay home," and "said Tuesday that they were boosting staffing and bringing in outside help to ensure order among what could be dueling crowds at Saturday's Patriot Prayer rally at Crissy Field and Sunday's No Marxism in America event at Berkeley's Civic Center Park." The Chronicle adds, "The idea behind using hundreds of officers, said Bay Area officials and law enforcement experts, is to maintain the ability to separate people who may clash, while not having to resort to heavy use of force." The San Francisco Police Department "said all available officers would be on the job, with overtime shifts required."

Florida Sheriff's Office Warns Of Danger Of Weapons At School.

Officers eventually found several students in possession of a BB gun, and they were charged with misdemeanors for disrupting school and resisting arrest. The Sheriff's Office "asked parents to remind their children that weapons aren't allowed in school." The Sheriff's Office added, "Even toy guns can get students in trouble and become problematic for law enforcement when confronting students in these situations."

Law Enforcement Argues Against Repealing Indiana Gun Permit Law.

Law enforcement officials testified to a legislative committee on Tuesday and "told the panel that they supported the current law under which Indiana State Police check people who want to legally carry a gun." State police Maj. Mike White "said a few thousand people a year are typically denied permits because they are prohibited for reasons including criminal history or mental health issues," and "said removing the permit requirement could put police officers at greater risk." Kendallville Police Chief Rob Wiley is quoted as saying, "The law that is currently in existence in Indiana is a very Second Amendment friendly law, quite frankly, while still allowing law enforcement to do what it needs to do, which is protect the general public."

According to the News, "whether they're being shot at, cussed at, zapped with a stun gun or denied service at a restaurant, many police officers in Metro Detroit and across the country feel they're being disrespected more than ever. 'Everybody thinks it's cool to not talk to the police, and to hate the police,' Detroit Police officer Ki'Juan Anderson said. 'The bad guys love this. A criminal will commit a crime, and nobody wants to tell us what happened.'" Anderson "was in the Special Operations crew of Kenneth Steil in September, when Steil was killed in a shootout with a carjacking suspect," and since then, "10 Detroit officers have been shot in the line of duty, while shots were fired at several other officers."

Share to Twitter (8/23) reports on the program "A Way Out" in Lake County, Illinois, which "offers drug addicts the option of seeking help at local police stations." Individuals who seek help through the program "will not face any charges, even if they are in possession of drugs when they come in for help, according to authorities." The News-Sun says 177 people have "walked into a participating police station[s] since the program was initiated in June 2016." Officials announced on Tuesday that "four new local agencies - the Zion, Deerfield and Fox Lake police departments and the Lake County Sheriff's Office - have now joined the initial seven departments in the program." The program "was founded by the Lake County Opioid Initiative, in conjunction with private and public sector support and the original seven police departments to participate - Gurnee, Mundelein, Lake Forest, Grayslake, Libertyville, Round Lake Beach and Round Lake Park." Lake County Sheriff Mark Curran said, "As leaders in public safety, we continuously seek solutions that keep families intact and ensure jails house criminals, not people suffering from substance abuse disorders. ... We cannot cure addiction through arrests and incarceration, but we can be a supportive link to services for those who are ready for help."

UK Police Laud "Landmark Ruling" For Gang Member Injunctions.

BBC News (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=004-28b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=005-e83&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=006-39d&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports West Midlands Police are lauding a "landmark ruling" in what "police describe as the largest ever gang injunction." Eighteen men "from two rival criminal groups" have been "banned from parts of Birmingham and must register phones and vehicles with police." After recent incidents of gun crime in the city, the Police and City Council "sought to secure the injunctions in a civil case heard at Birmingham Crown Court earlier this year." During the civil case, "more than 80 people from the Home Office and police gave evidence between February and June ahead of the orders being granted in July." The gang members are "forbidden from associating with each other and entering the city centre," and the incarcerated gang members will "receive the orders in jail where restrictions will be imposed on certain visitors to limit any gang associations, police said." The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=007-5a2&t=c> Telegraph (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=008-c83&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=009-7d3&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports the injunction was sought "following around 20 firearms offences involving gangs in Birmingham during the summer of 2015 and start of 2016." The Telegraph adds that another condition of the injunctions is that the gang members "are banned from participating in music videos that may promote or support gang-related violence."

In separate coverage, <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=00a-c16&t=c> BBC News (UK) <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=00b-223&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=00c-ed3&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/23) reports the rival factions, known as the Johnson Crew and the Burger Bar Boys, became "national news" after the "cold-blooded murders of two girls at a new year party in Birmingham in 2003." Police allege the gangs were "involved in local drug dealing, robberies, and kidnappings before shootings started taking place outside nightclubs and community centres."

Baltimore Crisis Intervention Team Peacefully Resolves Barricade Situation.

Members of the team responded to the scene and "after 'extensive conversations, they were able to get her to come out of the home and the situation was resolved without further incident,' police said." The Sun explains that the team, which has been piloted for several months, "pairs police with social workers under a partnership with Behavioral Health Systems of Baltimore." Police Commissioner Kevin Davis "praised the team for helping to bring the barricade to a peaceful resolution." Davis is quoted as saying, "People are dealing with various degrees of trauma and mental health crisis. ... We started this team for situations like this. Pairing a sworn officer with a licensed clinician is a deescalation method necessary in 21st century policing. I'm grateful for a peaceful resolution."

Orlando Police Seek City Permission To Purchase New Dispatch System.

The Orlando (FL) Sentinel <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=010-6f7&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=011-d25&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=012-48e&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/22) reports, "To reduce response times and save money in the long term, the Orlando Police and Fire departments are asking the city for permission to spend $1.9 million in bond money for a new dispatch system." The Sentinel explains that fire and police dispatchers "work in the same room at the city's Emergency Operations Center, [but] the agencies work on two call dispatch platforms that don't share data, said Orlando Fire Department spokeswoman Ashley Papagni." The new dispatch system would be akin to a "group text message - everyone gets the information at the same time, eliminating the middle man." OFD Deputy Chief Rich Wales "says the new system could shave crucial seconds off response times." OPD Deputy Chief Mark Canty "said streamlined communications would be especially beneficial during major incidents where there are multiple injured patients or many factors involved."

San Francisco, Berkeley Police Department Prepares For Weekend Rallies.

The San Francisco Chronicle <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=013-6fa&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=014-953&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=015-f15&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/22) reports, "Authorities in San Francisco and Berkeley are planning a large show of force this weekend at two right-wing rallies, enlisting hundreds of officers each day in a bid to prevent violence from erupting in the wake of the killing of an antiracism protester in Charlottesville, Va." Officials are "urging people to stay home," and "said Tuesday that they were boosting staffing and bringing in outside help to ensure order among what could be dueling crowds at Saturday's Patriot Prayer rally at Crissy Field and Sunday's No Marxism in America event at Berkeley's Civic Center Park." The Chronicle adds, "The idea behind using hundreds of officers, said Bay Area officials and law enforcement experts, is to maintain the ability to separate people who may clash, while not having to resort to heavy use of force." The San Francisco Police Department "said all available officers would be on the job, with overtime shifts required."

Florida Sheriff's Office Warns Of Danger Of Weapons At School.

The Tampa Bay (FL) Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=016-1f4&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=017-61d&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017082401iacp&r=7979436-a432&l=018-b1b&t=c> Share to Twitter (8/22) reports a Florida Middle School "was put on lockdown Tuesday after the Hillsborough County Sheriff's Office received social media reports of a gun on campus, the agency said." Officers eventually found several students in possession of a BB gun, and they were charged with misdemeanors for disrupting school and resisting arrest. The Sheriff's Office "asked parents to remind their children that weapons aren't allowed in school." The Sheriff's Office added, "Even toy guns can get students in trouble and become problematic for law enforcement when confronting students in these situations."

Law Enforcement Argues Against Repealing Indiana Gun Permit Law.

Law enforcement officials testified to a legislative committee on Tuesday and "told the panel that they supported the current law under which Indiana State Police check people who want to legally carry a gun." State police Maj. Mike White "said a few thousand people a year are typically denied permits because they are prohibited for reasons including criminal history or mental health issues," and "said removing the permit requirement could put police officers at greater risk." Kendallville Police Chief Rob Wiley is quoted as saying, "The law that is currently in existence in Indiana is a very Second Amendment friendly law, quite frankly, while still allowing law enforcement to do what it needs to do, which is protect the general public."

According to the News, "whether they're being shot at, cussed at, zapped with a stun gun or denied service at a restaurant, many police officers in Metro Detroit and across the country feel they're being disrespected more than ever. 'Everybody thinks it's cool to not talk to the police, and to hate the police,' Detroit Police officer Ki'Juan Anderson said. 'The bad guys love this. A criminal will commit a crime, and nobody wants to tell us what happened.'" Anderson "was in the Special Operations crew of Kenneth Steil in September, when Steil was killed in a shootout with a carjacking suspect," and since then, "10 Detroit officers have been shot in the line of duty, while shots were fired at several other officers."

Trenton, New Jersey, Police Director Ernest Parrey Jr. "said they hope to have more and more 'community engagement' overall in the fight against gun crimes." NJ News says the Trenton Police Department started a program last year "whereby police officers took youths violating a city curfew to participating churches, where parents had to pick them up." This year, Parrey "said the department, on Aug. 7, created a Violence Interdiction Team made of a surge of officers from other street crimes units."

Share to Twitter (8/23) reports on the program "A Way Out" in Lake County, Illinois, which "offers drug addicts the option of seeking help at local police stations." Individuals who seek help through the program "will not face any charges, even if they are in possession of drugs when they come in for help, according to authorities." The News-Sun says 177 people have "walked into a participating police station[s] since the program was initiated in June 2016." Officials announced on Tuesday that "four new local agencies - the Zion, Deerfield and Fox Lake police departments and the Lake County Sheriff's Office - have now joined the initial seven departments in the program." The program "was founded by the Lake County Opioid Initiative, in conjunction with private and public sector support and the original seven police departments to participate - Gurnee, Mundelein, Lake Forest, Grayslake, Libertyville, Round Lake Beach and Round Lake Park." Lake County Sheriff Mark Curran said, "As leaders in public safety, we continuously seek solutions that keep families intact and ensure jails house criminals, not people suffering from substance abuse disorders. ... We cannot cure addiction through arrests and incarceration, but we can be a supportive link to services for those who are ready for help."

The Times says drones have been "hailed by law enforcement across the country as a valuable technology that could help find missing hikers or monitor armed suspects without jeopardizing the safety of officers," but have also been met with criticism from "privacy advocates and police critics." The LAPD "envision[s] flying the drones in a limited number of situations, such as standoffs with hostage-takers or barricaded suspects, bomb scares and shootings in which a gunman is still targeting people." Assistant Chief Beatrice Girmala "said earlier this month that if the LAPD were to fly drones, each use would require the approval of a high-ranking officer and would be documented for later review."

Op-ed by Manhattan District Attorney Cy Vance: This bill could turn your city into the Wild West

Every state has had the right to craft its own firearms licensing laws. In New York, we have crafted our laws to consider unique factors like our state's population density, culture and history. The Concealed Carry Reciprocity Act would override our state's restrictive concealed-weapons permitting system and force New York to honor concealed-carry firearms privileges issued in other states, even though many other states have much looser standards. Simply put, this means that the gun laws of Arkansas, for example, could be forced upon New York by federal mandate. I can only imagine how angry citizens of Arkansas would be if Washington politicians forced them to follow laws from New York.

Aurora cops, lawmakers grumble about new asset seizure rules (CO)

Bipartisan legislation Gov. John Hickenlooper signed into law this year restricts how police can use assets seized as part of joint investigations with federal law enforcement. If the amount seized isn't at least $50,000, the law bars local police from accepting the money. Aurora police Deputy Chief Paul O'Keefe told city council's Public Safety Committee last week that the change could mean a big hit to APD spending. Rarely, O'Keefe said, do the cases APD handles seize $50,000 or more in those federal cases.

Studies: Automated safety systems are preventing car crashes

Safety systems to prevent cars from drifting into another lane or that warn drivers of vehicles in their blind spots are beginning to live up to their potential to reduce crashes significantly, according to two studies released Wednesday. At the same time, research by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety raises concern that drivers may be less vigilant when relying on automated safety systems or become distracted by dashboard displays that monitor how the systems are performing.

The experts: How Taser inserts itself into investigations involving its own weapons

For more than a decade, Taser has defended its signature weapon by leveraging close ties with police and other professionals, court records show. It has spent millions of dollars commissioning research on its weapons, much of it backing the company's contention that its stun guns are blameless in deaths or injuries. It regularly hires medical and scientific experts who vouch for the safety of the electroshock devices in court or in published studies. And it cultivates ties with medical examiners, the professionals who decide whether or not a Taser shock is to blame in a fatality. The result is a thicket of intersecting relationships among police, coroners and a wide network of scientists the company taps, a Reuters examination of hundreds of wrongful death lawsuits and interviews with lawyers for both plaintiffs and police found.

Legal questions surround police use of facial recognition tech (UK)

Police in the UK have collected more than 20 million facial recognition images without Parliament being consulted over the technology. This figure potentially corresponds to almost a third of the population - and includes the facial images of hundreds of thousands of innocent citizens, despite a High Court ruling in 2012 that said holding these was unlawful. At the time of the judgment, the court called for an urgent review into the police's policy of retaining the custody images of people who were never charged nor convicted of a crime. It wouldn't actually be until 2017, five years later, that the Home Office revisited the policy in its Review of Custody Images.

Berkeley Police Officers Opt for New Bulletproof Vest Carriers to Ease Back Pain

Daily Californian, (08/15/2017), Malini Ramaier
The Berkeley (Calif.) Police Department recently began giving its patrol officers the option of using their own funds or funds from their uniform allowance to purchase new external ballistic-resistant vest carriers, which also hold other equipment normally carried on a duty belt. The carriers, designed to blend with the department's uniform shirt, are touted as helping relieve back pain. Approximately half of the department's officers have already opted to purchase the carriers.

How Fearing Radio Transmitters Helps Vulnerable People Who Wander

Sacramento Bee, (08/16/2017), Hannah Knowles
In Folsom, Calif., the police department has joined several others in the area in participating in Project Lifesaver, under which area residents can sign up to have loved ones who wander receive a GPS tracking bracelet to wear on their wrist. If individuals with Alzheimer's or other forms of dementia suddenly wander away, the devices can help police locate them.

New SHPD Mobile App Gets Positive Feedback

The Chronicle Online.com, (8/18/2017), Julie Thompson
An app that serves as a two-way information sharing portal has proven to be a great success for the police department in St. Helens, Ore. Inaugurated in spring 2017, the app automatically uploads all department press releases for viewing by residents who have registered. It also sends push alerts straight to registered phones in the event of an emergency. Residents can send information to the department in two ways: through a "Got a Tip?" feature and through the "See and Say" option, which provides a drop-down menu allowing residents to provide automatic reports on specific topics such as abandoned vehicles and nuisance complaints.

In a High-Tech World, Composite Sketches Still Helping Police Put a Face on Crime

Philly Voice, (08/21/2017), John Kopp
Although surveillance photos and video footage have become much more readily available, cases remain where agencies need to call on the services of a sketch artist. Even those few remaining sketch artists often have to incorporate technology into their techniques, however. This article profiles the work of two individuals still working in that field.

Facial Recognition Technology Helped Lead to More Than 4,000 Arrests Since 2010, Cuomo Says

New York Daily News, (08/21/2017), Kenneth Lovett
Since its inception in 2010, New York's Department of Motor Vehicles Facial Recognition Technology Program has identified more than 21,000 possible cases of identity theft or fraud, and has led to the arrest of more than 4,000 individuals. In the months following a January 2016 software upgrade, the system has generated more than 7,000 potential cases. The software matches driver's license pictures and identifies duplicates.

Incoming: Drone Drug Drop in Prison Third in a Year

WOODTV.com, (08/17/2017)
Packages containing marijuana, a cell phone and a razor blade fell from a drone onto the grounds of the Richard A. Handlon Correctional Facility in Ionia, Mich., in the predawn hours of August 17. Area law enforcement officers have arrested three men from the Detroit area on charges of smuggling contraband into a correctional facility. The men face sentences of up to five years on the felony charges. Prison authorities are trying to identify the intended recipients.

New Technology at Mahoning Co. Jail Prevents Inmates From Hiding Drugs

WKBN27, (08/17/2017), Molly Reed
The Mahoning County Jail in Youngstown, Ohio, recently implemented use of a body scanner in an effort to cut down on the amount of contraband smuggled into the facility. Although all incoming inmates are hand-searched, individuals have become more creative over the years, and this scanner will help officials find items that have been swallowed or are being held in body cavities.

Bristol Prisoners to Get In-cell Phones and Computers

BBC, (08/18/2017)
Prison cells in Bristol, England, will be equipped with telephones and computers in the cells, meaning that inmates will no longer need to line up to use communal phones. The computers can be used to order food from the canteen or to sign up for classes, but will have no Internet access. The move is an attempt to cut down on incidents of use of contraband cell phones.

Lawsuit: Tennessee County Operated 'Eugenics Scheme' on Inmates

USA Today, (08/18/2017), Stacy Barchenger
A federal lawsuit filed in White County, Tenn., seeks to stop a controversial practice of giving some inmates time off their jail sentences in exchange for undergoing sterilization procedures. Working with the county sheriff, a General Sessions judge earlier this year issued a permanent order offering inmates 30 days off their sentences in exchange for undergoing the procedures.

Repeat Drunken Drivers to Get Ankle Bracelets That Monitor Sweat for Alcohol

Courier-Journal, (08/16/2017), Andrew Wolfson
Individuals with repeat DUI convictions in Jefferson County, Ky, will be required to wear monitoring devices on their ankles that check their perspiration for alcohol consumption every 30 minutes. Results are automatically transmitted to a monitoring company, and those found in violation are referred to a court for potential disciplinary action. The program is already in wide use in other parts of the state.

Technology to Educate Incarcerated Students

Huffington Post, (08/15/2017), Steve Olenski
Since the launch of the JPay's Lantern educational program in prisons nationwide in 2014, more than 70,000 students have used the service-controlled tablets to take online courses and earn more than 32,000 college credits. The program allows prisoners to engage with professors through regular class time and use the tablets to complete assignments on their own pace.

Read New Articles About Case Study of a Remote Vehicle Tracking Tool, Managed Access Systems and Contraband Cell Phones on NIJ.gov

Two new articles recently posted to the National Institute of Justice website focus on recently released publications focusing on research funded by NIJ.

In "Case Study of a GPS Tracking Tool Designed to Aid in Police Vehicle Pursuits," available at <https://nij.gov/topics/law-enforcement/operations/traffic/Pages/study-of-gps-tracking-tool.aspx>

, you can read about an independent assessment of a remote GPS vehicle tracking technology undertaken by the National Criminal Justice Technology Research, Test, and Evaluation Center (funded by NIJ and hosted by the Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory). The article presents an overview of the research team's findings and a link to the full report.

"Managed Access Systems Can Prevent Contraband Cellphone Use" focuses on a study exploring the potential of managed access systems and their effects on mitigating contraband phone usage throughout corrections facilities. If contraband cellphones make it into a facility, managed access systems can prevent them from being used to send texts or make calls. Restricting network access makes phones less valuable and can reduce their demand. You can read the article at

IAB Releases Guidance for First Responders on Potential Opioid Exposure

The InterAgency Board has released "Recommendations on Selection and Use of Personal Protective Equipment and Decontamination Products for First Responders Against Exposure Hazards to Synthetic Opioids, Including Fentanyl and Fentanyl Analogues," which provides guidance on personal protective equipment selection and use, decontamination, detection and medical countermeasures in instances of potential opioid exposure.

You can download this paper from the IAB public website at <https://www.interagencyboard.org/sites/default/files/publications/IAB%20First%20Responder%20PPE%20and%20Decontamination%20Recommendations%20for%20Fentanyl.pdf>

VALOR for Blue, a program of the Bureau of Justice Assistance, recently launched two new resources for sworn law enforcement officers.

Visit the VALOR for Blue e-learning portal to check out a new roll call video, "Ordinary or Extraordinary?" This video challenges viewers to reexamine their roles as law enforcement professionals, focusing on the importance of treating a job as more than "just a job;" how professionalism directly affects safety; the definition of "professional" in law enforcement; and what it means to be a scholar, a statesman and a guardian.

The program has also introduced a new Spotlight on Safety, "Ambush Attacks Against Law Enforcement: Safety and Prevention Strategies." It offers practical information for law enforcement personnel to protect and defend themselves from ambush-style attacks. Resources include an article, printable posters, a podcast, online training and a webinar.

All VALOR for Blue resources require a valid VALOR for Blue account. Sworn law enforcement officers can register for an account at

<https://www.valorforblue.org/Register.aspx>

Berkeley Police Officers Opt for New Bulletproof Vest Carriers to Ease Back Pain

Daily Californian, (08/15/2017), Malini Ramaiyer

The Berkeley (Calif.) Police Department recently began giving its patrol officers the option of using their own funds or funds from their uniform allowance to purchase new external ballistic-resistant vest carriers, which also hold other equipment normally carried on a duty belt. The carriers, designed to blend with the department's uniform shirt, are touted as helping relieve back strain. Approximately half of the department's officers have already opted to purchase the carriers.

In Folsom, Calif., the police department has joined several others in the area in participating in Project Lifesaver, under which area residents can sign up to have loved ones who wander receive a GPS tracking bracelet to wear on their wrist. If individuals with Alzheimer's or developmental disabilities wander away, the devices can help police locate them.

The Chronicle Online.com, (8/18/2017), Julie Thompson

An app that serves as a two-way information sharing portal has proven to be a great success for the police department in St. Helens, Ore. Inaugurated in spring 2017, the app automatically uploads all department press releases for viewing by residents who have registered. It also sends push alerts straight to registered phones in the event of an emergency. Residents can send information to the department in two ways: through a "Got a Tip?" feature and through the "See and Say" option, which provides a drop-down menu allowing residents to provide automatic reports on specific topics such as abandoned vehicles and nuisance complaints.

Although surveillance photos and video footage have become much more readily available, cases remain where agencies need to call on the services of a sketch artist. Even those few remaining sketch artists often have learned to incorporate technology into their techniques, however. This article profiles the work of two individuals still working in that field.

Since 2010, Cuomo Says

New York Daily News, (08/21/2017), Kenneth Lovett

Since its inception in 2010, New York's Department of Motor Vehicles Facial Recognition Technology Program has identified more than 21,000 possible cases of identity theft or fraud, and has led to the arrest of more than 4,000 individuals. In the months following a January 2016 software upgrade, the system has generated more than 7,000 potential cases. The software matches driver's license pictures and identifies duplicates.

Incoming: Drone Drug Drop in Prison Third in a Year
WOODTV.com, (08/17/2017)

Packages containing marijuana, a cell phone and a razor blade fell from a drone onto the grounds of the Richard A. Handlon Correctional Facility in Ionia, Mich., in the predawn hours of August 17. Area law enforcement officers have arrested three men from the Detroit area on charges of smuggling contraband into a correctional facility. The men face sentences of up to five years on the felony charges. Prison authorities are trying to identify the intended recipients.

The Mahoning County Jail in Youngstown, Ohio, recently implemented use of a body scanner in an effort to cut down on the amount of contraband smuggled into the facility. Although all incoming inmates are hand-searched, individuals have become more creative over the years, and this scanner will help officials find items that have been swallowed or are being held in body cavities.

BBC, (08/18/2017)

Prison cells in Bristol, England, will be equipped with telephones and computers in the cells, meaning that inmates will no longer need to line up to use communal phones. The computers can be used to order food from the canteen or to sign up for classes, but will have no Internet access. The move is an attempt to cut down on incidents of use of contraband cell phones.

KPCC, (08/17/2017), Rina Palta

In California, women make up 4 percent of the prison population but account for 11 percent of prison suicides, according to a survey recently performed by the California State Auditor for the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation. The number of suicides in 2016 increased to 26, compared to 19 in 2015. Auditors found that in some instances, staff failed to follow protocols related to suicide risk screening.

A federal lawsuit filed in White County, Tenn., seeks to stop a controversial practice of giving some inmates time off their jail sentences in exchange for undergoing sterilization procedures. Working with the county sheriff, a General Sessions judge earlier this year issued a standing order offering inmates 30 days off their jail sentences in exchange for undergoing the free procedures.

Repeat Drunken Drivers to Get Ankle Bracelets That Monitor Sweat for Alcohol

Courier-Journal, (08/16/2017), Andrew Wolfson
Individuals with repeat DUI convictions in Jefferson County, Ky, will be required to wear monitoring devices on their ankles that check their perspiration for alcohol consumption every 30 minutes. Results are automatically transmitted to a monitoring company, and those found in violation are referred to a court for potential disciplinary action. The program is already in wide use in other parts of the state.

Huffington Post, (08/15/2017), Steve Olenski
Since the launch of the JPay's Lantern educational program in prisons nationwide in 2014, more than 70,000 students have used the service-controlled tablets to take online courses and earn more than 32,000 college credits. The program allows prisoners to engage with professors outside of regular class time and use the tablets to complete courses at their own pace.

Thursday, August 31st, 3:00 PM - 4:00 PM EST

Register Now <http://www2.vigilantsolutions.com/e/43142/facial-recognition-webinar/5vk9sz/684054475>>

Roger Rodriguez, Retired NYPD Detective, shares best practices, techniques and strategies.

Agencies like the NYPD have analyzed images for investigations including crimes against children that span trafficking, abuse, child prostitution and exploitation. Attend this webinar and go step-by-step through the facial recognition investigative process, learn essential best practices, techniques and strategies to produce facial recognition leads. Get the facts on how to deal with less than perfect images from sources including CCTV cameras, bank ATM's, social media, and sources where faces are often rejected for facial recognition.

Join Vigilant Solutions law enforcement facial recognition expert, Roger Rodriguez, as he discusses how a unique approach can make use of these images to generate quality leads in any investigation.

Webinar: Using Facial Recognition in Investigations that Involve Children

Thursday, August 31st, 3:00 PM - 4:00 PM EST

Register Now <http://www2.vigilantsolutions.com/e/43142/facial-recognition-webinar/5vk9sz/684052059>

Roger Rodriguez, Retired NYPD Detective, shares best practices, techniques and strategies.

Agencies like the NYPD have analyzed images for investigations including crimes against children that span trafficking, abuse, child prostitution and exploitation. Attend this webinar and go step-by-step through the facial recognition investigative process, learn essential best practices, techniques and strategies to produce facial recognition leads. Get the facts on how to deal with less than perfect images from sources including CCTV cameras, bank ATM's, social media, and sources where faces are often rejected for facial recognition.

Join Vigilant Solutions law enforcement facial recognition expert, Roger Rodriguez, as he discusses how a unique approach can make use of these images to generate quality leads in any investigation.

Attorney General Jeff Sessions and Director of National Intelligence Dan Coats "wrote a letter Monday to top Republicans and Democrats in Congress, asking them to not only reauthorize it as it's written, but make it a permanent fixture in the law books."

Berkeley Campus Police Asked To Investigate Interaction Captured In Viral Video.

The San Francisco Chronicle <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=008-e58&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=009-a50&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=00a-880&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12) reports, "A UC Berkeley vice chancellor said Monday he has asked the campus police department to open an investigation into a viral video-captured interaction between an officer and a hot dog vendor after Saturday's football game." The vendor "was cited for selling food without a permit...and $60 was seized from his wallet and booked into evidence, UC Berkeley officials said." A video posted to Facebook capturing the incident "was viewed more than 10 million times" before the poster made his page private.

Politico Analysis: Law Enforcement Officials See Extremist Groups Exploiting Loose Gun Laws.

In an analysis, Politico <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=00b-64c&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=00c-1d5&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=00d-7c5&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/11, Meyer) reports that domestic extremists groups from "antifa" anarchists to white supremacists "are increasingly exploiting loose gun control laws to show up at emotionally charged rallies with assault rifles and other high-powered weapons," according to law enforcement officials. As a result, authorities "are bracing for what they fear could be lethal confrontations at rallies and other public events being planned in cities and towns across the country in the coming months."

Baltimore Police Hiring Outpaces Departures For "First Time In Years."

The Baltimore Sun <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=018-720&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=019-6e6&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=01a-b9b&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/11) reports, "The Baltimore Police Department has hired 144 new officers so far this year - the first time in years that hiring has outpaced the number of officers leaving, Commissioner Kevin Davis said Monday." Davis is quoted saying, "There's rumors out there and urban legends out there about no one wants to come to Baltimore, no one wants to be a Baltimore cop. ... That's all really a bunch of B.S."

Chicago Police On Pace For Record Overtime Spending In 2017.

The Chicago Sun-Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=01b-600&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=01c-1c8&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=01d-828&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/11) reports, "The Chicago Police Department is on pace to spend nearly $200 million on overtime in 2017 - 40 percent more than last year's record spending - despite a two-year hiring surge tailor-made to keep pace with attrition and bolster the force by 970 officers." The Sun-Times calls the overtime surge "troubling" because it "occurred at a time when the police academy was churning out a virtual conveyor belt of classes needed to comply with Mayor Rahm Emanuel's two-year policing hiring surge."

Technology

Facial Recognition Technology That Identifies Disguised Faces Developed.

Digital Trends <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=01e-d49&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=01f-612&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7972275-4ae6&l=020-816&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/11, Dormehl) reports, "Engineers at India's National Institute of Technology and Institute of Science and the U.K.'s University of Cambridge have developed a facial recognition framework that can identify even people who actively obscure their faces." Amarjot Singh of the University of Cambridge is quoted saying, "This can be used to identify criminals trying to disguise their appearance to avoid law enforcement. The problem of Disguise Face Identification (DFI) is an extremely challenging and interesting problem that is of great interest to law enforcement – as they can use this technology to identify criminals."

Policing & Policy

Administration Officials Urge Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act Reauthorization.

The Los Angeles Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=005-44a&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=006-4e8&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=007-147&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/11, Riechmann) reports that the Trump Administration urges Congress to reauthorize the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which is slated to expire at the end of the year. Attorney General Jeff Sessions and Director of National Intelligence Dan Coats "wrote a letter Monday to top Republicans and Democrats in Congress, asking them to not only reauthorize it as it's written, but make it a permanent fixture in the law books."

Berkeley Campus Police Asked To Investigate Interaction Captured In Viral Video.

The San Francisco Chronicle <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=008-e58&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=009-a50&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=00a-880&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12) reports, "A UC Berkeley vice chancellor said Monday he has asked the campus police department to open an investigation into a viral video-captured interaction between an officer and a hot dog vendor after Saturday's football game." The vendor "was cited for selling food without a permit...and $60 was seized from his wallet and booked into evidence, UC Berkeley officials said." A video posted to Facebook capturing the incident "was viewed more than 10 million times" before the poster made his page private.

Politico Analysis: Law Enforcement Officials See Extremist Groups Exploiting Loose Gun Laws.

In an analysis, Politico <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=00b-64c&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=00c-1d5&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091201iacp&r=7979436-896d&l=00d-7c5&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/11, Meyer) reports that domestic extremists groups from "antifa" anarchists to white supremacists "are increasingly exploiting loose gun control laws to show up at emotionally charged rallies with assault rifles and other high-powered weapons," according to law enforcement officials. As a result, authorities "are bracing for what they fear could be lethal confrontations at rallies and other public events being planned in cities and towns across the country in the coming months."

The statement said the department reached its decision after "an extensive review of this tragic event, conducted by career prosecutors and investigators."

Gray, 25, "was handcuffed and shackled, but he was unrestrained by a seat belt." The Justice Department "said in a statement that while Gray's death was 'undeniably tragic,' federal prosecutors did not find enough evidence to prove the officers willfully violated his civil rights, a high legal threshold." According to the AP, "the decision not to bring federal charges against the officers means none of them will be held criminally responsible for Gray's death." Three officers were acquitted in state court, and Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby later dropped the remaining state charges.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7963908-8f6a&l=00b-0ce&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7963908-8f6a&l=00c-075&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7963908-8f6a&l=00d-24c&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Zapotosky, Alexander, Hermann) reports that the Justice Department said in a statement, "It is not enough to show that the officer made a mistake, acted negligently, acted by accident, or even exercised bad judgment. Although Gray's death is undeniably tragic, the evidence in this case is insufficient to meet these substantial evidentiary requirements." The Post calls the announcement "not particularly surprising," as "after a mistrial and three acquittals," Mosby "had announced she was ending local authorities' effort to prosecute the officers, because winning a conviction had proven too difficult."

The New York Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7963908-8f6a&l=00e-8da&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7963908-8f6a&l=00f-637&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7963908-8f6a&l=010-5f6&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Ruiz) reports that the announcement brings to a close "the criminal civil rights investigation into Mr. Gray's death, which prompted unrest in Baltimore, a predominantly black city, and a federal examination of its police department's practices. 'At no time did we ever believe that there was evidence that any of the officers violated anyone's civil rights or were guilty of violating any federal laws,' Michael E. Davey, a lawyer for the Baltimore Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 3, said in a statement on Tuesday." The Times adds that in August, the Justice Department "issued a blistering report detailing misconduct and the use of excessive force by the city's Police Department, which is operating under a consent decree - a court-enforceable agreement to enact reforms - entered into during the Obama administration."

The Times adds that "though federal and city authorities had agreed to a court-stipulated police reform agreement, known as a consent decree, in the waning days of the Obama administration, Mr. Sessions' department tried to pull back from that agreement," but "a federal judge went ahead and approved the consent decree anyhow in April."

Politico adds that there is "very little chance" Duncan's bill would pass the Senate, given Democratic opposition.

CA: Brown, Senate Leader De Leon Reach Deal On Changes To "Sanctuary State" Bill.

become a so-called "sanctuary state." California Gov. Jerry Brown and state Senate leader Kevin de León on Monday agreed to amendments to "bar state law enforcement officials from enforcing federal immigration law, either by asking about someone's immigration status or detaining individuals based on requests from the federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency." According to the Hill, "The amendments would give law enforcement agencies more discretion to notify federal immigration officials about convicted offenders in their custody and to transfer those offenders to immigration authorities. The bill would still allow federal immigration officials to interview those in custody, though it will not permit those officials to maintain permanent office space in state prisons or local jails."

The AP says changes announced Monday means the proposed bill would "allow local officers to transfer immigrants to federal authorities if they've been convicted of one of some 800 crimes." Kings County Sheriff David Robinson, a vocal critic of the bill, told the AP, "We're passing laws to not communicate with other governmental agencies and I just struggle with that. I'm still adamantly opposed to the bill. It does nothing to protect immigrants, whether legal or illegal. It only protects criminals."

Apple 10th Anniversary iPhone X Includes Facial Recognition Tech, Sparking Privacy Concerns.

The release of Apple's new iPhone X generated extensive reporting, including some outlets expressing concern about the new device's impacts on users' privacy and security. According to Quartz, the tech "raises a lot of questions," such as where Apple will store user biometric data and whether police will "be able to use your face to unlock your phone without a warrant." According to Massachusetts ACLU legal director Matthew Segal, it remains unclear how police may use the feature in practice.

According to the Post, "The Supreme Court ruled in 2014 that authorities must have a search warrant to seize and attempt to examine a smartphone. It would take a separate court order to require a device's owner to unlock it for police, said Nate Cardozo, a senior staff attorney at the Electronic Frontier Foundation, a civil liberties group based in San Francisco."

The clause says WikiLeaks "resembles a non-state hostile intelligence service" and that the US government "should treat it as such." Robert L. Deitz, a lawyer who has held senior legal posts at the CIA, NSA, and the Pentagon's intelligence offices, says the language could help investigators secure authorization needed to surveil US citizens thought to be associated with WikiLeaks. He said, "You need to show that someone is an agent of a foreign power." WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange's US lawyer, Barry Pollack, said he doesn't think the FISA court should accept the clause in any legal argument by authorities seeking surveillance approval on a US citizen.

Policing & Policy

DOJ Won't Charge Officers In Freddie Gray Case.

The Baltimore Sun <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=005-67b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=006-2b3&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=007-7ce&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Rector) reports the Justice Department issued a statement Tuesday that it will not bring charges against Baltimore police officers "in connection with the death of 25-year-old Freddie Gray from injuries sustained in police custody in 2015." The statement said the department reached its decision after "an extensive review of this tragic event, conducted by career prosecutors and investigators."

The AP <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=008-605&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=009-lcd&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=00a-740&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Linderman) reports that "the officers were charged by state prosecutors after Gray's neck was broken in the back of a police van in April 2015." Gray, 25, "was handcuffed and shackled, but he was unrestrained by a seat belt." The Justice Department "said in a statement that while Gray's death was 'undeniably tragic,' federal prosecutors did not find enough evidence to prove the officers willfully violated his civil rights, a high legal threshold." According to the AP, "the decision not to bring federal charges against the officers means none of them will be held criminally responsible for Gray's death." Three officers were acquitted in state court, and Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby later dropped the remaining state charges.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=00b-0ce&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=00c-075&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=00d-24c&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Zapotosky, Alexander, Hermann) reports that the Justice Department said in a statement, "It is not enough to show that the officer made a mistake, acted negligently, acted by accident, or even exercised bad judgment. Although Gray's death is undeniably tragic, the evidence in this case is insufficient to meet these substantial evidentiary requirements." The Post calls the announcement "not particularly surprising," as "after a mistrial and three acquittals," Mosby "had announced she was ending local authorities' effort to prosecute the officers, because winning a conviction had proven too difficult."

The New York Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=00e-8da&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=00f-637&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=010-5f6&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Ruiz) reports that the announcement brings to a close "the criminal civil rights investigation into Mr. Gray's death, which prompted unrest in Baltimore, a predominantly black city, and a federal examination of its police department's practices. 'At no time did we ever believe that there was evidence that any of the officers violated anyone's civil rights or were guilty of violating any federal laws,' Michael E. Davey, a lawyer for the Baltimore Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 3, said in a statement on Tuesday." The Times adds that in August, the Justice Department "issued a blistering report detailing misconduct and the use of excessive force by the city's Police Department, which is operating under a consent decree - a court-enforceable agreement to enact reforms - entered into during the Obama administration."

The Washington Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=011-8e5&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=012-9d1&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=013-408&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Noble) reports that "since Attorney General Jeff Sessions took over in January, the Justice Department has opted for a less hands-on approach to dealing with oversight of troubled law enforcement agencies." The Times adds that "though federal and city authorities had agreed to a court-stipulated police reform agreement, known as a consent decree, in the waning days of the Obama administration, Mr. Sessions' department tried to pull back from that agreement," but "a federal judge went ahead and approved the consent decree anyhow in April."

Rep. Duncan Pushes For Gun Silencer Provision.

Jeff Duncan (R-SC) "is renewing his controversial push" to ease restrictions on the purchase of gun silencers by including a silencer provision in the House's "Sportsmen Heritage and Recreational Enhancement Act." Duncan "argues that silencers are used by hunters and target shooters to limit potential hearing loss from gunfire," but gun control groups argue the provision "is opposed by many police organizations." Politico adds that there is "very little chance" Duncan's bill would pass the Senate, given Democratic opposition.

CA: Brown, Senate Leader De Leon Reach Deal On Changes To "Sanctuary State" Bill.

<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=023-5fc&t=c> The Hill <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=024-386&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=025-cdf&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Wilson) offers continuing coverage of reports that lawmakers have reached a deal that could pave the way for California to become a so-called "sanctuary state." California Gov. Jerry Brown and state Senate leader Kevin de León on Monday agreed to amendments to "bar state law enforcement officials from enforcing federal immigration law, either by asking about someone's immigration status or detaining individuals based on requests from the federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency." According to the Hill, "The amendments would give law enforcement agencies more discretion to notify federal immigration officials about convicted offenders in their custody and to transfer those offenders to immigration authorities. The bill would still allow federal immigration officials to interview those in custody, though it will not permit those officials to maintain permanent office space in state prisons or local jails."

CA Police Chiefs Drop Opposition To Sanctuary Measure, Sheriffs Stand Firm. The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=026-db3&t=c> AP <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=027-43c&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=028-d91&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Cooper, Spagat) reports the California Police Chiefs Association has dropped its "opposition to a weakened 'sanctuary state' measure that would restrict their interactions with immigration authorities, but sheriffs remained opposed Tuesday saying the measure would still limit their authority to work with federal officers in jails." The AP says changes announced Monday means the proposed bill would "allow local officers to transfer immigrants to federal authorities if they've been convicted of one of some 800 crimes." Kings County Sheriff David Robinson, a vocal critic of the bill, told the AP, "We're passing laws to not communicate with other governmental agencies and I just struggle with that. I'm still adamantly opposed to the bill. It does nothing to protect immigrants, whether legal or illegal. It only protects criminals."

The city's decision to drop charges came "without explanation" after "five years of pursuing a host of minor charges" against Watson.

Apple 10th Anniversary iPhone X Includes Facial Recognition Tech, Sparking Privacy Concerns.

The release of Apple's new iPhone X generated extensive reporting, including some outlets expressing concern about the new device's impacts on users' privacy and security. Quartz <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=036-0e5&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=037-276&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=038-b64&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Gershgorn) lays out "five privacy and security concerns about Apple's new FaceID facial recognition," which Apple "says...is 20 times more secure than TouchID...and can be used for unlocking apps and using ApplePay." According to Quartz, the tech "raises a lot of questions," such as where Apple will store user biometric data and whether police will "be able to use your face to unlock your phone without a warrant." According to Massachusetts ACLU legal director Matthew Segal, it remains unclear how police may use the feature in practice.

The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=039-6bb&t=c> Washington (DC) Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=03a-bdb&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7972275-5710&l=03b-5f2&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Timberg) also considers the question, which has been "hotly litigated in recent years, about what power law enforcement agencies have to gain access to data in devices." According to the Post, "The Supreme Court ruled in 2014 that authorities must have a search warrant to seize and attempt to examine a smartphone. It would take a separate court order to require a device's owner to unlock it for police, said Nate Cardozo, a senior staff attorney at the Electronic Frontier Foundation, a civil liberties group based in San Francisco."

According to Fox, "The specially designed net...can stop a vehicle weighing up to 17 tons and be deployed by just two officers in less than a minute, police said." According to Chief Inspector Nick Staley of the Met's Protective Security Operations Unit, "This equipment undoubtedly has the potential to save lives and is just one of a number of measures being taken to provide protection to crowds attending major events in London and reassuring businesses, workers and visitors as they go about their daily lives."

The clause says WikiLeaks "resembles a non-state hostile intelligence service" and that the US government "should treat it as such." Robert L. Deitz, a lawyer who has held senior legal posts at the CIA, NSA, and the Pentagon's intelligence offices, says the language could help investigators secure authorization needed to surveil US citizens thought to be associated with WikiLeaks. He said, "You need to show that someone is an agent of a foreign power." WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange's US lawyer, Barry Pollack, said he doesn't think the FISA court should accept the clause in any legal argument by authorities seeking surveillance approval on a US citizen.

DOJ Won't Charge Officers In Freddie Gray Case.

The Baltimore Sun <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=005-67b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=006-2b3&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=007-7ce&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Rector) reports the Justice Department issued a statement Tuesday that it will not bring charges against Baltimore police officers "in connection with the death of 25-year-old Freddie Gray from injuries sustained in police custody in 2015." The statement said the department reached its decision after "an extensive review of this tragic event, conducted by career prosecutors and investigators."

The AP <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=008-605&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=009-lcd&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=00a-740&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Linderman) reports that "the officers were charged by state prosecutors after Gray's neck was broken in the back of a police van in April 2015." Gray, 25, "was handcuffed and shackled, but he was unrestrained by a seat belt." The Justice Department "said in a statement that while Gray's death was 'undeniably tragic,' federal prosecutors did not find enough evidence to prove the officers willfully violated his civil rights, a high legal threshold." According to the AP, "the decision not to bring federal charges against the officers means none of them will be held criminally responsible for Gray's death." Three officers were acquitted in state court, and Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby later dropped the remaining state charges.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=00b-0ce&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=00c-075&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=00d-24c&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Zapotosky, Alexander, Hermann) reports that the Justice Department said in a statement, "It is not enough to show that the officer made a mistake, acted negligently, acted by accident, or even exercised bad judgment. Although Gray's death is undeniably tragic, the evidence in this case is insufficient to meet these substantial evidentiary requirements." The Post calls the announcement "not particularly surprising," as "after a mistrial and three acquittals," Mosby "had announced she was ending local authorities' effort to prosecute the officers, because winning a conviction had proven too difficult."

The New York Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=00e-8da&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=00f-637&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=010-5f6&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Ruiz) reports that the announcement brings to a close "the criminal civil rights investigation into Mr. Gray's death, which prompted unrest in Baltimore, a predominantly black city, and a federal examination of its police department's practices. 'At no time did we ever believe that there was evidence that any of the officers violated anyone's civil rights or were guilty of violating any federal laws,' Michael E. Davey, a lawyer for the Baltimore Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 3, said in a statement on Tuesday." The Times adds that in August, the Justice Department "issued a blistering report detailing misconduct and the use of excessive force by the city's Police Department, which is operating under a consent decree - a court-enforceable agreement to enact reforms - entered into during the Obama administration."

The Washington Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=011-8e5&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=012-9d1&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=013-408&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Noble) reports that "since Attorney General Jeff Sessions took over in January, the Justice Department has opted for a less hands-on approach to dealing with oversight of troubled law enforcement agencies." The Times adds that "though federal and city authorities had agreed to a court-stipulated police reform agreement, known as a consent decree, in the waning days of the Obama administration, Mr. Sessions' department tried to pull back from that agreement," but "a federal judge went ahead and approved the consent decree anyhow in April."

Rep. Duncan Pushes For Gun Silencer Provision.

Jeff Duncan (R-SC) "is renewing his controversial push" to ease restrictions on the purchase of gun silencers by including a silencer provision in the House's "Sportsmen Heritage and Recreational Enhancement Act." Duncan "argues that silencers are used by hunters and target shooters to limit potential hearing loss from gunfire," but gun control groups argue the provision "is opposed by many police organizations." Politico adds that there is "very little chance" Duncan's bill would pass the Senate, given Democratic opposition.

CA: Brown, Senate Leader De Leon Reach Deal On Changes To "Sanctuary State" Bill.

<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=023-5fc&t=c> The Hill <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=024-386&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=025-cdf&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Wilson) offers continuing coverage of reports that lawmakers have reached a deal that could pave the way for California to become a so-called "sanctuary state." California Gov. Jerry Brown and state Senate leader Kevin de León on Monday agreed to amendments to "bar state law enforcement officials from enforcing federal immigration law, either by asking about someone's immigration status or detaining individuals based on requests from the federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency." According to the Hill, "The amendments would give law enforcement agencies more discretion to notify federal immigration officials about convicted offenders in their custody and to transfer those offenders to immigration authorities. The bill would still allow federal immigration officials to interview those in custody, though it will not permit those officials to maintain permanent office space in state prisons or local jails."

CA Police Chiefs Drop Opposition To Sanctuary Measure, Sheriffs Stand Firm. The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=026-db3&t=c> AP <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=027-43c&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=028-d91&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Cooper, Spagat) reports the California Police Chiefs Association has dropped its "opposition to a weakened 'sanctuary state' measure that would restrict their interactions with immigration authorities, but sheriffs remained opposed Tuesday saying the measure would still limit their authority to work with federal officers in jails." The AP says changes announced Monday means the proposed bill would "allow local officers to transfer immigrants to federal authorities if they've been convicted of one of some 800 crimes." Kings County Sheriff David Robinson, a vocal critic of the bill, told the AP, "We're passing laws to not communicate with other governmental agencies and I just struggle with that. I'm still adamantly opposed to the bill. It does nothing to protect immigrants, whether legal or illegal. It only protects criminals."

The city's decision to drop charges came "without explanation" after "five years of pursuing a host of minor charges" against Watson.

Apple 10th Anniversary iPhone X Includes Facial Recognition Tech, Sparking Privacy Concerns.

The release of Apple's new iPhone X generated extensive reporting, including some outlets expressing concern about the new device's impacts on users' privacy and security. Quartz <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=036-0e5&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=037-276&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=038-b64&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Gershgorin) lays out "five privacy and security concerns about Apple's new FaceID facial recognition," which Apple "says...is 20 times more secure than TouchID...and can be used for unlocking apps and using ApplePay." According to Quartz, the tech "raises a lot of questions," such as where Apple will store user biometric data and whether police will "be able to use your face to unlock your phone without a warrant." According to Massachusetts ACLU legal director Matthew Segal, it remains unclear how police may use the feature in practice.

The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=039-6bb&t=c> Washington (DC) Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=03a-bdb&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=03b-5f2&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Timberg) also considers the question, which has been "hotly litigated in recent years, about what power law enforcement agencies have to gain access to data in devices." According to the Post, "The Supreme Court ruled in 2014 that authorities must have a search warrant to seize and attempt to examine a smartphone. It would take a separate court order to require a device's owner to unlock it for police, said Nate Cardozo, a senior staff attorney at the Electronic Frontier Foundation, a civil liberties group based in San Francisco."

According to Fox, "The specially designed net...can stop a vehicle weighing up to 17 tons and be deployed by just two officers in less than a minute, police said." According to Chief Inspector Nick Staley of the Met's Protective Security Operations Unit, "This equipment undoubtedly has the potential to save lives and is just one of a number of measures being taken to provide protection to crowds attending major events in London and reassuring businesses, workers and visitors as they go about their daily lives."

Clause In Intel Bill May Let Authorities Surveil US Persons Linked To WikiLeaks.

The clause says WikiLeaks "resembles a non-state hostile intelligence service" and that the US government "should treat it as such." Robert L. Deitz, a lawyer who has held senior legal posts at the CIA, NSA, and the Pentagon's intelligence offices, says the language could help investigators secure authorization needed to surveil US citizens thought to be associated with WikiLeaks. He said, "You need to show that someone is an agent of a foreign power." WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange's US lawyer, Barry Pollack, said he doesn't think the FISA court should accept the clause in any legal argument by authorities seeking surveillance approval on a US citizen.

DOJ Won't Charge Officers In Freddie Gray Case.

<<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=007-7ce&t=c>> (9/12, Rector) reports the Justice Department issued a statement Tuesday that it will not bring charges against Baltimore police officers "in connection with the death of 25-year-old Freddie Gray from injuries sustained in police custody in 2015." The statement said the department reached its decision after "an extensive review of this tragic event, conducted by career prosecutors and investigators."

<<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=00a-740&t=c>> (9/12, Linderman) reports that "the officers were charged by state prosecutors after Gray's neck was broken in the back of a police van in April 2015." Gray, 25, "was handcuffed and shackled, but he was unrestrained by a seat belt." The Justice Department "said in a statement that while Gray's death was 'undeniably tragic,' federal prosecutors did not find enough evidence to prove the officers willfully violated his civil rights, a high legal threshold." According to the AP, "the decision not to bring federal charges against the officers means none of them will be held criminally responsible for Gray's death." Three officers were acquitted in state court, and Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby later dropped the remaining state charges.

that the Justice Department said in a statement, "It is not enough to show that the officer made a mistake, acted negligently, acted by accident, or even exercised bad judgment. Although Gray's death is undeniably tragic, the evidence in this case is insufficient to meet these substantial evidentiary requirements." The Post calls the announcement "not particularly surprising," as "after a mistrial and three acquittals," Mosby "had announced she was ending local authorities' effort to prosecute the officers, because winning a conviction had proven too difficult."

'At no time did we ever believe that there was evidence that any of the officers violated anyone's civil rights or were guilty of violating any federal laws,' Michael E. Davey, a lawyer for the Baltimore Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 3, said in a statement on Tuesday." The Times adds that in August, the Justice Department "issued a blistering report detailing misconduct and the use of excessive force by the city's Police Department, which is operating under a consent decree - a court-enforceable agreement to enact reforms - entered into during the Obama administration."

The Times adds that "though federal and city authorities had agreed to a court-stipulated police reform agreement, known as a consent decree, in the waning days of the Obama administration, Mr. Sessions' department tried to pull back from that agreement," but "a federal judge went ahead and approved the consent decree anyhow in April."

Jeff Duncan (R-SC) "is renewing his controversial push" to ease restrictions on the purchase of gun silencers by including a silencer provision in the House's "Sportsmen Heritage and Recreational Enhancement Act." Duncan "argues that silencers are used by hunters and target shooters to limit potential hearing loss from gunfire," but gun control groups argue the provision "is opposed by many police organizations." Politico adds that there is "very little chance" Duncan's bill would pass the Senate, given Democratic opposition.

California Gov. Jerry Brown and state Senate leader Kevin de León on Monday agreed to amendments to "bar state law enforcement officials from enforcing federal immigration law, either by asking about someone's immigration status or detaining individuals based on requests from the federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency." According to the Hill, "The amendments would give law enforcement agencies more discretion to notify federal immigration officials about convicted offenders in their custody and to transfer those offenders to immigration authorities. The bill would still allow federal immigration officials to interview those in custody, though it will not permit those officials to maintain permanent office space in state prisons or local jails."

The AP says changes announced Monday means the proposed bill would "allow local officers to transfer immigrants to federal authorities if they've been convicted of one of some 800 crimes." Kings County Sheriff David Robinson, a vocal critic of the bill, told the AP, "We're passing laws to not communicate with other governmental agencies and I just struggle with that. I'm still adamantly opposed to the bill. It does nothing to protect immigrants, whether legal or illegal. It only protects criminals."

According to Quartz, the tech "raises a lot of questions," such as where Apple will store user biometric data and whether police will "be able to use your face to unlock your phone without a warrant." According to Massachusetts ACLU

<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7979436-85a6&l=041-81d&t=c> (9/12) reports a clause in the Intelligence Authorization Act 2018 that was approved by SSCI could be an attempt by the panel "to give federal law enforcement a new tool to go after the anti-secrecy group WikiLeaks and its U.S. collaborators." The clause says WikiLeaks "resembles a non-state hostile intelligence service" and that the US government "should treat it as such." Robert L. Deitz, a lawyer who has held senior legal posts at the CIA, NSA, and the Pentagon's intelligence offices, says the language could help investigators secure authorization needed to surveil US citizens thought to be associated with WikiLeaks. He said, "You need to show that someone is an agent of a foreign power." WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange's US lawyer, Barry Pollack, said he doesn't think the FISA court should accept the clause in any legal argument by authorities seeking surveillance approval on a US citizen.

DOJ Won't Charge Officers In Freddie Gray Case.

The Baltimore Sun <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=005-67b&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=006-2b3&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=007-7ce&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Rector) reports the Justice Department issued a statement Tuesday that it will not bring charges against Baltimore police officers "in connection with the death of 25-year-old Freddie Gray from injuries sustained in police custody in 2015." The statement said the department reached its decision after "an extensive review of this tragic event, conducted by career prosecutors and investigators."

The AP <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=008-605&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=009-lcd&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=00a-740&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Linderman) reports that "the officers were charged by state prosecutors after Gray's neck was broken in the back of a police van in April 2015." Gray, 25, "was handcuffed and shackled, but he was unrestrained by a seat belt." The Justice Department "said in a statement that while Gray's death was 'undeniably tragic,' federal prosecutors did not find enough evidence to prove the officers willfully violated his civil rights, a high legal threshold." According to the AP, "the decision not to bring federal charges against the officers means none of them will be held criminally responsible for Gray's death." Three officers were acquitted in state court, and Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby later dropped the remaining state charges.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=00b-0ce&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=00c-075&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=00d-24c&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Zapotosky, Alexander, Hermann) reports that the Justice Department said in a statement, "It is not enough to show that the officer made a mistake, acted negligently, acted by accident, or even exercised bad judgment. Although Gray's death is undeniably tragic, the evidence in this case is insufficient to meet these substantial evidentiary requirements." The Post calls the announcement "not particularly surprising," as "after a mistrial and three acquittals," Mosby "had announced she was ending local authorities' effort to prosecute the officers, because winning a conviction had proven too difficult."

The New York Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=00e-8da&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=00f-637&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=010-5f6&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Ruiz) reports that the announcement brings to a close "the criminal civil rights investigation into Mr. Gray's death, which prompted unrest in Baltimore, a predominantly black city, and a federal examination of its police department's practices. 'At no time did we ever believe that there was evidence that any of the officers violated anyone's civil rights or were guilty of violating any federal laws,' Michael E. Davey, a lawyer for the Baltimore Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 3, said in a statement on Tuesday." The Times adds that in August, the Justice Department "issued a blistering report detailing misconduct and the use of excessive force by the city's Police Department, which is operating under a consent decree - a court-enforceable agreement to enact reforms - entered into during the Obama administration."

The Washington Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=011-8e5&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=012-9d1&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=013-408&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Noble) reports that "since Attorney General Jeff Sessions took over in January, the Justice Department has opted for a less hands-on approach to dealing with oversight of troubled law enforcement agencies." The Times adds that "though federal and city authorities had agreed to a court-stipulated police reform agreement, known as a consent decree, in the waning days of the Obama administration, Mr. Sessions' department tried to pull back from that agreement," but "a federal judge went ahead and approved the consent decree anyhow in April."

Jeff Duncan (R-SC) "is renewing his controversial push" to ease restrictions on the purchase of gun silencers by including a silencer provision in the House's "Sportsmen Heritage and Recreational Enhancement Act." Duncan "argues that silencers are used by hunters and target shooters to limit potential hearing loss from gunfire," but gun control groups argue the provision "is opposed by many police organizations." Politico adds that there is "very little chance" Duncan's bill would pass the Senate, given Democratic opposition.

CA: Brown, Senate Leader De Leon Reach Deal On Changes To "Sanctuary State" Bill.

<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=023-5fc&t=c> The Hill <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=024-386&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=025-cdf&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Wilson) offers continuing coverage of reports that lawmakers have reached a deal that could pave the way for California to become a so-called "sanctuary state." California Gov. Jerry Brown and state Senate leader Kevin de León on Monday agreed to amendments to "bar state law enforcement officials from enforcing federal immigration law, either by asking about someone's immigration status or detaining individuals based on requests from the federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency." According to the Hill, "The amendments would give law enforcement agencies more discretion to notify federal immigration officials about convicted offenders in their custody and to transfer those offenders to immigration authorities. The bill would still allow federal immigration officials to interview those in custody, though it will not permit those officials to maintain permanent office space in state prisons or local jails."

CA Police Chiefs Drop Opposition To Sanctuary Measure, Sheriffs Stand Firm. The <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=026-db3&t=c> AP <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=027-43c&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091301iacp&r=7968590-ec66&l=028-d91&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/12, Cooper, Spagat) reports the California Police Chiefs Association has dropped its "opposition to a weakened 'sanctuary state' measure that would restrict their interactions with immigration authorities, but sheriffs remained opposed Tuesday saying the measure would still limit their authority to work with federal officers in jails." The AP says changes announced Monday means the proposed bill would "allow local officers to transfer immigrants to federal authorities if they've been convicted of one of some 800 crimes." Kings County Sheriff David Robinson, a vocal critic of the bill, told the AP, "We're passing laws to not communicate with other governmental agencies and I just struggle with that. I'm still adamantly opposed to the bill. It does nothing to protect immigrants, whether legal or illegal. It only protects criminals."

The city's decision to drop charges came "without explanation" after "five years of pursuing a host of minor charges" against Watson.

The release of Apple's new iPhone X generated extensive reporting, including some outlets expressing concern about the new device's impacts on users' privacy and security. According to Quartz, the tech "raises a lot of questions," such as where Apple will store user biometric data and whether police will "be able to use your face to unlock your phone without a warrant." According to Massachusetts ACLU legal director Matthew Segal, it remains unclear how police may use the feature in practice.

According to the Post, "The Supreme Court ruled in 2014 that authorities must have a search warrant to seize and attempt to examine a smartphone. It would take a separate court order to require a device's owner to unlock it for police, said Nate Cardozo, a senior staff attorney at the Electronic Frontier Foundation, a civil liberties group based in San Francisco."

According to Fox, "The specially designed net...can stop a vehicle weighing up to 17 tons and be deployed by just two officers in less than a minute, police said." According to Chief Inspector Nick Staley of the Met's Protective Security Operations Unit, "This equipment undoubtedly has the potential to save lives and is just one of a number of measures being taken to provide protection to crowds attending major events in London and reassuring businesses, workers and visitors as they go about their daily lives."

The clause says WikiLeaks "resembles a non-state hostile intelligence service" and that the US government "should treat it as such." Robert L. Deitz, a lawyer who has held senior legal posts at the CIA, NSA, and the Pentagon's intelligence offices, says the language could help investigators secure authorization needed to surveil US citizens thought to be associated with WikiLeaks. He said, "You need to show that someone is an agent of a foreign power." WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange's US lawyer, Barry Pollack, said he doesn't think the FISA court should accept the clause in any legal argument by authorities seeking surveillance approval on a US citizen.

DOJ Won't Charge Officers In Freddie Gray Case.

(9/12, Rector) reports the Justice Department issued a statement Tuesday that it will not bring charges against Baltimore police officers "in connection with the death of 25-year-old Freddie Gray from injuries sustained in police custody in 2015." The statement said the department reached its decision after "an extensive review of this tragic event, conducted by career prosecutors and investigators."

(9/12, Linderman) reports that "the officers were charged by state prosecutors after Gray's neck was broken in the back of a police van in April 2015." Gray, 25, "was handcuffed and shackled, but he was unrestrained by a seat belt." The Justice Department "said in a statement that while Gray's death was 'undeniably tragic,' federal prosecutors did not find enough evidence to prove the officers willfully violated his civil rights, a high legal threshold." According to the AP, "the decision not to bring federal charges against the officers means none of them will be held criminally responsible for Gray's death." Three officers were acquitted in state court, and Baltimore State's Attorney Marilyn Mosby later dropped the remaining state charges.

(9/12, Zapotosky, Alexander, Hermann) reports that the Justice Department said in a statement, "It is not enough to

The New York Times

'At no time did we ever believe that there was evidence that any of the officers violated anyone's civil rights or were guilty of violating any federal laws,' Michael E. Davey, a lawyer for the Baltimore Fraternal Order of Police Lodge 3, said in a statement on Tuesday." The Times adds that in August, the Justice Department "issued a blistering report detailing misconduct and the use of excessive force by the city's Police Department, which is operating under a consent decree - a court-enforceable agreement to enact reforms - entered into during the Obama administration."

The Times adds that "though federal and city authorities had agreed to a court-stipulated police reform agreement, known as a consent decree, in the waning days of the Obama administration, Mr. Sessions' department tried to pull back from that agreement," but "a federal judge went ahead and approved the consent decree anyhow in April."

California Gov. Jerry Brown and state Senate leader Kevin de León on Monday agreed to amendments to "bar state law enforcement officials from enforcing federal immigration law, either by asking about someone's immigration status or detaining individuals based on requests from the federal Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) agency." According to the Hill, "The amendments would give law enforcement agencies more discretion to notify federal immigration officials about convicted offenders in their custody and to transfer those offenders to immigration authorities. The bill would still allow federal immigration officials to interview those in custody, though it will not permit those officials to maintain permanent office space in state prisons or local jails."

The AP says changes announced Monday means the proposed bill would "allow local officers to transfer immigrants to federal authorities if they've been convicted of one of some 800 crimes." Kings County Sheriff David Robinson, a vocal critic of the bill, told the AP, "We're passing laws to not communicate with other governmental agencies and I just struggle with that. I'm still adamantly opposed to the bill. It does nothing to protect immigrants, whether legal or illegal. It only protects criminals."

According to Quartz, the tech "raises a lot of questions," such as where Apple will store user biometric data and whether police will "be able to use your face to unlock your phone without a warrant." According to Massachusetts ACLU

The clause says WikiLeaks "resembles a non-state hostile intelligence service" and that the US government "should treat it as such." Robert L. Deitz, a lawyer who has held senior legal posts at the CIA, NSA, and the Pentagon's intelligence offices, says the language could help investigators secure authorization needed to surveil US citizens thought to be associated with WikiLeaks. He said, "You need to show that someone is an agent of a foreign power." WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange's US lawyer, Barry Pollack, said he doesn't think the FISA court should accept the clause in any legal argument by authorities seeking surveillance approval on a US citizen.

The suit "claims the plaintiffs' First and Fourth Amendment rights were violated when United States agents searched, and in some cases confiscated, their devices without a warrant." While the government argues that the searches "are authorized by the same laws that allow border agents to look through suitcases without a judge's approval," privacy activists "say the laws, which were crafted with luggage in mind, shouldn't apply to digital devices that contain vast amounts of personal data related to the device owners and others they have contacted." subject to specific penalties that apply irrespective of the weapon or target involved in the crime.”

Share to Twitter (9/13, Watkins) reports that the House of Representatives "has agreed to several measures pushing back on Attorney General Jeff Sessions' expansion of the Justice Department's role in law enforcement seizure of US citizens' property and cash without proof of guilt." CNN adds that on Tuesday, the House "passed four amendments via voice vote which would limit the Justice Department from using funds towards facilitating asset forfeiture." Former Attorney General Eric Holder "curtailed the Justice Department's involvement in the heavily criticized law enforcement practice, but Sessions changed the policy in July as one of many steps the new attorney general has taken to rescind Obama-era Justice Department policies."

Share to Twitter (9/13) reports that the Boston Police Department said it is "concluding a one year test of body-worn cameras on 100 officers." The "program launched last Sept. 12 resulted in over 4,400 hours of video related to over 33,000 incidents," but "city officials aren't yet committed to a full rollout." Police Commissioner William Evans said "he'll await the findings of Northeastern University researchers assessing the program's effectiveness," who are expected to submit a preliminary report "by December, with a fuller analysis out around June 2018."

Andrew Cuomo said on Wednesday that "a special unit of the state police is being assigned to 10 high schools on Long Island in an effort to stamp out gang violence." The 10 state troopers "will work to educate school administrators and teachers about ways to recognize if a student is a member of a gang or at risk of joining." The AP adds that "the troopers will also create a curriculum that instructs students on the dangers of gangs such as MS-13, which has been tied to a wave of recent violence on Long Island." According to the AP, "the street gang MS-13 has been blamed for 21 deaths in the suburbs east of New York City in the past 21 months," and the killings "have caught the attention of both" US President Trump and Attorney General Sessions.

Lawsuit Alleges Forced Searches Of Cellphones, Laptops At Border Are Unconstitutional.

The suit "claims the plaintiffs' First and Fourth Amendment rights were violated when United States agents searched, and in some cases confiscated, their devices without a warrant." While the government argues that the searches "are authorized by the same laws that allow border agents to look through suitcases without a judge's approval," privacy activists "say the laws, which were crafted with luggage in mind, shouldn't apply to digital devices that contain vast amounts of personal data related to the device owners and others they have contacted." The Times quotes DHS spokesman David Lapan as saying "he could not comment on pending litigation but that 'we absolutely believe the searches are lawful.'"

The Post says acting Homeland Security Secretary Elaine Duke "ordered that Kaspersky Lab software be barred from federal civilian government networks, giving agencies a timeline to get rid of it." She "ordered the scrub on the grounds that the company has connections to the Russian government and its software poses a security risk."

President Of FBI Agents Association Urges Congress To Make Domestic Terrorism A Federal Crime.

Thomas F. O'Connor, president of the FBI Agents Association, in an op-ed for The Hill <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7968590-726d&l=036-8f0&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7968590-726d&l=037-18a&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7968590-726d&l=038-91f&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/13, O'Connor), notes that "even though many states and localities have adopted penalties for domestic terrorism - and the U.S. Code defines the phrase 'domestic terrorism' - there are currently no penalties attached to that definition and therefore 'domestic terrorism' is not a crime in and of itself under federal law." According to O'Connor, "The current legal gap...leads to confusion and frustration when the public expects a criminal to be prosecuted as a domestic terrorist but no such charges are pursued." O'Connor suggests that Congress "amend the U.S. Code to make domestic terrorism a crime subject to specific penalties that apply irrespective of the weapon or target involved in the crime."

Share to Twitter (9/13, Watkins) reports that the House of Representatives "has agreed to several measures pushing back on Attorney General Jeff Sessions' expansion of the Justice Department's role in law enforcement seizure of US citizens' property and cash without proof of guilt." CNN adds that on Tuesday, the House "passed four amendments via voice vote which would limit the Justice Department from using funds towards facilitating asset forfeiture." Former Attorney General Eric Holder "curtailed the Justice Department's involvement in the heavily criticized law enforcement practice, but Sessions changed the policy in July as one of many steps the new attorney general has taken to rescind Obama-era Justice Department policies."

Share to Twitter (9/13) reports that the Boston Police Department said it is "concluding a one year test of body-worn cameras on 100 officers." The "program launched last Sept. 12 resulted in over 4,400 hours of video related to over 33,000 incidents," but "city officials aren't yet committed to a full rollout." Police Commissioner William Evans said "he'll await the findings of Northeastern University researchers assessing the program's effectiveness," who are expected to submit a preliminary report "by December, with a fuller analysis out around June 2018."

Andrew Cuomo said on Wednesday that "a special unit of the state police is being assigned to 10 high schools on Long Island in an effort to stamp out gang violence." The 10 state troopers "will work to educate school administrators and teachers about ways to recognize if a student is a member of a gang or at risk of joining." The AP adds that "the troopers will also create a curriculum that instructs students on the dangers of gangs such as MS-13, which has been tied to a wave of recent violence on Long Island." According to the AP, "the street gang MS-13 has been blamed for 21 deaths in the suburbs east of New York City in the past 21 months," and the killings "have caught the attention of both" US President Trump and Attorney General Sessions.

Lawsuit Alleges Forced Searches Of Cellphones, Laptops At Border Are Unconstitutional.

The suit "claims the plaintiffs' First and Fourth Amendment rights were violated when United States agents searched, and in some cases confiscated, their devices without a warrant." While the government argues that the searches "are authorized by the same laws that allow border agents to look through suitcases without a judge's approval," privacy activists "say the laws, which were crafted with luggage in mind, shouldn't apply to digital devices that contain vast amounts of personal data related to the device owners and others they have contacted." The Times quotes DHS spokesman David Lapan as saying "he could not comment on pending litigation but that 'we absolutely believe the searches are lawful.'"

The Post says acting Homeland Security Secretary Elaine Duke "ordered that Kaspersky Lab software be barred from federal civilian government networks, giving agencies a timeline to get rid of it." She "ordered the scrub on the grounds that the company has connections to the Russian government and its software poses a security risk."

In response to concerns like these, Fung reports, "The new version of Apple's mobile operating system, iOS 11, is said to contain a fail-safe that will not only disable Touch ID, but also potentially Face ID."

President Of FBI Agents Association Urges Congress To Make Domestic Terrorism A Federal Crime.

Thomas F. O'Connor, president of the FBI Agents Association, in an op-ed for The Hill <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7972275-1706&l=036-8f0&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7972275-1706&l=037-18a&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7972275-1706&l=038-91f&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/13, O'Connor), notes that "even though many states and localities have adopted penalties for domestic terrorism - and the U.S. Code defines the phrase 'domestic terrorism' - there are currently no penalties attached to that definition and therefore 'domestic terrorism' is not a crime in and of itself under federal law." According to O'Connor, "The current legal gap...leads to confusion and frustration when the public expects a criminal to be prosecuted as a domestic terrorist but no such charges are pursued." O'Connor suggests that Congress "amend the U.S. Code to make domestic terrorism a crime subject to specific penalties that apply irrespective of the weapon or target involved in the crime."

CNN adds that on Tuesday, the House "passed four amendments via voice vote which would limit the Justice Department from using funds towards facilitating asset forfeiture." Former Attorney General Eric Holder "curtailed the Justice Department's involvement in the heavily criticized law enforcement practice, but Sessions changed the policy in July as one of many steps the new attorney general has taken to rescind Obama-era Justice Department policies."

Andrew Cuomo said on Wednesday that "a special unit of the state police is being assigned to 10 high schools on Long Island in an effort to stamp out gang violence." The 10 state troopers "will work to educate school administrators and teachers about ways to recognize if a student is a member of a gang or at risk of joining." The AP adds that "the troopers will also create a curriculum that instructs students on the dangers of gangs such as MS-13, which has been tied to a wave of recent violence on Long Island." According to the AP, "the street gang MS-13 has been blamed for 21 deaths in the suburbs east of New York City in the past 21 months," and the killings "have caught the attention of both" US President Trump and Attorney General Sessions.

Lawsuit Alleges Forced Searches Of Cellphones, Laptops At Border Are Unconstitutional.

The suit "claims the plaintiffs' First and Fourth Amendment rights were violated when United States agents searched, and in some cases confiscated, their devices without a warrant." While the government argues that the searches "are authorized by the same laws that allow border agents to look through suitcases without a judge's approval," privacy activists "say the laws, which were crafted with luggage in mind, shouldn't apply to digital devices that contain vast amounts of personal data related to the device owners and others they have contacted." The Times quotes DHS spokesman David Lapan as saying "he could not comment on pending litigation but that 'we absolutely believe the searches are lawful.'"

The Post says acting Homeland Security Secretary Elaine Duke "ordered that Kaspersky Lab software be barred from federal civilian government networks, giving agencies a timeline to get rid of it." She "ordered the scrub on the grounds that the company has connections to the Russian government and its software poses a security risk."

CNN adds that on Tuesday, the House "passed four amendments via voice vote which would limit the Justice Department from using funds towards facilitating asset forfeiture." Former Attorney General Eric Holder "curtailed the Justice Department's involvement in the heavily criticized law enforcement practice, but Sessions changed the policy in July as one of many steps the new attorney general has taken to rescind Obama-era Justice Department policies."

The suit "claims the plaintiffs' First and Fourth Amendment rights were violated when United States agents searched, and in some cases confiscated, their devices without a warrant." While the government argues that the searches "are authorized by the same laws that allow border agents to look through suitcases without a judge's approval," privacy activists "say the laws, which were crafted with luggage in mind, shouldn't apply to digital devices that contain vast amounts of personal data related to the device owners and others they have contacted." CNN adds that on Tuesday, the House "passed four amendments via voice vote which would limit the Justice Department from using funds towards facilitating asset forfeiture." Former Attorney General Eric Holder "curtailed the Justice Department's involvement in the heavily criticized law enforcement practice, but Sessions changed the policy in July as one of many steps the new attorney general has taken to rescind Obama-era Justice Department policies."

Andrew Cuomo said on Wednesday that "a special unit of the state police is being assigned to 10 high schools on Long Island in an effort to stamp out gang violence." The 10 state troopers "will work to educate school administrators and teachers about ways to recognize if a student is a member of a gang or at risk of joining." The AP adds that "the troopers will also create a curriculum that instructs students on the dangers of gangs such as MS-13, which has been tied to a wave of recent violence on Long Island." According to the AP, "the street gang MS-13 has been blamed for 21 deaths in the suburbs east of New York City in the past 21 months," and the killings "have caught the attention of both" US President Trump and Attorney General Sessions.

Eight Arrested In Mexican Cartel Meth Trafficking Bust.

Lawsuit Alleges Forced Searches Of Cellphones, Laptops At Border Are Unconstitutional.

The New York Times <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=01b-cae&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=01c-843&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=01d-192&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/13, Victor) reports that a lawsuit filed Wednesday by the ACLU and the Electronic Frontier Foundation on behalf of "eleven people whose phones and laptops were searched at United States airports and at the nation's northern border" argues that "the forced inspections are invasive and unlawful." The suit "claims the plaintiffs' First and Fourth Amendment rights were violated when United States agents searched, and in some cases confiscated, their devices without a warrant." While the government argues that the searches "are authorized by the same laws that allow border agents to look through suitcases without a judge's approval," privacy activists "say the laws, which were crafted with luggage in mind, shouldn't apply to digital devices that contain vast amounts of personal data related to the device owners and others they have contacted." The Times quotes DHS spokesman David Lapan as saying "he could not comment on pending litigation but that 'we absolutely believe the searches are lawful.'"

DHS Bans Kaspersky Lab Software In Federal Civilian Agencies.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=01e-89f&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=01f-8fe&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=020-bfc&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/13, Nakashima, Gillum) reports that the US government on Wednesday "banned the use of a Russian brand of security software by federal agencies and gave them three months to remove the software amid concerns the company has ties to state-sponsored cyberespionage activities, according to US officials." The Post says acting Homeland Security Secretary Elaine Duke "ordered that Kaspersky Lab software be barred from federal civilian government networks, giving agencies a timeline to get rid of it." She "ordered the scrub on the grounds that the company has connections to the Russian government and its software poses a security risk."

iPhone X's Facial Recognition Unlocking Raises Privacy Issues.

After Apple announced Tuesday that its iPhone X could be unlocked via facial recognition, Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=021-48f&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=022-e3e&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=023-6a8&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/13) columnist Brian Fung explores legal uncertainty over whether police could force someone to unlock their phone by pointing it at their face. In response to concerns like these, Fung reports, "The new version of Apple's mobile operating system, iOS 11, is said to contain a fail-safe that will not only disable Touch ID, but also potentially Face ID."

Really!...They have been in our country for many years through no fault of their own - brought in by parents at young age. Plus BIG border security."

President Of FBI Agents Association Urges Congress To Make Domestic Terrorism A Federal Crime.

Thomas F. O'Connor, president of the FBI Agents Association, in an op-ed for The Hill <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=036-8f0&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=037-18a&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091401iacp&r=7979436-a68e&l=038-91f&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/13, O'Connor), notes that "even though many states and localities have adopted penalties for domestic terrorism - and the U.S. Code defines the phrase 'domestic terrorism' - there are currently no penalties attached to that definition and therefore 'domestic terrorism' is not a crime in and of itself under federal law." According to O'Connor, "The current legal gap...leads to confusion and frustration when the public expects a criminal to be prosecuted as a domestic terrorist but no such charges are pursued." O'Connor suggests that Congress "amend the U.S. Code to make domestic terrorism a crime subject to specific penalties that apply irrespective of the weapon or target involved in the crime."

Share to Twitter (9/17, Sandle) reports British police "arrested a second man over the bombing of a London commuter train on Friday that injured 30 people and the security services lowered the threat level for an attack from its highest setting." The 21-year-old was "detained under Britain's terrorism laws in the west London suburb of Hounslow just before midnight on Saturday, London police said in a statement." Police had earlier "arrested an 18-year-old man in the departure lounge of Dover port in what they called a 'significant' step and then raided a property in Sunbury-on-Thames, a town near London and about four miles (six km) from Hounslow." Reuters explains that the home-made bomb "shot flames through a packed carriage at west London's Parsons Green Tube station during the Friday morning rush hour but apparently failed to detonate fully." Interior minister Amber Rudd "said on Sunday the second arrest showed it was not a lone-wolf attack but there was no evidence Islamic State was involved."

Share to Twitter (9/15) reported British officials praised the "heroic actions" of first responders for their actions on Friday. Former Prime Minister David Cameron thanked responders for their "swift response" to the attack. London Mayor Sadiq Khan said, "What we've also seen today is heroic efforts by Transport for London staff, from Londoners, from paramedics, from the fire service, from the police service showing us at our very best."

Under the program, local law enforcement agencies could request COPS' assistance "in order to make organizational and policy reforms" to improve trust with communities, and was used to address issues such as "improving hiring practices and reducing racial bias in policing." New goals for Justice Department collaborative reform "will include topic areas like responding to mass demonstrations or active-shooter incidents, strategies for reducing gang and drug activity, intelligence sharing with federal agencies, and de-escalation training."

As law enforcement professionals, we know that the relationships we have with our communities are absolutely essential. Part of that relationship building means getting to know all the different facets of our communities. Next week is the start of the Jewish High Holidays - Rosh Hashanah

(September 20-22) and Yom Kippur (September 29-30). Many Jewish people will gather for prayer services which are traditionally the most widely attended of all the Jewish holidays. This is a good opportunity to reconnect with those in the Jewish community, some of whom have experienced an elevated level of anxiety due to recent hate crimes and incidents, by patrolling synagogues and Jewish institutions.

US Customs Screening For Fentanyl At JFK Airport.

Kennedy International Airport - where 60 percent of US-bound international mail enters and where 40 percent of the fentanyl entering the country has been seized in recent years. CBP officers at the JFK facility have seized 64 fentanyl packages this year, "with another half-dozen suspected fentanyl packages in the pipeline for testing."

Kennedy Airport. Their daily duties, which include examining packages using x-rays, dogs, and a portable laser, are "tedious but important." The agents' "focus, right now, is on opioids." And the "No. 1 drug killing Americans is fentanyl," said Richard Baum, acting White House drug czar said, "coming through mail in lots of small packages."

In Anti-Opioid Push, US States Require Veterinarians Check Histories Of Pet Owners.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7979436-072a&l=029-5c0&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7979436-072a&l=02a-60c&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7979436-072a&l=02b-d36&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/16, Mercer) reports that states such as Colorado and Maine are "taking the war on opioids into veterinarians' offices" by requiring that "veterinarians to check the prescription histories of pet owners as well as their pets," while "Alaska, Connecticut and Virginia have imposed new limits on the amount of opioids a vet can prescribe." The legislation is intended to make it more difficult for pet owners to abuse drugs prescribed for their pets, but both veterinarians and other states point out that non-physicians are not qualified to have access to medical histories of humans. The Post reports that even in situations in which veterinarians suspect opioid abuse, their ability to take action is also limited.

Acid Attacks Escalating Across Europe.

The attack of four Boston College students in Marseille "is not being considered a terrorist attack, French authorities said." However, "police and academic researchers say acid-related attacks - many involving terrorism - are spreading across Europe and have occurred recently in the United States." Toxic substances are being "used as weapons more frequently partly as a result of a crackdown on guns and knives overseas in recent years." USA Today says assaults with corrosive substances "have more than doubled in England since 2012, according to police data obtained by the British Broadcasting Company," with the majority occurring in London.

Federal Prosecutors In Eastern California Aggressively Pursuing Silk Road, AlphaBay Vendors.

Ars Technica adds that "according to federal authorities, David Ryan Burchard was one of the largest online merchants of marijuana and cocaine - he sold over $1.4 million worth of narcotics." Burchard "was prosecuted in federal court in the Eastern District of California, which has quietly become a hub of cases against dealers from those notorious and now-shuttered Dark Web marketplaces." According to Lauren Horwood, "a spokeswoman for the US Attorney's Office in Sacramento, one of the primary hubs of this federal judicial district, there are currently 11 Silk Road and AlphaBay-related prosecutions underway." Four defendants "have pleaded guilty, and, of those, two have already been sentenced, while the others' cases are still ongoing."

Unmanned crafts will be launched in Vermont, Tucson, Arizona, and the Rio Grande Valley in Texas. "These aircraft will enable Border Patrol agents to surveil remote areas not easily accessible by other means, which is critical to our ability to secure the border," Border Patrol acting Chief Carla Provost said in a statement released last week. "They will also be invaluable for humanitarian missions, aiding in locating individuals in need of medical assistance along inhospitable areas of the border," she added.

Investigators from around the region gathered on Long Island for a week-long course, taught by the FBI's elite bomb technicians, to learn specific techniques and investigative tools to respond to a suspected bombing or explosion." Karen Cunningham, "a special agent on the FBI's counterterrorism squad, who participated in the training course on Long Island," is quoted as saying: "The ease at which bombs can be made, the simplicity of it, leaves that weapon in the hands of anyone who wants to cause harm to innocent people."

Police had earlier "arrested an 18-year-old man in the departure lounge of Dover port in what they called a 'significant' step and then raided a property in Sunbury-on-Thames, a town near London and about four miles (six km) from Hounslow." Reuters explains that the home-made bomb "shot flames through a packed carriage at west London's Parsons Green Tube station during the Friday morning rush hour but apparently failed to detonate fully." Interior minister Amber Rudd "said on Sunday the second arrest showed it was not a lone-wolf attack but there was no evidence Islamic State was involved."

As law enforcement professionals, we know that the relationships we have with our communities are absolutely essential. Part of that relationship building means getting to know all the different facets of our communities. Next week is the start of the Jewish High Holidays - Rosh Hashanah

(September 20-22) and Yom Kippur (September 29-30). Many Jewish people will gather for prayer services which are traditionally the most widely attended of all the Jewish holidays. This is a good opportunity to reconnect with those in the Jewish community, some of whom have experienced an elevated level of anxiety due to recent hate crimes and incidents, by patrolling synagogues and Jewish institutions.

US Customs Screening For Fentanyl At JFK Airport.

Kennedy International Airport - where 60 percent of US-bound international mail enters and where 40 percent of the fentanyl entering the country has been seized in recent years. CBP officers at the JFK facility have seized 64 fentanyl packages this year, "with another half-dozen suspected fentanyl packages in the pipeline for testing."

Kennedy Airport. Their daily duties, which include examining packages using x-rays, dogs, and a portable laser, are "tedious but important." The agents' "focus, right now, is on opioids." And the "No. 1 drug killing Americans is fentanyl," said Richard Baum, acting White House drug czar said, "coming through mail in lots of small packages."

In Anti-Opioid Push, US States Require Veterinarians Check Histories Of Pet Owners.

The legislation is intended to make it more difficult for pet owners to abuse drugs prescribed for their pets, but both veterinarians and other states point out that non-physicians are not qualified to have access to medical histories of humans. The Post reports that even in situations in which veterinarians suspect opioid abuse, their ability to take action is also limited.

Acid Attacks Escalating Across Europe.

The attack of four Boston College students in Marseille "is not being considered a terrorist attack, French authorities said." However, "police and academic researchers say acid-related attacks - many involving terrorism - are spreading across Europe and have occurred recently in the United States." Toxic substances are being "used as weapons more frequently partly as a result of a crackdown on guns and knives overseas in recent years." USA Today says assaults with corrosive substances "have more than doubled in England since 2012, according to police data obtained by the British Broadcasting Company," with the majority occurring in London.

Ars Technica adds that "according to federal authorities, David Ryan Burchard was one of the largest online merchants of marijuana and cocaine - he sold over $1.4 million worth of narcotics." Burchard "was prosecuted in federal court in the Eastern District of California, which has quietly become a hub of cases against dealers from those notorious and now-shuttered Dark Web marketplaces." According to Lauren Horwood, "a spokeswoman for the US Attorney's Office in Sacramento, one of the primary hubs of this federal judicial district, there are currently 11 Silk Road and AlphaBay-related prosecutions underway." Four defendants "have pleaded guilty, and, of those, two have already been sentenced, while the others' cases are still ongoing."

Unmanned crafts will be launched in Vermont, Tucson, Arizona, and the Rio Grande Valley in Texas. "These aircraft will enable Border Patrol agents to surveil remote areas not easily accessible by other means, which is critical to our ability to secure the border," Border Patrol acting Chief Carla Provost said in a statement released last week. "They will also be invaluable for humanitarian missions, aiding in locating individuals in need of medical assistance along inhospitable areas of the border," she added.

Investigators from around the region gathered on Long Island for a week-long course, taught by the FBI's elite bomb technicians, to learn specific techniques and investigative tools to respond to a suspected bombing or explosion." Karen Cunningham, "a special agent on the FBI's counterterrorism squad, who participated in the training course on Long Island," is quoted as saying: "The ease at which bombs can be made, the simplicity of it, leaves that weapon in the hands of anyone who wants to cause harm to innocent people."

Share to Twitter (9/17, Sandle) reports British police "arrested a second man over the bombing of a London commuter train on Friday that injured 30 people and the security services lowered the threat level for an attack from its highest setting." The 21-year-old was "detained under Britain's terrorism laws in the west London suburb of Hounslow just before midnight on Saturday, London police said in a statement." Police had earlier "arrested an 18-year-old man in the departure lounge of Dover port in what they called a 'significant' step and then raided a property in Sunbury-on-Thames, a town near London and about four miles (six km) from Hounslow." Reuters explains that the home-made bomb "shot flames through a packed carriage at west London's Parsons Green Tube station during the Friday morning rush hour but apparently failed to detonate fully." Interior minister Amber Rudd "said on Sunday the second arrest showed it was not a lone-wolf attack but there was no evidence Islamic State was involved."

Under the program, local law enforcement agencies could request COPS' assistance "in order to make organizational and policy reforms" to improve trust with communities, and was used to address issues such as "improving hiring practices and reducing racial bias in policing." New goals for Justice Department collaborative reform "will include topic areas like responding to mass demonstrations or active-shooter incidents, strategies for reducing gang and drug activity, intelligence sharing with federal agencies, and de-escalation training."

Chicago Judge Blocks New "Sanctuary Cities" Policy.

Leinenweber wrote that the city of Chicago had shown "a likelihood of success" in arguing that US Attorney General Jeff Sessions has exceeded his authority regarding changes to the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grants policy, and has demonstrated that the city "could suffer 'irreparable harm' in its relationship with the immigrant community" if it were to comply with Sessions' new standards.

As law enforcement professionals, we know that the relationships we have with our communities are absolutely essential. Part of that relationship building means getting to know all the different facets of our communities. Next week is the start of the Jewish High Holidays - Rosh Hashanah

(September 20-22) and Yom Kippur (September 29-30). Many Jewish people will gather for prayer services which are traditionally the most widely attended of all the Jewish holidays. This is a good opportunity to reconnect with those in the Jewish community, some of whom have experienced an elevated level of anxiety due to recent hate crimes and incidents, by patrolling synagogues and Jewish institutions.

US Customs Screening For Fentanyl At JFK Airport.

USA Today <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=023-1ef&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=024-c9d&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=025-1d8&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/17, Shesgreen) reports on US Customs and Border Protection officers' efforts to screen for fentanyl at a depot at John F. Kennedy International Airport - where 60 percent of US-bound international mail enters and where 40 percent of the fentanyl entering the country has been seized in recent years. CBP officers at the JFK facility have seized 64 fentanyl packages this year, "with another half-dozen suspected fentanyl packages in the pipeline for testing."

<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=026-b37&t=c> Fox News <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=027-600&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=028-599&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/15) received a "behind-the-scenes look" at what it calls the "frontlines of the tragic war" on drugs: US Customs and Border Protection agents working at John F. Kennedy Airport. Their daily duties, which include examining packages using x-rays, dogs, and a portable laser, are "tedious but important." The agents' "focus, right now, is on opioids." And the "No. 1 drug killing Americans is fentanyl," said Richard Baum, acting White House drug czar said, "coming through mail in lots of small packages."

In Anti-Opioid Push, US States Require Veterinarians Check Histories Of Pet Owners.

The Washington Post <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=029-5c0&t=c> <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=02a-60c&t=c> Share to Facebook <http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=02b-d36&t=c> Share to Twitter (9/16, Mercer) reports that states such as Colorado and Maine are "taking the war on opioids into veterinarians' offices" by requiring that "veterinarians to check the prescription histories of pet owners as well as their pets," while "Alaska, Connecticut and Virginia have imposed new limits on the amount of opioids a vet can prescribe." The legislation is intended to make it more difficult for pet owners to abuse drugs prescribed for their pets, but both veterinarians and other states point out that non-physicians are not qualified to have access to medical histories of humans. The Post reports that even in situations in which veterinarians suspect opioid abuse, their ability to take action is also limited.

Acid Attacks Escalating Across Europe.

The attack of four Boston College students in Marseille "is not being considered a terrorist attack, French authorities said." However, "police and academic researchers say acid-related attacks - many involving terrorism - are spreading across Europe and have occurred recently in the United States." Toxic substances are being "used as weapons more frequently partly as a result of a crackdown on guns and knives overseas in recent years." USA Today says assaults with corrosive substances "have more than doubled in England since 2012, according to police data obtained by the British Broadcasting Company," with the majority occurring in London.

Ars Technica adds that "according to federal authorities, David Ryan Burchard was one of the largest online merchants of marijuana and cocaine - he sold over $1.4 million worth of narcotics." Burchard "was prosecuted in federal court in the Eastern District of California, which has quietly become a hub of cases against dealers from those notorious and now-shuttered Dark Web marketplaces." According to Lauren Horwood, "a spokeswoman for the US Attorney's Office in Sacramento, one of the primary hubs of this federal judicial district, there are currently 11 Silk Road and AlphaBay-related prosecutions underway." Four defendants "have pleaded guilty, and, of those, two have already been sentenced, while the others' cases are still ongoing."

Unmanned crafts will be launched in Vermont, Tucson, Arizona, and the Rio Grande Valley in Texas. "These aircraft will enable Border Patrol agents to surveil remote areas not easily accessible by other means, which is critical to our ability to secure the border," Border Patrol acting Chief Carla Provost said in a statement released last week. "They will also be invaluable for humanitarian missions, aiding in locating individuals in need of medical assistance along inhospitable areas of the border," she added.

Investigators from around the region gathered on Long Island for a week-long course, taught by the FBI's elite bomb technicians, to learn specific techniques and investigative tools to respond to a suspected bombing or explosion." Karen Cunningham, "a special agent on the FBI's counterterrorism squad, who participated in the training course on Long Island," is quoted as saying: "The ease at which bombs can be made, the simplicity of it, leaves that weapon in the hands of anyone who wants to cause harm to innocent people."

<<http://mailview.bulletinmedia.com/mailview.aspx?m=2017091801iacp&r=7963908-e624&l=007-94d&t=c>> (9/17, Sandle) reports British police "arrested a second man over the bombing of a London commuter train on Friday that injured 30 people and the security services lowered the threat level for an attack from its highest setting." The 21-year-old was "detained under Britain's terrorism laws in the west London suburb of Hounslow just before midnight on Saturday, London police said in a statement." Police had earlier "arrested an 18-year-old man in the departure lounge of Dover port in what they called a 'significant' step and then raided a property in Sunbury-on-Thames, a town near London and about four miles (six km) from Hounslow." Reuters explains that the home-made bomb "shot flames through a packed carriage at west London's Parsons Green Tube station during the Friday morning rush hour but apparently failed to detonate fully." Interior minister Amber Rudd "said on Sunday the second arrest showed it was not a lone-wolf attack but there was no evidence Islamic State was involved."

Under the program, local law enforcement agencies could request COPS' assistance "in order to make organizational and policy reforms" to improve trust with communities, and was used to address issues such as "improving hiring practices and reducing racial bias in policing." New goals for Justice Department collaborative reform "will include topic areas like responding to mass demonstrations or active-shooter incidents, strategies for reducing gang and drug activity, intelligence sharing with federal agencies, and de-escalation training."

As law enforcement professionals, we know that the relationships we have with our communities are absolutely essential. Part of that relationship building means getting to know all the different facets of our communities. Next week is the start of the Jewish High Holidays - Rosh Hashanah (September 20-22) and Yom Kippur (September 29-30). Many Jewish people will gather for prayer services which are traditionally the most widely attended of all the Jewish holidays. This is a good opportunity to reconnect with those in the Jewish community, some of whom have experienced an elevated level of anxiety due to recent hate crimes and incidents, by patrolling synagogues and Jewish institutions.

CBP officers at the JFK facility have seized 64 fentanyl packages this year, "with another half-dozen suspected fentanyl packages in the pipeline for testing."

The legislation is intended to make it more difficult for pet owners to abuse drugs prescribed for their pets, but both veterinarians and other states point out that non-physicians are not qualified to have access to medical histories of humans. The attack of four Boston College students in Marseille "is not being considered a terrorist attack, French authorities said." However, "police and academic researchers say acid-related attacks - many involving terrorism - are spreading across Europe and have occurred recently in the United States." Toxic substances are being "used as weapons more frequently partly as a result of a crackdown on guns and knives overseas in recent years." USA Today says assaults with corrosive substances "have more than doubled in England since 2012, according to police data obtained by the British Broadcasting Company," with the majority occurring in London.

Burchard "was prosecuted in federal court in the Eastern District of California, which has quietly become a hub of cases against dealers from those notorious and now-shuttered Dark Web marketplaces." According to Lauren Horwood, "a spokeswoman for the US Attorney's Office in Sacramento, one of the primary hubs of this federal judicial district, there are currently 11 Silk Road and AlphaBay-related prosecutions underway." Four defendants "have pleaded guilty, and, of those, two have already been sentenced, while the others' cases are still ongoing."

"These aircraft will enable Border Patrol agents to surveil remote areas not easily accessible by other means, which is critical to our ability to secure the border," Border Patrol acting Chief Carla Provost said in a statement released last week. "They will also be invaluable for humanitarian missions, aiding in locating individuals in need of medical assistance along inhospitable areas of the border," she added.

(9/17, Sandle) reports British police "arrested a second man over the bombing of a London commuter train on Friday that injured 30 people and the security services lowered the threat level for an attack from its highest setting." The 21-year-old was "detained under Britain's terrorism laws in the west London suburb of Hounslow just before midnight on Saturday, London police said in a statement." Police had earlier "arrested an 18-year-old man in the departure lounge of Dover port in what they called a 'significant' step and then raided a property in Sunbury-on-Thames, a town near London and about four miles (six km) from Hounslow." Reuters explains that the home-made bomb "shot flames through a packed carriage at west London's Parsons Green Tube station during the Friday morning rush hour but apparently failed to detonate fully." Interior minister Amber Rudd "said on Sunday the second arrest showed it was not a lone-wolf attack but there was no evidence Islamic State was involved."

Leinenweber wrote that the city of Chicago had shown "a likelihood of success" in arguing that US Attorney General Jeff Sessions has exceeded his authority regarding changes to the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grants policy, and has demonstrated that the city "could suffer 'irreparable harm' in its relationship with the immigrant community" if it were to comply with Sessions' new standards.

As law enforcement professionals, we know that the relationships we have with our communities are absolutely essential. Part of that relationship building means getting to know all the different facets of our communities. Next week is the start of the Jewish High Holidays - Rosh Hashanah (September 20-22) and Yom Kippur (September 29-30). Many Jewish people will gather for prayer services which are traditionally the most widely attended of all the Jewish holidays. This is a good opportunity to reconnect with those in the Jewish community, some of whom have experienced an elevated level of anxiety due to recent hate crimes and incidents, by patrolling synagogues and Jewish institutions.

Kennedy International Airport - where 60 percent of US-bound international mail enters and where 40 percent of the fentanyl entering the country has been seized in recent years. CBP officers at the JFK facility have seized 64 fentanyl packages this year, "with another half-dozen suspected fentanyl packages in the pipeline for testing."

(9/16, Mercer) reports that states such as Colorado and Maine are "taking the war on opioids into veterinarians' offices" by requiring that "veterinarians to check the prescription histories of pet owners as well as their pets," while "Alaska, Connecticut and Virginia have imposed new limits on the amount of opioids a vet can prescribe." The legislation is intended to make it more difficult for pet owners to abuse drugs prescribed for their pets, but both veterinarians and other states point out that non-physicians are not qualified to have access to medical histories of humans. The Post reports that even in situations in which veterinarians suspect opioid abuse, their ability to take action is also limited.

(9/17, Nichols, Onyanga-Omara) reports, "Acid attacks, similar to the one injuring four U.S. women Sunday at a French train station, are escalating across Europe, and authorities are concerned that corrosive substances may become more of a 'weapon of choice' for potential terrorist attacks." The attack of four Boston College students in Marseille "is not being considered a terrorist attack, French authorities said." However, "police and academic researchers say acid-related attacks - many involving terrorism - are spreading across Europe and have occurred recently in the United States." Toxic substances are being "used as weapons more frequently partly as a result of a crackdown on guns and knives overseas in recent years." USA Today says assaults with corrosive substances "have more than doubled in England since 2012, according to police data obtained by the British Broadcasting Company," with the majority occurring in London.

(9/17) reports that in October, "a California drug dealer who recently pleaded guilty to selling on Silk Road, AlphaBay, and other sites is scheduled to be sentenced." Ars Technica adds that "according to federal authorities, David Ryan Burchard was one of the largest online merchants of marijuana and cocaine - he sold over $1.4 million worth of narcotics." Burchard "was prosecuted in federal court in the Eastern District of California, which has quietly become a hub of cases against dealers from those notorious and now-shuttered Dark Web marketplaces." According to Lauren Horwood, "a spokeswoman for the US Attorney's Office in Sacramento, one of the primary hubs of this federal judicial district, there are currently 11 Silk Road and AlphaBay-related prosecutions underway." Four defendants "have pleaded guilty, and, of those, two have already been sentenced, while the others' cases are still ongoing."

(9/15, Rockwell) reports that Customs and Border Protection and the Border Patrol is considering the feasibility of deploying "small, hand-launched drone systems" along the nation's boundaries. Unmanned crafts will be launched in Vermont, Tucson, Arizona, and the Rio Grande Valley in Texas. "These aircraft will enable Border Patrol agents to surveil remote areas not easily accessible by other means, which is critical to our ability to secure the border," Border Patrol acting Chief Carla Provost said in a statement released last week. "They will also be invaluable for humanitarian missions, aiding in locating individuals in need of medical assistance along inhospitable areas of the border," she added.

(9/17, Sandle) reports British police "arrested a second man over the bombing of a London commuter train on Friday that injured 30 people and the security services lowered the threat level for an attack from its highest setting." The 21-year-old was "detained under Britain's terrorism laws in the west London suburb of Hounslow just before midnight on Saturday, London police said in a statement." Police had earlier "arrested an 18-year-old man in the departure lounge of Dover port in what they called a 'significant' step and then raided a property in Sunbury-on-Thames, a town near London and about four miles (six km) from Hounslow." Reuters explains that the home-made bomb "shot flames through a packed carriage at west London's Parsons Green Tube station during the Friday morning rush hour but apparently failed to detonate fully." Interior minister Amber Rudd "said on Sunday the second arrest showed it was not a lone-wolf attack but there was no evidence Islamic State was involved."

As law enforcement professionals, we know that the relationships we have with our communities are absolutely essential. Part of that relationship building means getting to know all the different facets of our communities. Next week is the start of the Jewish High Holidays - Rosh Hashanah (September 20-22) and Yom Kippur (September 29-30). Many Jewish people will gather for prayer services which are traditionally the most widely attended of all the Jewish holidays. This is a good opportunity to reconnect with those in the Jewish community, some of whom have experienced an elevated level of anxiety due to recent hate crimes and incidents, by patrolling synagogues and Jewish institutions.

Kennedy International Airport - where 60 percent of US-bound international mail enters and where 40 percent of the fentanyl entering the country has been seized in recent years. CBP officers at the JFK facility have seized 64 fentanyl packages this year, "with another half-dozen suspected fentanyl packages in the pipeline for testing."

Kennedy Airport. Their daily duties, which include examining packages using x-rays, dogs, and a portable laser, are "tedious but important." The agents' "focus, right now, is on opioids." And the "'No. 1 drug killing Americans is fentanyl,' said Richard Baum, acting White House drug czar said, 'coming through mail in lots of small packages.'"

Colorado and Maine are "taking the war on opioids into veterinarians' offices" by requiring that "veterinarians to check the prescription histories of pet owners as well as their pets," while "Alaska, Connecticut and Virginia have imposed new limits on the amount of opioids a vet can prescribe." The legislation is intended to make it more difficult for pet owners to abuse drugs prescribed for their pets, but both veterinarians and other states point out that non-physicians are not qualified to have access to medical histories of humans. The Post reports that even in situations in which veterinarians suspect opioid abuse, their ability to take action is also limited.

attacks, similar to the one injuring four U.S. women Sunday at a French train station, are escalating across Europe, and authorities are concerned that corrosive substances may become more of a 'weapon of choice' for potential terrorist attacks." The attack of four Boston College students in Marseille "is not being considered a terrorist attack, French authorities said." However, "police and academic researchers say acid-related attacks - many involving terrorism - are spreading across Europe and have occurred recently in the United States." Toxic substances are being "used as weapons more frequently partly as a result of a crackdown on guns and knives overseas in recent years." USA Today says assaults with corrosive substances "have more than doubled in England since 2012, according to police data obtained by the British Broadcasting Company," with the majority occurring in London.

drug dealer who recently pleaded guilty to selling on Silk Road, AlphaBay, and other sites is scheduled to be sentenced." Ars Technica adds that "according to federal authorities, David Ryan Burchard was one of the largest online merchants of marijuana and cocaine - he sold over $1.4 million worth of narcotics." Burchard "was prosecuted in federal court in the Eastern District of California, which has quietly become a hub of cases against dealers from those notorious and now-shuttered Dark Web marketplaces." According to Lauren Horwood, "a spokeswoman for the US Attorney's Office in Sacramento, one of the primary hubs of this federal judicial district, there are currently 11 Silk Road and AlphaBay-related prosecutions underway." Four defendants "have pleaded guilty, and, of those, two have already been sentenced, while the others' cases are still ongoing."

Unmanned crafts will be launched in Vermont, Tucson, Arizona, and the Rio Grande Valley in Texas. "These aircraft will enable Border Patrol agents to surveil remote areas not easily accessible by other means, which is critical to our ability to secure the border," Border Patrol acting Chief Carla Provost said in a statement released last week. "They will also be invaluable for humanitarian missions, aiding in locating individuals in need of medical assistance along inhospitable areas of the border," she added.

Investigators from around the region gathered on Long Island for a week-long course, taught by the FBI's elite bomb technicians, to learn specific techniques and investigative tools to respond to a suspected bombing or explosion." <http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/70ff1c6a-3575-4b8e-8ed5-c5b4b2836b3f/4>

Lansing Police Chief Mike Yankowski started his policing career during the crack-cocaine epidemic in the 1990s. But the country's growing problem with opioids is worse, he said. Lansing City Council unanimously passed two resolutions that will allow the city to proceed with litigation against manufacturers and distributors of opioids. First, the Council declared the city's opioid crisis a public nuisance and then approved outside legal counsel for opioid litigation.

<<http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/70ff1c6a-3575-4b8e-8ed5-c5b4b2836b3f/6>>

Over the past year, the San Diego County Sheriff's Department has used drones in more than 70 incidents, including homicide investigations, SWAT incidents and search-and-rescue missions. "This technology is fantastic, and it's extremely useful," Lt. Rich Williams said. "It's the quickest, easiest and most effective way to get video and still images without having to use a helicopter, which obviously can't get into places a drone can."

Detroit police will soon integrate facial recognition software into the department's Project Green Light video crime monitoring program. Police say the software will be used only to investigate violent crimes and will help get dangerous criminals off the street, although civil rights groups have expressed concern about the use of the technology by law enforcement.

Scotland Yard will be unable to provide some services at all in future if budget constraints force the number of officers in the capital to fall as low as is feared, a senior officer has warned. On Monday, the mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, said the Metropolitan police could end up with fewer than 27,500 officers by 2021 - the smallest number in nearly two decades - as a result of the financial pressures it is facing.

Toronto Star: Ontario vows new bail policy will be 'faster and fairer'

<<http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/70ff1c6a-3575-4b8e-8ed5-c5b4b2836b3f/12>>

The Ontario government has come out with a new policy for Crown attorneys to make the bail system "faster and fairer," with a shift in focus from protection of the public to the rights of the accused that could lead to far more people being granted bail. A response to court delays and the staggering number of legally innocent individuals crowding Ontario's jails awaiting trial, the new policy emphasizes that Crown attorneys should only be demanding as a last resort that a person have a surety in order to be released. A surety is a person who promises to ensure that the accused complies with the conditions of their bail, and who puts up money that they can end up losing if they fail in their surety duties.

<<http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/70ff1c6a-3575-4b8e-8ed5-c5b4b2836b3f/14>>

Caught in the midst of the continuing dispute pitting the Trump administration against Cook County and the City of Chicago, suburban police departments may find their funding cut in coming weeks. The U.S. Justice Department gave Cook County and its largest city until last Friday to challenge its preliminary finding, issued this month, that the county and city are violating federal law by adopting policies limiting their cooperation with federal authorities on immigration policies. At risk are grant funds from the federal government that represent a drop in the bucket to the large law enforcement budgets of Chicago and Cook County; grant money for the fiscal year 2016 amounted to $2.3 million. But about half of that grant money is typically passed on to local suburban departments, which may lose funding for everything from patrol officers to Tasers regardless of their immigration policies.

Illinois Law Review: Moonlighting: The private employment of off-duty officers

<<http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/70ff1c6a-3575-4b8e-8ed5-c5b4b2836b3f/16>>

This Article is the first to provide an empirical assessment of moonlighting in the United States, reporting the results of an original survey of nonfederal law enforcement agencies that collectively employ over 143,000 full-time sworn officers, almost a fifth of all state and local officers in the country. A substantial majority of agencies-about 80%-allow officers to engage in moonlighting, and tens of thousands of officers at those agencies log millions of hours every year working for private employers. Yet governing law and agency policies reflect substantial variation in how off-duty employment is regulated.

Lansing Police Chief Mike Yankowski started his policing career during the crack-cocaine epidemic in the 1990s. But the country's growing problem with opioids is worse, he said. Lansing City Council unanimously passed two resolutions that will allow the city to proceed with litigation against manufacturers and distributors of opioids. First, the Council declared the city's opioid crisis a public nuisance and then approved outside legal counsel for opioid litigation.

<<http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/c865a876-ec9b-4686-9642-e5450b856826/6>>

Over the past year, the San Diego County Sheriff's Department has used drones in more than 70 incidents, including homicide investigations, SWAT incidents and search-and-rescue missions. "This technology is fantastic, and it's extremely useful," Lt. Rich Williams said. "It's the quickest, easiest and most effective way to get video and still images without having to use a helicopter, which obviously can't get into places a drone can."

<<http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/c865a876-ec9b-4686-9642-e5450b856826/8>>

Detroit police will soon integrate facial recognition software into the department's Project Green Light video crime monitoring program. Police say the software will be used only to investigate violent crimes and will help get dangerous criminals off the street, although civil rights groups have expressed concern about the use of the technology by law enforcement.

Scotland Yard will be unable to provide some services at all in future if budget constraints force the number of officers in the capital to fall as low as is feared, a senior officer has warned. On Monday, the mayor of London, Sadiq Khan, said the Metropolitan police could end up with fewer than 27,500 officers by 2021 - the smallest number in nearly two decades - as a result of the financial pressures it is facing.

Toronto Star: Ontario vows new bail policy will be 'faster and fairer'
<<http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/c865a876-ec9b-4686-9642-e5450b856826/12>>

The Ontario government has come out with a new policy for Crown attorneys to make the bail system "faster and fairer," with a shift in focus from protection of the public to the rights of the accused that could lead to far more people being granted bail. A response to court delays and the staggering number of legally innocent individuals crowding Ontario's jails awaiting trial, the new policy emphasizes that Crown attorneys should only be demanding as a last resort that a person have a surety in order to be released. A surety is a person who promises to ensure that the accused complies with the conditions of their bail, and who puts up money that they can end up losing if they fail in their surety duties.

Caught in the midst of the continuing dispute pitting the Trump administration against Cook County and the City of Chicago, suburban police departments may find their funding cut in coming weeks. The U.S. Justice Department gave Cook County and its largest city until last Friday to challenge its preliminary finding, issued this month, that the county and city are violating federal law by adopting policies limiting their cooperation with federal authorities on immigration policies. At risk are grant funds from the federal government that represent a drop in the bucket to the large law enforcement budgets of Chicago and Cook County; grant money for the fiscal year 2016 amounted to $2.3 million. But about half of that grant money is typically passed on to local suburban departments, which may lose funding for everything from patrol officers to Tasers regardless of their immigration policies.

Illinois Law Review: Moonlighting: The private employment of off-duty officers
<<http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/c865a876-ec9b-4686-9642-e5450b856826/16>>

This Article is the first to provide an empirical assessment of moonlighting in the United States, reporting the results of an original survey of nonfederal law enforcement agencies that collectively employ over 143,000 full-time sworn officers, almost a fifth of all state and local officers in the country. A substantial majority of agencies-about 80%-allow officers to engage in moonlighting, and tens of thousands of officers at those agencies log millions of hours every year working for private employers. Yet governing law and agency policies reflect substantial variation in how off-duty employment is regulated.

Dear James,

We hope you enjoyed your time at the IACP Conference in Philadelphia. If you weren't able to stop by, NEC's Advanced Recognition Systems team shared how our high-performance facial recognition solutions are improving identity recognition, investigations and intelligence analysis.

To learn about how we are innovating in the facial recognition sector, watch this short video and read about how the Irving PD's Crime Information Center is using NEC's NeoFace® Reveal to more quickly identify a suspect and get this intelligence information to officers on the street - increasing their job efficiency and leading to a quicker apprehension.

From city streets to mass transit to stadiums, NEC's NeoFace solutions help you enhance safety, investigate events and prevent recurring incidents.

Questions? Let us know, and someone from the NEC team will contact you immediately.

Best regards,
The NEC Advanced Recognition Systems Team

Hi Lieutenant Sean Randall,

Thank you for your interest in Vigilant Solutions.

Vigilant Solutions is a global provider of law enforcement solutions including LPR / ANPR and Facial Recognition.

In order for me to properly handle your information request, please tell me a little more about your interest. Any information you can provide me relative to your current project, products of interest, or agency initiatives would be greatly appreciated.

Helpful information:

- * Product of Interest
- * Number of cruisers in fleet
- * LE agency name
- * Number of Sworn
- * Budget $$ for project
- * City, State & County (if applicable)
- * Pain Points (i.e. - Burglary, Auto Theft, Gangs, Narcotics)

Please also include some available times in the coming week(s) so that we can set aside some time to discuss.

Regards,

Jeremy Savage

HOMELESSNESS

Associated Press: <http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/eedb32bf-c9c6-4e0e-96cc-ba4b4f8fbab0/2> Report: West Coast homeless crisis pushes US count higher

The nation's homeless population increased this year for the first time since 2010, driven by a surge in the number of people living on the streets in Los Angeles and other West Coast cities. The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development released its annual Point in Time count Wednesday, a report that showed nearly 554,000 homeless people across the country during local tallies conducted in January. That figure is up nearly 1 percent from 2016. (Note: PERF will be holding a meeting about the police response to homelessness on January 24th in Long Beach, California. Pentagon failed to submit 600 reports to FBI, potentially allowing illegal gun buys

Military law enforcement officials failed to submit fingerprint reports to the FBI in one out of four cases over a two-year period in which troops had been convicted of serious crimes, potentially allowing them to purchase weapons illegally, the Pentagon Inspector General found in a report released Tuesday. The military services are required to submit so-called "fingerprint cards" to the FBI's Next Generation Database. From 2015 through 2016, the inspector general found that the services did not submit 601, or 24%, of the required 2,502 fingerprint reports. Failing to do so, the report notes, "can allow someone to purchase a weapon who should not, hinder criminal investigations, and potentially impact law enforcement and national security interests."

IMMIGRATION

Los Angeles Times: <http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/eedb32bf-c9c6-4e0e-96cc-ba4b4f8fbab0/6> Immigration enforcement under Trump: Fewer people caught at border, more arrested in U.S. interior

The number of people arrested at the southwest border in fiscal year 2017, which ended Sept. 30, dropped by about 25% compared with the previous year to 310,531, the lowest since 1971. The reduction mostly tracks a trend in recent years of fewer migrants coming from Mexico. Immigration arrests in the country's interior have surged 40% this year. In the last fiscal year, ICE arrested 105,736 people in the U.S. illegally who also had criminal convictions, a 12% increase from the previous year. But arrests of people with no criminal convictions more than doubled in the past year, to more than 37,000. The Border Patrol said assaults on its officers jumped by 40% to 847 during the year. At the same time, stricter policies on use of force and greater accountability has helped reduce shootings by agents. Officials reported 17 shootings by Border Patrol officers last year, down 69% from the peak of 55 in 2012. Use of Tasers and other "less-lethal" tactics has increased.

Albany Times Union: <http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/eedb32bf-c9c6-4e0e-96cc-ba4b4f8fbab0/7> Albany police, schools team up to help traumatized children

For the first time ever, the Albany Police Department will notify the city school district within 24 hours of encountering a child at a traumatic event. This notification will include a name and any other identifying information, but leave out potentially stigmatizing information related to the trauma itself. Once the district gets it, they will send word to teachers, guidance counselors and other staff the child might encounter during the day to keep a lookout for any abnormal behavior, or simply reach out and let the child know they are there if they need to talk.

The number of people St. Louis County police officers have been able to save using a heroin antidote has declined by about 30 percent this year - a trend medical experts fear may only worsen as users turn to a more potent, often fatal form of the drug. Of the 196 overdose deaths in 2016, 46 percent involved fentanyl, an opiate sometimes mixed with or sold as heroin, but vastly stronger. Through July of this year - the most recent data available from the St. Louis County Medical Examiner's Office - 89 percent of 121 overdose deaths have involved fentanyl, said Spring Schmidt, the director of health promotion and public health research for St. Louis County.

OFFICER WELLNESS

Omaha World-Herald: <http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/eedb32bf-c9c6-4e0e-96cc-ba4b4f8fbab0/10> After Von Maur shooting, Omaha police officers struggled under weight of emotional wounds

After responding to the 2007 mass shooting at Von Maur, Omaha Police Officer Dave Staskiewicz was long haunted by that day: the faces of the victims; the vulnerability he felt as he ascended an escalator, knowing he was easy pickings for the armed gunman. Sgt. Jeff Baker struggled, too, long harboring a sense of failure for not stopping the gunman, and anger toward him for taking his own life before officers arrived. The officers weren't prepared for their stressful experiences on Dec. 5, 2007, nor were Omaha Police Department policies regarding emotional support for officers who face trauma. Police officials say Omaha's mass shooting, which happened 10 years ago Tuesday, ultimately served as a catalyst for overhauling programs to support officers involved in traumatic events.

Although not all black officers back criminal-justice reform, and many who do are not black, African Americans have a long history of advocating for change in their own departments. Despite the current cultural and governmental challenges facing policing reform, some of the biggest obstacles are not particular to the Trump era, leaders told me. Rather, they are much older conflicts that aren't easily influenced by federal politics.

San Diego boosted pay between 25 percent and 30 percent for the city's police officers on Tuesday to help solve a crisis of departing officers that has lengthened response times, limited proactive policing and ballooned overtime budgets. The City Council unanimously approved the pay hikes, which also aim to attract recruits to the police academy. Technology could revolutionise policing in Wales but it comes with its own set of ethical responsibilities, according to a leading officer. Acting Assistant Chief Constable Jonathan Edwards, of South Wales Police, is head of the Fusion Project. The initiative has piloted devices such as automated facial recognition (AFR) software and police body cameras. ACC Edwards said tech was an "important evidential tool" but posed questions about what police do with the data.

Pentagon failed to submit 600 reports to FBI, potentially allowing illegal gun buys

Military law enforcement officials failed to submit fingerprint reports to the FBI in one out of four cases over a two-year period in which troops had been convicted of serious crimes, potentially allowing them to purchase weapons illegally, the Pentagon Inspector General found in a report released Tuesday. The military services are required to submit so-called "fingerprint cards" to the FBI's Next Generation Database. From 2015 through 2016, the inspector general found that the services did not submit 601, or 24%, of the required 2,502 fingerprint reports. Failing to do so, the report notes, "can allow someone to purchase a weapon who should not, hinder criminal investigations, and potentially impact law enforcement and national security interests."

Los Angeles Times: <http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/24215e6c-872d-4e81-a994-06d1882f99d1/6> Immigration enforcement under Trump: Fewer people caught at border, more arrested in U.S. interior

The number of people arrested at the southwest border in fiscal year 2017, which ended Sept. 30, dropped by about 25% compared with the previous year to 310,531, the lowest since 1971. The reduction mostly tracks a trend in recent years of fewer migrants coming from Mexico. Immigration arrests in the country's interior have surged 40% this year. In the last fiscal year, ICE arrested 105,736 people in the U.S. illegally who also had criminal convictions, a 12% increase from the previous year. But arrests of people with no criminal convictions more than doubled in the past year, to more than 37,000. The Border Patrol said assaults on its officers jumped by 40% to 847 during the year. At the same time, stricter policies on use of force and greater accountability has helped reduce shootings by agents. Officials reported 17 shootings by Border Patrol officers last year, down 69% from the peak of 55 in 2012. Use of Tasers and other "less-lethal" tactics has increased.

For the first time ever, the Albany Police Department will notify the city school district within 24 hours of encountering a child at a traumatic event. This notification will include a name and any other identifying information, but leave out potentially stigmatizing information related to the trauma itself. Once the district gets it, they will send word to teachers, guidance counselors and other staff the child might encounter during the day to keep a lookout for any abnormal behavior, or simply reach out and let the child know they are there if they need to talk.

The number of people St. Louis County police officers have been able to save using a heroin antidote has declined by about 30 percent this year - a trend medical experts fear may only worsen as users turn to a more potent, often fatal form of the drug. Of the 196 overdose deaths in 2016, 46 percent involved fentanyl, an opiate sometimes mixed with or sold as heroin, but vastly stronger. Through July of this year - the most recent data available from the St. Louis County Medical Examiner's Office - 89 percent of 121 overdose deaths have involved fentanyl, said Spring Schmidt, the director of health promotion and public health research for St. Louis County.

Omaha World-Herald: <http://perf.memberclicks.net/message2/link/24215e6c-872d-4e81-a994-06d1882f99d1/10> After Von Maur shooting, Omaha police officers struggled under weight of emotional wounds

After responding to the 2007 mass shooting at Von Maur, Omaha Police Officer Dave Staskiewicz was long haunted by that day: the faces of the victims; the vulnerability he felt as he ascended an escalator, knowing he was easy pickings for the armed gunman. Sgt. Jeff Baker struggled, too, long harboring a sense of failure for not stopping the gunman, and anger toward him for taking his own life before officers arrived. The officers weren't prepared for their stressful experiences on Dec. 5, 2007, nor were Omaha Police Department policies regarding emotional support for officers who face trauma. Police officials say Omaha's mass shooting, which happened 10 years ago Tuesday, ultimately served as a catalyst for overhauling programs to support officers involved in traumatic events.

Wales police technology has 'ethical responsibility too'

Technology could revolutionise policing in Wales but it comes with its own set of ethical responsibilities, according to a leading officer. Acting Assistant Chief Constable Jonathan Edwards, of South Wales Police, is head of the Fusion Project. The initiative has piloted devices such as automated facial recognition (AFR) software and police body cameras. ACC Edwards said tech was an "important evidential tool" but posed questions about what police do with the data.

Dear PoliceOne Member,

<<https://police-praetorian.netdna-ssl.com/images/spacer.gif>>
The last few years have seen a technological revolution in policing with the use of video leading the way. Throughout 2017, we have examined how video is shaping policy, training and community relations as part of our four-part coverage series, <<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=18564291&msgid=151061&act=47&w=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2F>> "Policing in the Video Age."

In the conclusion to our yearlong coverage, we take a look into the future of video in law enforcement, including how the incorporation of artificial intelligence software, augmented reality and live scan facial recognition will transform policing; how FirstNet will add police use of mobile video technologies; and how virtual reality could transform law enforcement operations and training.

Dear PoliceOne Member,

<<https://police-praetorian.netdna-ssl.com/images/spacer.gif>>

The last few years have seen a technological revolution in policing with the use of video leading the way. Throughout 2017, we have examined how video is shaping policy, training and community relations as part of our four-part coverage series, "Policing in the Video Age."

<<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=16913841&msgid=151061&act=N5YO&c=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2F>>

<<https://police-praetorian.netdna-ssl.com/images/spacer.gif>>

In the conclusion to our yearlong coverage, we take a look into the future of video in law enforcement, including how the incorporation of artificial intelligence software, augmented reality and live scan facial recognition will transform policing; how FirstNet will aid police use of mobile video technologies; and how virtual reality could transform law enforcement operations and training.

Dear PoliceOne Member,

<https://police-praetorian.netdna-ssl.com/images/spacer.gif>

The last few years have seen a technological revolution in policing with the use of video leading the way. Throughout 2017, we have examined how video is shaping policy, training and community relations as part of our four-part coverage series, <<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=16258007&msgid=151061&act=3378&c=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2F>> "Policing in the Video Age."

In the conclusion to our yearlong coverage, we take a look into the future of video in law enforcement, including how the incorporation of artificial intelligence software, augmented reality and live scan facial recognition will transform policing; how FirstNet will add police use of mobile video technologies; and how virtual reality could transform law enforcement operations and training.

Dear PoliceOne Member,

In today's world, nothing is making a bigger impact on law enforcement than video. From throwable robots to footage shot by the public, the rise of video technologies is shaping everything from training and policy to community relations and investigations.

The latest PoliceOne Digital Edition, 2018 Police Video Guide: The emerging tech, training and tactics shaping law enforcement
<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=16913841&msgid=151120&act=N5YO&c=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2Farticles%2F458367006-2018-Police-Video-Guide-The-emerging-tech-training-and-tactics-shaping-law-enforcement%2F>, explores how departments can best utilize emerging video technologies to enhance police officer safety and improve operational efficiencies.

In this special P1 report
<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=16913841&msgid=151120&act=N5YO&c=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2Farticles%2F458367006-2018-Police-Video-Guide-The-emerging-tech-training-and-tactics-shaping-law-enforcement%2F>, we outline the issues bystander videos present for law enforcement, discuss how to turn BWC footage into actionable data for police officer training purposes, and review how to safely store and protect your video data, among other topics.

Dear PoliceOne Member,

In today's world, nothing is making a bigger impact on law enforcement than video. From throwable robots to footage shot by the public, the rise of video technologies is shaping everything from training and policy to community relations and investigations.

The latest PoliceOne Digital Edition, 2018 Police Video Guide: The emerging tech, training and tactics shaping law enforcement
<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=23937454&msgid=151120&act=EM6O&c=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2Farticles%2F458367006-2018-Police-Video-Guide-The-emerging-tech-training-and-tactics-shaping-law-enforcement%2F>, explores how departments can best utilize emerging video technologies to enhance police officer safety and improve operational efficiencies.

In this special P1 report
<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=23937454&msgid=151120&act=EM6O&c=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2Farticles%2F458367006-2018-Police-Video-Guide-The-emerging-tech-training-and-tactics-shaping-law-enforcement%2F>, we outline the issues bystander videos present for law enforcement, discuss how to turn BWC footage into actionable data for police officer training purposes, and review how to safely store and protect your video data, among other topics.

Dear PoliceOne Member,

Throughout 2017, we have examined how video is shaping policy, training and community relations as part of our ambitious four-part coverage series, "Policing in the Video Age."

<<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=16913841&msgid=151456&act=N5YO&c=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2F>>

The conclusion to our yearlong coverage series takes a look at how video will continue to revolutionize policing in the future. In today's newsletter, we feature two articles from the final installment of the series. Author Tim Dees takes a look at the future of body cameras, and Doug Wyllie explores how AI software could monitor real-time camera feeds to detect criminal behavior. You can find the rest of the special coverage here

Many cops failed to notice a gun on a vehicle's dashboard during a simulated traffic stop. Could inattentional blindness be to blame?

Dear PoliceOne Member,

Throughout 2017, we have examined how video is shaping policy, training and community relations as part of our ambitious four-part coverage series, "Policing in the Video Age."

<<http://click.icptrack.com/icp/relay.php?r=23937454&msgid=151456&act=EM6O&c=1503598&destination=https%3A%2F%2Fwww.policeone.com%2Fpolicing-in-the-video-age%2F>>

The conclusion to our yearlong coverage series takes a look at how video will continue to revolutionize policing in the future. In today's newsletter, we feature two articles from the final installment of the series. Author Tim Dees takes a look at the future of body cameras, and Doug Wyllie explores how AI software could monitor real-time camera feeds to detect criminal behavior. You can find the rest of the special coverage here

There may come a day when a central station will be able to activate a BWC by remote command and obtain a video stream.

What's in store

Join over 200 government, non-profit, higher education, and industry colleagues on February 6*-9, 2018, to network and learn about the latest on the state of information sharing and national standards in justice, public safety, and homeland security -- as you develop valuable new contacts and business opportunities.

Learn About:

- * FBI's Future Technologies
- * Blockchain use in the Public Sector and Courts
- * Facial Recognition Challenges
- * Using Data Analytics with NIBRS
- * Emergency Communications Center of the Future
- * 2018 Budget & Opportunity Forecast, and many others

NEW THIS YEAR:

- * Government employees can register for the National Symposium for FREE until Jan. 3.
- * Badge & Tech Benefit & Awards Dinner included for FREE with paid Symposium registrations (not included in government reduced or free registration)

Who should attend:

Executives, key decision makers, and software developers from the public and private Federal/state/local/tribal IT community who are interested in information sharing and national standards.

Why attend:

- * Learn from prominent IT experts and practitioners in public safety, justice, and homeland security,
- * Develop valuable business contacts; and,
- * Explore the latest technologies, platforms, and opportunities.

OFFICER SAFETY

Penn Live: Pennsylvania police targeted by 'a monster' in Harrisburg terror attack lauded as heroes

Wedding guests were still arriving at St. Lawrence Chapel when Ahmed El-Mofty started firing gunshots into the air. Seconds after El-Mofty drove away from St. Lawrence, he drove toward the State Capitol Building, rounded a corner and shot several times at a Capitol Police car near Third and Walnut streets. One shot came "very close" to hitting the officer driving, but he was able to escape without injury, according to Dauphin County District Attorney Ed Marsico. About 30 minutes later, El-Mofty fired several shots at a Pennsylvania State Police trooper, who suffered minor injuries and was chased by the shooter more than a mile to Allison Hill. It was in that neighborhood of the city where El-Mofty used two handguns near the intersection of 17th and Mulberry streets to open fire on police. Officers returned fire, shooting and killing El-Mofty.

Chicago Tribune: In change to force rules, Chicago police discourage using Tasers on people who flee

The Chicago Police Department has tightened its policy on Taser use, rewriting the rules to discourage officers from shocking people who are running away or otherwise vulnerable to injury. The new policies face a challenge from the city's largest police union, which filed a complaint with the Illinois Labor Relations Board arguing that the department violated the union's collective bargaining rights by implementing new rules without negotiating. That challenge is pending.

TERRORISM

Associated Press: What can be done to prevent deadly car rammings?

A deadly attack this week in Melbourne, Australia, in which a man plowed an SUV into a crowd of Christmas shoppers comes from the same playbook used by terrorists in recent years around the globe. Many new vehicles rolling off car lots in the United States are equipped with technology that causes them to automatically stop if someone walks in their path. As more and more terrorists use vehicles to plow into crowds, the question has arisen in the auto industry: Can advances in technology thwart future attacks? And are there other ways to prevent the ubiquitous automobile from being used as a weapon?

WOMEN IN POLICING

South Florida Sun Sentinel: 5 female police chiefs in South Florida rise above the 'brass ceiling,' mirror national trend

South Florida, which suddenly has a cluster of female chiefs in the past 18 months, is mirroring a national trend. In 2017 alone, media reports show at least 18 new female police chiefs sworn in across the country - in cities like Dallas, Oakland and Honolulu and in smaller rural communities, too. Some say it's the new normal in policing - where only 13 percent of the workforce is female.

TECHNOLOGY

Popular Mechanics: The 2020 Olympics will be another glimpse into our surveillance-filled future

If you go to the Summer Olympics in Japan in 2020, you might be recognized by more than just your friends. According to The Japan Times, the organizers of the 2020 Olympics plan to use facial recognition software to track hundreds of thousands of athletes, journalists, and officials during the games, though a source told the paper that this tech won't be used on spectators. According to The Japan Times, many attendees, including athletes, media representatives, and Olympic officials and staff, will be issued photo IDs, and special cameras will check their faces at entrances to certain facilities. Facial recognition technology by NEC will be used to compare a person's face with their photo.

TERRORISM

McClatchy: What are the FBI's top domestic terrorism concerns for 2018?

Radicalized individuals - not teams of trained operatives - are the terror threats that most worry federal law enforcement agencies as the calendar turns to 2018. Combating them is challenging, since many give little indication they're planning an attack in the first place. FBI Director Christopher Wray has indicated the FBI considers the most pressing domestic terrorism threats to be homegrown violent extremists radicalized by ISIS and other radical Islamist groups, as well as lone wolf attackers who aren't connected to any other actors or groups. Cultists, "sovereign citizens" who don't believe government constraints apply to them and those motivated by racial animus are a lesser but persistent concern, according to the bureau.

ELECTRONIC CONTROL WEAPONS

San Francisco Examiner: Mayoral hopefuls split over whether to arm SFPD officers with Tasers

Candidates running for mayor in June after the sudden death of Ed Lee last week will likely have to take a stance on one of the most divisive issues in San Francisco - whether to arm police with stun guns. That's because the San Francisco Police Officers Association is gathering signatures to place a measure on the same ballot requiring the San Francisco Police Department to budget for the controversial electroshock devices, commonly known as Tasers. Potential mayoral candidates are already showing signs of policy differences on the issue.

POLICE EXECUTIVE APPOINTMENTS

Atlanta Journal-Constitution: Savannah police chief named DeKalb's new public safety leader

DeKalb County CEO Michael Thurmond on Friday announced that Joseph "Jack" H. Lumpkin will be the county's new public safety head. Lumpkin, who is chief of the Savannah-Chatham police department, replaces Cedric Alexander, who resigned earlier this year. In the role of the county's deputy chief operating officer of public safety, Lumpkin will be responsible for police, fire and rescue, animal control, emergency management, 911 and medical examiner services.

Wedding guests were still arriving at St. Lawrence Chapel when Ahmed El-Mofty started firing gunshots into the air. Seconds after El-Mofty drove away from St. Lawrence, he drove toward the State Capitol Building, rounded a corner and shot several times at a Capitol Police car near Third and Walnut streets. One shot came "very close" to hitting the officer driving, but he was able to escape without injury, according to Dauphin County District Attorney Ed Marsico. About 30 minutes later, El-Mofty fired several shots at a Pennsylvania State Police trooper, who suffered minor injuries and was chased by the shooter more than a mile to Allison Hill. It was in that neighborhood of the city where El-Mofty used two handguns near the intersection of 17th and Mulberry streets to open fire on police. Officers returned fire, shooting and killing El-Mofty.

<[The Chicago Police Department has tightened its policy on Taser use, rewriting the rules to discourage officers from shocking people who are running away or otherwise vulnerable to injury. <[A deadly attack this week in Melbourne, Australia, in which a man plowed an SUV into a crowd of Christmas shoppers comes from the same playbook used by terrorists in recent years around the globe. Many new vehicles rolling off car lots in the United States are equipped with technology that causes them to automatically stop if someone walks in their path. As more and more terrorists use vehicles to plow into crowds, the question has arisen in the auto industry: Can advances in technology thwart future attacks? And are there other ways to prevent the ubiquitous automobile from being used as a weapon?](http://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2BJso9e57TEQA-2FDTodiz1MRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2BRiONGy4Svt6s7ntmM0KH-2FGV6jcoXyVmpCwXiNz-2BVns2T8dCzRvoPwhwfi1TqutO_uuIJaiSyyMF3tUvgSwKhglN08jJHOhl9kXJLpwQrjDBvX5nq-2FDow5ojX4-2BB9q8BtZ9AJeamB6t7JnrX0qpsKl-2B2sMQMtBKMDibR-2BkCvE23EtwFmRXdXrBIvmtGdI-2FIEEAHkVYBxYbdBawf74qOkk8zKJWLvhXUvMWGon6iCTvixmS6F21RvX0SL14hh0RumlprTGM5gTxL9LChYa55pUxHE-2Bjc7bxpcg5-2FQN9hnKd2DK9p76DFtSkeo-2FpFBxYBS3diGSTnwYUocCxIlrcQ-2F9YSnWtLC8pbCBtDsNVtWAJ5LshZ-2BVWz1HRZC-2F5XHsO3aaGglZ9wDPMmb1QIjEmg-2B7aQ-3D-3D><div data-bbox=)

<[South Florida, which suddenly has a cluster of female chiefs in the past 18 months, is mirroring a national trend. In 2017 alone, media reports show at least 18 new female police chiefs sworn in across the country - in cities like Dallas, Oakland and Honolulu and in smaller rural communities, too. Some say it's the new normal in policing - where only 13 percent of the workforce is female.](http://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2BJso9e57TEQA-2FDTodiz1MRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2BRiONGy4Svt6s7ntmM0KH-2FGV6jcoXyVmpCwXiNz-2BVns3QTdaE8tLTKjTqpedcbsO-2F_uuIJaiSyyMF3tUvgSwKhglN08jJHOhl9kXJLpwQrjDBvX5nq-2FDow5ojX4-2BB9q8BtZ9AJeamB6t7JnrX0qpsKl-2B2sMQMtBKMDibR-2BkCvE23EtwFmRXdXrBIvmtGdI-2FIEEAHkVYBxYbdBawf74qOkk8zKJWLvhXUvMWGon6iCTvixmS6F21RvX0SL14hh0RumlecbrFr7eK-2BcbCWCw6hraLEMFfOhMq0-2FQAF3tiyZjNyw9z9yyWGRxRSosWUswH0ZclJh7Zobf1KXyI7iNzaBRIdfp1s12X341G2y4HN-2F6z3kAyL3TjleP49bD-2FTEL1SdAk8CZcgXqg51RVppYfLYa3A-3D-3D><div data-bbox=)

If you go to the Summer Olympics in Japan in 2020, you might be recognized by more than just your friends. According to The Japan Times, the organizers of the 2020 Olympics plan to use facial recognition software to track hundreds of thousands of athletes, journalists, and officials during the games, though a source told the paper that this tech won't be used on spectators. According to The Japan Times, many attendees, including athletes, media representatives, and Olympic officials and staff, will be issued photo IDs, and special cameras will check their faces at entrances to certain facilities. Facial recognition technology by NEC will be used to compare a person's face with their photo.

Radicalized individuals - not teams of trained operatives - are the terror threats that most worry federal law enforcement agencies as the calendar turns to 2018. Combating them is challenging, since many give little indication they're planning an attack in the first place. FBI Director Christopher Wray has indicated the FBI considers the most pressing domestic terrorism threats to be homegrown violent extremists radicalized by ISIS and other radical Islamist groups, as well as lone wolf attackers who aren't connected to any other actors or groups. Cultists, "sovereign citizens" who don't believe government constraints apply to them and those motivated by racial animus are a lesser but persistent concern, according to the bureau.

[Candidates running for mayor in June after the sudden death of Ed Lee last week will likely have to take a stance on one of the most divisive issues in San Francisco - whether to arm police with stun guns. That's because the San Francisco Police Officers Association is gathering signatures to place a measure on the same ballot requiring the San Francisco Police Department to budget for the controversial electroshock devices, commonly known as Tasers. Potential mayoral candidates are already showing signs of policy differences on the issue.](http://clicks.memberclicks-mail.net/wf/click?upn=j3dAOGmkEKUelBSHsKEm-2BJso9e57TEQA-2FDTodiz1MRd2muBLGPctTpSKHYt0xk9-2BRiONGy4Svt6s7ntmM0KH-2FGV6jcoXyVmpCwXiNz-2BVnS1BZOL87Z2ACgt1Y1EPGEhL uuIJaiSyymF3tUvgSwKhgln08jJHOHl9kXJLpwQrjDBvX5nq-2FDow5ojX4-2BB9q8BtZ9AJeamB6t7JnrX0qpsK1-2B2sMQMtBKMDibR-2BkCvE23EtwFmRXdXrBIvmtGdI-2FIEEAHkVYBxYbdBawf74qOkk8zKJWLvhXUvMWGon6iCTvixmS6F21RvX0SL14hh0Rum1Hx3u34IiMcyAIEHFuSAQ7INYq9fMP3jbtRuKvSFEQhtz23WEeUcyGqzXJl-2FbnY7VzGPPaaoawe2NqRsYZr7sfnsk-2FVvPolZAmIVAjoOd22hqclA3zbcTd8ZhHLn5IlDukkWL11OtYoIiFWsMn99L6Q-3D-3D><div data-bbox=)

DeKalb County CEO Michael Thurmond on Friday announced that Joseph "Jack" H. Lumpkin will be the county's new public safety head. Lumpkin, who is chief of the Savannah-Chatham police department, replaces Cedric Alexander, who resigned earlier this year. In the role of the county's deputy chief operating officer of public safety, Lumpkin will be responsible for police, fire and rescue, animal control, emergency management, 911 and medical examiner services.

The president lags his predecessors in filling posts that make government work.

strike on nuclear North Korea, yet President Trump still has not nominated an ambassador to Seoul.

Next Saturday brings the anniversary of the inauguration. Over the first year, a fixation on the chaos and churn inside the West Wing has often overshadowed the less-sexy decay and neglect at the departmental level. There are a striking number of big jobs that have not been filled.

The Washington Post and the Partnership for Public Service, a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization, have been working together to track the status of 626 top jobs in the executive branch. This includes assistant secretaries, chief financial officers, general counsels, heads of agencies, ambassadors and other leadership positions that experts believe are critical for the federal government to function effectively. These represent about half of the roughly 1,200 positions that require Senate confirmation.

The White House likes to blame Congress for dragging its feet, but that’s only part of the story: As of this morning, there is no pending nominee for 245 of the 626 jobs we’re tracking. Among them: deputy secretary at Treasury and Commerce, director of the Census, director of the ATF, director of the Office on Violence Against Women at Justice and commissioner of the Social Security Administration.

At Veterans Affairs, no one has been tapped to be the undersecretary for health or benefits.

At the Transportation Department, there is not a nominee to be administrator of the Federal Highway Administration, Federal Transit Administration or National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Trump has not submitted nominees to direct the National Park Service, Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service or the U.S. Geological Survey. He has also not picked someone to be assistant secretary of Interior for fish, wildlife and parks.

Many of these jobs have “acting” directors, but these people aren’t fully empowered and cannot indefinitely stay in these roles without being confirmed by the Senate because of laws related to vacancies. The lack of permanence creates uncertainty and makes strategic planning difficult. It also makes it harder to manage career staff, who are less likely to follow orders they disagree with when they realize that their boss is a short-timer.

“It’s pretty striking to see how many open positions there are all over the place,” said Max Stier, the president and chief executive of the Partnership for Public Service. “This administration is way behind prior presidents in actually staffing out the government. They still have a very long distance to travel.”

-- As you can see, no department has more unfilled slots than State. Rex Tillerson wanted to conduct a review of how the department worked before he filled all the open positions. He resisted some people that the White House wanted, and for a variety of other well-documented reasons he found himself on thin ice with the president.

As official Washington speculates about when "Rexit" will come, there are still no nominees for these 12 assistant secretary positions: African affairs; Near Eastern affairs; South Asian affairs; Western Hemisphere affairs; intelligence and research; political-military affairs; conflict and stabilization operations; democracy, human rights and labor; international narcotics and law enforcement; population, refugees and migration; energy resources; oceans and international, environmental and scientific affairs. The men and women who hold these jobs often wind up managing U.S. foreign policy in a day-to-day way.

The administration has also not nominated ambassadors to many major countries, from close allies like Australia to strategically important regional powers like Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Turkey. The most striking on the list, though, might be South Korea.

In the absence of a permanent ambassador, the top U.S. representative in Seoul right now is Marc Knapper, a veteran Foreign Service officer. "He's traveled to [North Korea] twice, speaks Korean, Japanese, and Vietnamese, and has worked on Chinese and Mongolian Affairs at the State Department," said State Department spokeswoman Heather Nauert. "He's served at the embassy in Seoul since 2015 and before that had done two previous tours in [South Korea], so I'm confident our diplomatic engagement in Korea is in good, solid hands."

Nauert added that there are highly qualified people on the job across the department. "We have a deep bench of experienced career professionals serving in key positions that are highly capable and able to help the Secretary lead the Department and advance U.S. interests worldwide," she wrote in an email. "The Department is working closely with the White House to identify qualified candidates for our vacant senior leadership positions."

Trump talks tax cuts, future of immigration reform

-- Trump has said he is intentionally leaving some of these positions open. During a November interview on Fox News

<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2b4/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/17/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>, conservative host Laura Ingraham expressed concern to the president about the unfilled positions: "Are you worried that the State Department doesn't have enough Donald Trump nominees in there to push your vision through?"

"We don't need all the people they want," Trump replied. "I'm a businessman, and I tell my people, 'When you don't need to fill slots, don't fill them.' But we have some people that I'm not happy with there. Let me tell you, the one that matters is me. I'm the only one that matters, because when it comes to it, that's what the policy is going to be."

He added that he's saving taxpayers money by not filling open jobs.

-- But there are a variety of additional explanations:

Trump did not think he was going to win, and he did not take transition planning seriously before the election. The historic level of first-year staff churn at the White House has slowed down the pipeline for approvals. A lot of highly qualified people with sterling credentials don't want to work for Trump <https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2b5/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/18/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>. Some who would be willing to go into the administration cannot get through the vetting process because they signed anti-Trump letters during the 2016 campaign.

"I think this administration isn't so much arrogant as uninformed," said Paul Light, a professor of public service at NYU and expert on government bureaucracy. "I think they want to grab the levers of power, no matter how much President Trump says he thinks there are too many people. I just don't think they understood the mechanics of all of this. ... They weren't very serious about governing, and it shows in this process."

Progressive activist Jeff Hauser, the executive director of the Revolving Door Project, which scrutinizes executive branch appointments, believes something more sinister is going on. He worries that the Trump team is trying to minimize accountability to Congress. He's especially concerned about the Internal Revenue Service, where a commissioner has not been named. The acting leader is an assistant secretary of the Treasury, who reports to Steven Mnuchin. Hauser said that this makes it harder for the IRS to function in its intended way, as an independent agency. He also fears that no director for the Census will be named, but that someone political who lacks required technical proficiency could be placed into a deputy slot that doesn't require Senate confirmation.

"Not all of this is part of a master plan," Hauser said. "Some of this is due to incompetence. Some of it is that there are positions of government they just don't value, so they'd like to see them erode. ... But there are other parts of it that are more problematic, where I think there's more intentionality."

-- A White House spokesman did not respond to a request for comment.

-- To be sure, the Senate is moving slower to confirm the people that Trump has named than it did for his predecessors. Eighty-five of the president's nominees have now been waiting more than 100 days to be confirmed. The average time it's taken to confirm those who have made it through is 72 days.

"The later you get into an administration, the more these become bargaining chips and the less there's an expectation that the Senate is going to move with dispatch," said Stier, who runs the Partnership for Public Service. "It's also the case that the Senate gets busy with other things."

A Canada lynx heads into the Rio Grande National Forest after being released near Creede, Colo. Experts say the animal could die off if President Trump gets his way and removes its threatened species status, which has been in place since 2000. (David Zalubowski/AP)

How Trump's ‘shithole’ comment matches with his past statements on immigrants

TRUMP'S “SHITHOLE” SLUR SCRAMBLES IMMIGRATION DEBATE:

, who first reported the explosive comments. “In addition, the president singled out Haiti, telling lawmakers that immigrants from that country must be left out of any deal. . . . ‘Why do we need more Haitians?’ Trump said. ‘Take them out.’”

-- Democrats are disgusted. “This is like throwing gasoline to the fire,” said Rep. Adriano Espaillat (D-N.Y.), an immigrant from the Dominican Republic. “It's not consistent with what the behavior of a president should be.” Sen. Richard Blumenthal (D-Conn.) described the comments as “the most odious and insidious racism masquerading poorly as immigration policy.” “We now know that we have in the White House someone who could lead the Ku Klux Klan in the United States of America, somebody who could be the leader of the neo-Nazi, and publish just his words,” pro-immigration lawmaker Rep. What does Trump want out of the negotiation on DACA?

-- The political impact: Trump's comments have already roiled the debate over "dreamers" and left any bipartisan solution more elusive. Ed O'Keefe, Erica Werner and Josh Dawsey report

: "The day began much differently, with rumors circulating on Capitol Hill that senators from both parties were close to an immigration deal. We 'have an agreement in principle. We're shopping it to our colleagues,' [Sen. Jeff Flake told reporters]. But the tentative plan from just six senators in a closely divided body of 100 immediately sparked fresh tensions over how Republicans should oversee the emotionally charged immigration debate. White House officials and top GOP Senate leaders insisted that no deal had been reached. [And] some lawmakers bridled at the notion that a small group of their colleagues, especially a group that does not include any immigration hard-liners, could come up with a deal and impose it on everyone else. . . . Sen. Tom Cotton (R-Ark), an immigration hard-liner . . . called the bipartisan plan 'unacceptable' because of how it deals with family-based migration policy and the diversity lottery. He also criticized the group's border security proposal, saying it 'doesn't give near enough resources to meet the president's demands.'"

TRUMP CAUSES FISA FRACAS:

-- The House voted to reauthorize Section 702 of FISA, decisively supporting the key NSA surveillance program despite a set of confusing and contradictory tweets sent by the president. Karoun Demirjian and Josh Dawsey report

: "The 256-to-164 vote sets up the legislation for consideration in the Senate, where leaders have said they think they can pass it before the program's statutory authorization expires on Jan. 19. But the fate of the program appeared to be in jeopardy Thursday morning, after the president tweeted his doubts about it . . . after seeing a segment about it on Fox News Channel." In a tweet, the president quoted a Fox headline from the segment verbatim

<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2d5/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/61/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab> and suggested the FISA law was used by the Obama administration to "so badly surveil and abuse the Trump Campaign."

-- Trump's uninformed tweet — suggesting he was no longer in favor of a bill his own White House was championing — set off a frantic, 101-minute scramble across Washington. Ashley Parker, Philip Rucker and Josh Dawsey report

: "[Paul Ryan] spent 30 minutes on the phone with the president explaining the differences between domestic and foreign surveillance, as many fellow Republicans reacted in disbelief and befuddlement. [John Kelly] also directly intervened with Trump, reiterating the program's importance before traveling to the Capitol, where he parried questions from confused lawmakers. A presidential correction came 101 minutes after the initial tweet. The second missive — an explanation perhaps as much for Trump himself as for anybody else — stated that 'today's vote is about foreign surveillance of foreign bad guys on foreign land.' 'We need it!' Trump concluded in his second Twitter message. 'Get smart!' The confusion — less than two hours in all . . . was a fresh reminder of how Trump's haphazard impulses can undermine his own administration and upend the daily workings of the federal government."

Trump's initial criticism of the surveillance program also "freaked out" House Republican leaders: "In Thursday morning's meeting of House Republicans, lawmakers reacted with palpable consternation to Trump's initial tweet. . . . The anxiety continued until House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy (R-Calif.) stood up and handed his cellphone to Rep. Devin Nunes (R-Calif.), who read aloud the president's second tweet voicing support for the bill."

TRUMP’S AGENDA:

-- Six Republican senators warned Trump last week that withdrawing from NAFTA would endanger stock prices that have soared since his election, a message they thought would resonate better than an economic argument against protectionism. David J. Lynch and Damian Paletta report
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2db/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/68/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: “[NAFTA] talks, which will resume later this month in Montreal, have been stalled over U.S. demands for significant concessions from Mexico and Canada. The impasse has prompted treaty proponents to search with growing urgency for any argument that might sway the president, leading to the new emphasis on finance. On Wednesday, pro-NAFTA forces looked prescient when an errant wire service report that Canada thought a U.S. pullout was imminent erased more than $2 billion from General Motors’ value in less than 90 minutes. A second executive ... said treaty supporters are [also] arguing that pulling out of NAFTA would neutralize the economic gains that the administration anticipates from the recent $1.5 trillion tax cut.”

During his Wall Street Journal interview
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2dc/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/69/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab> yesterday, Trump said of NAFTA negotiations, “We’ve made a lot of headway. We’re moving along nicely.” But he added, “If we don’t make the right deal, I will terminate NAFTA, OK.” Trump even suggested NAFTA may provide a back-door means of making Mexico pay for a border wall. “We make a good deal on NAFTA, and, say, I’m going to take a small percentage of that money and it’s going toward the wall. Guess what? Mexico’s paying,” Trump said

-- Today is Trump’s deadline to make a decision on sanctions against Iran, and he’s expected to once again waive them, staying the course on the nuclear deal. Anne Gearan and Carol Morello report
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2dd/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/71/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: “The administration said Thursday that it plans additional sanctions that are separate from those covered under the international nuclear deal with Iran, an indication that Trump is unlikely to break it now, despite his opposition. Trump’s top national security advisers met with him Thursday at the White House. Announcement of the decision was expected Friday morning. ... ‘I am expecting new sanctions on Iran,’ Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin told reporters Thursday. ‘We continue to look at them, we’ve rolled them out, and you can expect there will be more sanctions coming.’”

-- The IRS’s rushed attempt to implement new guidelines for the GOP tax bill will require million of Americans to use an online calculator to ensure the accuracy of their paychecks. Damian Paletta reports <https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2de/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/72/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: “The guidelines are necessary for businesses to calculate how much to withhold in taxes from employees’ paychecks beginning as soon as next month. ... In rushing the process, the Treasury Department is asking companies to rely on outdated forms to help determine how much to withhold. ... If they find their paychecks are inaccurate, it will be incumbent on the employees to tell their employers to make corrections.”

-- An early draft of Trump’s Nuclear Posture Review suggests he wants to add more nukes to the United States’ arsenal. HuffPost’s Ashley Feinberg reports
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2df/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/73/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: “[The report calls] for the development of new, so-called low-yield nuclear weapons — warheads with a lower explosive force. The logic of those pushing for the development of smaller nukes is that our current nuclear weapons are too big and too deadly to ever use; we are effectively self-deterred, and the world knows it. To make sure other countries believe that we’d actually use nuclear force, the thinking goes, we need more low-yield nukes.” Read the full report here

-- The State Department attempted to distance itself from anti-Muslim remarks made by Pete Hoekstra, Trump’s new ambassador to the Netherlands, in 2015. Eli Rosenberg reports
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2e1/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/75/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: “During a news conference at the State Department’s headquarters in Washington, Undersecretary Steve Goldstein told reporters that [Hoekstra] had ‘made comments that should not have been made’ when asked about Hoekstra’s statements about Muslim no-go zones and people being burned alive because of the Islamic movement. ... Still, Goldstein refused to label Hoekstra’s comments inaccurate despite being pressed by reporters at the briefing.”

-- A fourth pregnant immigrant teen in U.S. custody has requested permission to receive an abortion. Ann E. Marimow reports
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2e2/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/76/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: “The latest court filing says the fourth teen, identified only as Jane Moe, requested an abortion about two weeks ago but has not been allowed to end her pregnancy and instead was required to visit an antiabortion crisis pregnancy center. ... The teen’s attorneys say she is being asked to disclose her pregnancy to her parents and ‘fears retaliation because she has requested an abortion, and she does not want her family or others to know.’”

MIDTERMS:

-- The GOP suffered another big recruiting setback: Rep. Kevin Cramer (R-N.D.) announced he won’t run for Senate — bucking both party leaders and Trump, who extensively courted him and went so far as to call his wife to make the pitch. Sean Sullivan and Josh Dawsey report
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2e3/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/77/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: “Cramer’s decision ... followed other recruiting letdowns for Trump and [Mitch McConnell] in deeply conservative states where Republicans are hoping to unseat Democratic senators and pad their 51-49 majority. At the beginning of 2017 ... Republicans were optimistic about increasing their Senate majority. ... But attracting top candidates in key Senate races has been an ongoing struggle for a party facing strong political headwinds. ... In Montana, Wisconsin, Michigan and now North Dakota ... top Republicans have passed on the Senate contest to pursue other opportunities.”

-- Trump will travel next week to southwestern Pennsylvania, where Republicans fear they could suffer another embarrassing special election defeat. Politico’s Alex Isenstadt reports
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2e4/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJIYXJkb25AcmV2ZXJlcG9saWNILm9yZw%3D%3D/78/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: “After a humiliating loss in the Alabama Senate race last month, the administration is drawing up ambitious plans that will kick off next Thursday when Trump travels to the conservative district to appear with Republican candidate Rick Saccone. Vice President Mike Pence and an assortment of Cabinet officials are also expected to make trips;

Pence may go twice ahead of the March 13 special election[...] [Trump's] involvement underscores the high stakes confronting the administration as it approaches a midterm election in which the party's hold on the House majority is in grave danger. A loss in the working class Pennsylvania district, which the president won by 20 percentage points, would show that few GOP seats are safe."

-- Rep. Darrell Issa (R-Calif.), who announced this week he would not seek reelection, is considering running in his neighboring district. The Hill's Scott Wong and Katie Bo Williams report
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2e5/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJlYXJkb25AcMv2ZXJlcG9saWNlIm9yZw%3D%3D/79/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: "[Issa] has been discussing with colleagues the possibility of running in a neighboring San Diego district if embattled Rep. Duncan Hunter (R-Calif.) resigns, multiple sources told The Hill. Some of these discussions happened as recently as Wednesday, the day Issa announced he would not be running for reelection in his coastal Southern California district after 17 years in the House. ... Hunter, who has been dogged by federal and congressional ethics investigations, said he would not put it past Issa to seek his seat if something bad were to happen to him. ... Hunter's seat, east of Issa's, is more conservative and would be easier for Republicans to hang on to."

THERE'S A BEAR IN THE WOODS:

-- Steve Bannon has hired prominent D.C.-area attorney William Burck to represent him as he prepares to testify before the House Intelligence Committee in its ongoing Russia investigation. Rosalind S. Helderman reports
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2e6/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJlYXJkb25AcMv2ZXJlcG9saWNlIm9yZw%3D%3D/80/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: "Bannon had previously insisted that he did not need a lawyer because he had not been drawn into the multiple [Russia probes]. But in recent weeks, the House intelligence panel made a request that Bannon testify before the committee. Burck ... is also representing other key members of Trump's campaign and White House staff, including [Reince Priebus and Donald McGahn]. The person familiar with the arrangement said Burck's representation is limited to congressional testimony and does not include preparing Bannon to speak to [Robert Mueller]. It also covers only Bannon's role on Trump's campaign, as opposed to events that occurred during the presidential transition or [during Bannon's White House tenure]."

-- Close Trump advisers and allies are urging him not to sit for an interview with Mueller — with some expressing skepticism that it made sense in any circumstance for the president to voluntarily submit to a sit-down. CNN's Kara Scannell, Pamela Brown, Manu Raju, Gloria Borger and Dana Bash report
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2e7/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJlYXJkb25AcMv2ZXJlcG9saWNlIm9yZw%3D%3D/81/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: "Some key allies on Capitol Hill also are urging Trump to avoid potential political and legal jeopardy and not answer questions from Mueller. They are part of a group of supporters ranging from lawyers on the Trump team and in the White House orbit to friends who say it would be unwise for the President to talk. Others say Trump should find a way to cooperate that limits his potential legal exposure. ... The lawyers' decision will be influenced by what topics Mueller wants to question Trump about and whether the information can be obtained elsewhere, sources familiar with their thinking say."

-- The top Democrat on the House Intelligence Committee blamed Chairman Devin Nunes (R-Calif.) and Paul Ryan for impeding the panel's Russia probe. Karoun Demirjian reports
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2e8/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJlYXJkb25AcMv2ZXJlcG9saWNlIm9yZw%3D%3D/82/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: "[Rep. Adam B. Schiff (D-Calif.)] complained that Republicans were unwilling to press those members of the Trump team who participated in a June 2016 meeting in Trump Tower for a complete record of their communications over email, telephone, and encrypted applications. ... According to two people with knowledge of the materials, the phone records Trump Jr. turned over to the panel were heavily redacted."

Missouri governor admits to extramarital affair, denies blackmail

MEN BEHAVING BADLY:

-- A St. Louis prosecutor plans to investigate Missouri Gov. Eric Greitens (R) over allegations that he threatened to blackmail a woman with whom he had an extramarital affair. Fred Barbash reports <https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2ea/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJlYXJkb25AcMv2ZXJlcG9saWNlIm9yZw%3D%3D/84/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: "The serious allegations against Greitens 'are very troubling,' said St. Louis Circuit Attorney Kimberly Gardner in a statement. 'After further consideration, I have decided to launch a formal investigation into the alleged actions of Governor Greitens.' ... [Greitens's] lawyer, James F. Bennett, responded to the prosecutor's statement Thursday, saying the 'governor is very confident he will be cleared in any investigation.'" The lawyer issued an earlier statement denying that his client made any threats of blackmail.

: "The Morgan Stanley officials briefed on the process say that amid a national outcry over sexual harassment, the bank had little choice but to fire [Harold Ford Jr.] after it learned of the allegation. Even though the harassment charge was never corroborated, they said, the bank found evidence that Mr. Ford had misled executives about some of his behavior, which itself constituted cause to remove him. ... Mr. Ford and his lawyer say there's a different explanation: that Morgan Stanley used the journalist's allegations as a pretext to fire him simply because he was disliked internally."

-- Five women have accused James Franco of inappropriate or "sexually exploitative" behavior — four of whom were students of the 39-year-old actor, and another who said she considered him a mentor. The LA Times's Daniel Miller and Amy Kaufman report
<https://s2.washingtonpost.com/2fa2ec/5a58b999fe1ff6657b1b700c/dHJlYXJkb25AcMv2ZXJlcG9saWNlIm9yZw%3D%3D/86/143/b16b7aa0684c75e9398c03c652c596ab>
: "In some cases, [the women] said they believed Franco could offer them career advancement, and acquiesced to his wishes even when they were uncomfortable. Before opening Studio 4, Franco taught at Playhouse West in North Hollywood — a school where he'd received training as an actor. Two of his former students there said he put female students in uncomfortable situations beyond the normal parameters of acting class ... and described what they considered to be an unprofessional and hostile shoot at a strip club. Midway through filming, Dusome said Franco approached the actresses — who wore masks and lingerie — and asked, 'So, who wants to take your shirt off?' When no actresses volunteered, Franco stormed off.]"

-- Some women lawmakers plan to bring activists involved in the sexual harassment debate as their guests to the State of the Union. Elise Viebeck reports

: "Rep. Brenda Lawrence (D-Mich.) plans to bring as her guest Danielle McGuire, a historian and author who has written about Recy Taylor, a black woman in Abbeville, Ala., who was raped by six white men in 1944. ... Women of the Congressional Black Caucus plan to wear red pins as a tribute to Taylor, according to a Lawrence spokeswoman. Rep. Jackie Speier (D-Calif.), one of the House's most vocal supporters of improving the reporting and mediation process for workplace complaints, invited civil rights activist Tarana Burke. Burke is known for launching the 'me too' movement against sexual harassment and assault."

AN MLK SPEECH TO REMEMBER:

-- Programming note: In observance of the Martin Luther King Jr. federal holiday, The Daily 202 will not publish on Monday.

-- Because of the Alabama special Senate election, I've spent a fair amount of time reading up on the Birmingham church bombing in recent months. As a U.S. attorney in the 1990s, Sen. Doug Jones (D-Ala.) successfully prosecuted two members of the Ku Klux Klan for their role in the notorious 1963 blast that killed four black girls.

-- Dr. King delivered a eulogy at their funeral. It's not one of his most famous speeches, but it ought to be. Here's an excerpt that I've found particularly inspiring and resonant:

"These children—unoffending, innocent, and beautiful—were the victims of one of the most vicious and tragic crimes ever perpetrated against humanity. And yet they died nobly. They are the martyred heroines of a holy crusade for freedom and human dignity. And so this afternoon in a real sense they have something to say to each of us in their death. They have something to say to every minister of the gospel who has remained silent behind the safe security of stained-glass windows. They have something to say to every politician who has fed his constituents with the stale bread of hatred and the spoiled meat of racism. They have something to say to a federal government that has compromised with the undemocratic practices of southern Dixiecrats and the blatant hypocrisy of right-wing northern Republicans. They have something to say to every Negro who has passively accepted the evil system of segregation and who has stood on the sidelines in a mighty struggle for justice. They say to each of us, black and white alike, that we must substitute courage for caution. They say to us that we must be concerned not merely about who murdered them, but about the system, the way of life, the philosophy which produced the murderers. Their death says to us that we must work passionately and unrelentingly for the realization of the American dream...

"And so, my friends, they did not die in vain. God still has a way of wringing good out of evil. And history has proven over and over again that unmerited suffering is redemptive. The innocent blood of these little girls may well serve as a redemptive force that will bring new light to this dark city. The holy Scripture says, 'A little child shall lead them.' ... And so I stand here to say this afternoon to all assembled here, that in spite of the darkness of this hour, we must not despair. We must not become bitter, nor must we harbor the desire to retaliate with violence. No, we must not lose faith in our white brothers. Somehow, we must believe that the most misguided among them can learn to respect the dignity and the worth of all human personality."

The government of Botswana sought official clarification on whether Trump regarded the country as a "shithole:"
