Deputy Chief Cheetham-

Good morning, I hope all is well in Springfield today. My name is Randall Richardson and I work for PoliceOne Academy here in Plano, Texas. I was a Police Officer for over ten years in Minnesota and Oklahoma. I just tried to call you but was advised that you were in the middle of a press conference at the time.

Last week you came by the PoliceOne booth at IACP in San Diego and spoke with some of our folks there. My Director, Nicole Forzano, wanted me to reach out to you and send you some information regarding our online training. I have attached a list of current subscribers throughout the U.S. and a few abroad that are using us right now for continuing education.

If you have a moment, I would love to find out what you all have in place right now for online training for your officers and how we can possible enhance the training for you. Please do not hesitate to call or email me with any questions.

Stay Safe!

Randall

Stay Safe and Semper Fidelis,

Randall

ACTIVE SHOOTER

FULL-LENGTH COURSES

Active Shooter: Phases and Prevention

1 HOUR

By recognizing the signs exhibited in the past by perpetrators of active shooter incidents, you will be better prepared to prevent tragedy and loss of life before an attack is made. This course covers common motives and patterns of behavior.

Videos in this course include:

- Active Shooter vs Barricade Situations
- The Five Phases of an Active Shooter

Active Shooter: Recognition and Basic Response

1 HOUR

The hotel attacks in Mumbai illustrate a scenario with multiple simultaneous shooters. When planning your response, every incident must be treated with the "Rule of Plus One," meaning if you've found and neutralized one shooter you must search for additional shooters until the location has been secured.

Videos in this course include:

- Active Shooter Response
- Active Shooters in our Schools

Ambush Awareness and Preparation

1 HOUR

This course will educate officers on the threat of ambushes and create awareness of this important issue. It provides an in-depth overview of the topic and offers a comprehensive case study and analysis of Lakewood, Washington incident where four officers lost their lives. In addition, this course outlines a firearms training drill that officers can use right now to prepare for possible attacks.

Videos in this course include:

- Preparing for an Ambush
- The Legacy of the Lakewood Four
- 360 Firearm Drills
- Restaurant Safety for Police Officers

Law Enforcement Response to Active Shooter Incident

ENVIRONMENTAL CRIMES

● VIDEO BLOCKS

Environmental Crimes 1

1 HOUR

Since the states and federal government first began prosecuting environmental crimes more than 25 years ago, the nature of the cases they have investigated and prosecuted has changed dramatically. Over the past 25 years, the states and Congress have enacted tougher, more comprehensive environmental crimes statutes and devoted greater resources to fighting environmental crime. The enactment of new laws and creative use of existing and new resources, through initiatives such as community environmental policing, allow law enforcement to respond to these new challenges.

Constitutional Law

1 HOUR

Up until 1776, Americans lived in colonies ruled by England. The Declaration of Independence was written to unite the thirteen colonies in order to go against the British Crown. The Articles of Confederation were written in 1781 to create a central government over the thirteen states. However, it was quickly realized that the document needed to be amended to give the central government more power. In May 1787, the authors of the Articles of Confederation began working on creating a new document, the United States Constitution. This one-hour course will educate you on the Constitution and Constitutional law.

Body-Worn Cameras For Law Enforcement

2 HOURS

Deployment of body-worn camera systems (BWCs) by law enforcement offers advantages in keeping officers safe and providing evidence for trial. Without technical and operational standards in place, departments lack adequate information to select the system that meets their requirements and courtroom standards. To mitigate the lack of standards, the National Institute of Justice Sensor, Surveillance, and Biometric Technologies Center of Excellence prepared an aid in the use of BWCs in law enforcement. This course reviews evidence on BWCs and provides a comprehensive resource to help agencies make informed decisions regarding BWC adoption.

Videos in this course include:

- A day in the life of Toronto police and body-worn cameras
- Body worn police cameras in Southern California cut complaints
- Police body camera footage
- Tucson police testing body-worn cameras

Implementing a Body-Worn Camera Program

2 HOURS

A police department that deploys body-worn cameras is making a statement that it believes the actions of its officers are a matter of public record. By facing the challenges and expense of purchasing and implementing a body-worn camera system — and developing policies and training its officers in how to use the cameras — a department creates a reasonable expectation that members of the public and the news media will want to review the actions of officers. And with certain limited exceptions that this course will discuss, body-worn camera video footage should be made available to the public upon request — not only because the videos are public records but also because doing so enables police departments to demonstrate transparency and openness in their interactions with members of the community. This two hour course is intended to serve as a guide to the thoughtful, careful considerations that police departments should undertake if they wish to adopt body-worn cameras.

Videos in this course include:

- Segment one -Overview of FWPDP
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Two - Deciding Factors
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Four - Storage
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Three - The Benefits
- Segment Five - Policy and Development

Social Media and Law Enforcement

1 HOUR

A robust and comprehensive policy is not in place to extensively cover social media usage for police departments. Some issues departments face regarding social media are legal rights, civil rights, and privacy rights. These issues are still being discussed in the courts. It is beneficial for police officers to successfully monitor social media in order to gain information about threats of criminal activity. This one-hour course will look over the ways social media can be used in law enforcement.

Videos in this course include:

- Law enforcement using social media
- 3 Social Media Tools for Cops
- Social media makes reporting crimes easier

What Is Domestic Violence? Defining Domestic Violence

2 HOURS

Domestic disputes are some of the most common calls for police officers. Many domestic disputes do not involve violence; this course discusses those that do, as well as the measures that can be used to reduce them. Domestic violence calls can be challenging for police as they are likely to observe repetitive abuse against the same victims, who may not want to or be able to part from their abusers. These calls are treated as dangerous, partly because old research exaggerated risks to police. This two-hour course begins by describing the problem of domestic violence and reviewing factors that increase its risks. It then identifies a series of questions to help you analyze your local domestic violence problem. Finally, it reviews responses to the problem and what is known about these from evaluative research and police practice.

Officer Liability

2 HOURS

Law enforcement work is dangerous — plain and simple. Law enforcement officers have constant contact with the public. It is often confrontational and charged with emotion. And in these circumstances, they are responsible for preventing and investigating crimes that might include violations of civil rights. Both the Constitution and federal laws protect individuals against unjustified violation of their civil rights by law enforcement officers. Sexual Harassment In The Workplace

1 HOUR

According to the EEOC, sexual harassment charges are now the fourth most frequently alleged discrimination issue, and the number of cases continues to steadily climb at a rate of 12 to 13 percent each year. Employers are responsible for offering a safe and secure work environment for their staff. This is why it is important for employees to be trained regarding the identification and proper handling of sexual harassment issues in the workplace. Employees who are educated in recognizing harassment not only contribute to creating a safe and secure workplace for themselves and their co-workers, but prevent dealing with the negative effects that follow. This two-hour course will better inform you about sexual harassment and how to prevent it in order to create a safe and comfortable working environment for both yourself and your co-workers.

Distracted Driving For Law Enforcement

4 HOURS

In order for a police officer to get to a call safely, he or she must be able to drive without obstructions and distractions. While driving, police officers often need to use radios and Mobile Data Terminals (MDTs) while operating emergency lights and sirens, not to mention the simultaneous use of cell phones. Distracted driving is a growing phenomenon among police officers in the United States and the impairments associated with completing their job duties while driving can be as profound as those associated with driving while drunk. This 4 hour course provides the necessary training to educate law enforcement officers and departments about the dangers and consequences of distracted driving.

Distracted Driving: Understanding The Distracted Brain

2 HOURS

Vision is the most important sense for safe driving. However, drivers using hands-free phones (and those using handheld phones) have a tendency to "look at" but not "see" objects. Estimates indicate that drivers using cell phones look but fail to see up to 50 percent of the information in their driving environment. Distracted drivers experience what researchers call inattention blindness, similar to that of tunnel vision. Drivers are looking out the windshield, but they do not process everything in the roadway environment that they must know to effectively monitor their surroundings, seek and identify potential hazards, and respond to unexpected situations. This two-hour course provides the necessary training to educate employees and employers about the dangers and consequences of distracted driving.

Videos in this course include:

- Understanding The Distracted Brain
- The X Man
- A Letter from Martin
- Our Sister Debbie
- Reaching for the Stars

Deputy Chief Cheetham-

Good morning, I hope all is well in Springfield today. My name is Randall Richardson and I work for PoliceOne Academy here in Plano, Texas. I was a Police Officer for over ten years in Minnesota and Oklahoma. I just tried to call you but was advised that you were in the middle of a press conference at the time.

Last week you came by the PoliceOne booth at IACP in San Diego and spoke with some of our folks there. My Director, Nicole Forzano, wanted me to reach out to you and send you some information regarding our online training. I have attached a list of current subscribers throughout the U.S. and a few abroad that are using us right now for continuing education.

If you have a moment, I would love to find out what you all have in place right now for online training for your officers and how we can possible enhance the training for you. Please do not hesitate to call or email me with any questions.

Stay Safe!

Randall

Stay Safe and Semper Fidelis,

Randall

ACTIVE SHOOTER

■ FULL-LENGTH COURSES

Active Shooter: Phases and Prevention

1 HOUR

By recognizing the signs exhibited in the past by perpetrators of active shooter incidents, you will be better prepared to prevent tragedy and loss of life before an attack is made. This course covers common motives and patterns of behavior.

Videos in this course include:

- Active Shooter vs Barricade Situations
- The Five Phases of an Active Shooter

Active Shooter: Recognition and Basic Response

1 HOUR

The hotel attacks in Mumbai illustrate a scenario with multiple simultaneous shooters. When planning your response, every incident must be treated with the "Rule of Plus One," meaning if you've found and neutralized one shooter you must search for additional shooters until the location has been secured.

Videos in this course include:

- Active Shooter Response
- Active Shooters in our Schools

Ambush Awareness and Preparation

1 HOUR

This course will educate officers on the threat of ambushes and create awareness of this important issue. It provides an in-depth overview of the topic and offers a comprehensive case study and analysis of Lakewood, Washington incident where four officers lost their lives. In addition, this course outlines a firearms training drill that officers can use right now to prepare for possible attacks.

Videos in this course include:

- Preparing for an Ambush
- The Legacy of the Lakewood Four
- 360 Firearm Drills
- Restaurant Safety for Police Officers

Law Enforcement Response to Active Shooter Incident

CULTURAL AWARENESS

■ FULL-LENGTH COURSES

Anti-Bias Training For Law Enforcement

1 HOUR

Certain geographic areas are statistically more accepting of different races and cultures than others. In the past, law enforcement in some areas of the country had a reputation of having a racial bias. While much about society is different, both parties — citizens and law enforcement — can still have thoughts that reflect historical perspective. This course will equip officers to address racial problems and ensure the community understands their professionalism.

Videos in this course include:

- How deeply rooted biases affect how police enforce the law

Responding to People with Mental Illness

2 HOURS

There is a high chance that police officers will encounter a person with a severe mental illness at some point. 5% of the US population has a severe mental illness. By understanding how to approach different situations involving a person with a mental illness, the outcomes will be more positive. Police officers have a tendency to act quickly and violently towards a person with mental illness, when that may not be the best solution. The majority of the time, non-lethal approaches lead to the best solutions. This two-hour course will give you the skills needed to approach a situation involving a person with mental illness.

Constitutional Law

1 HOUR

Up until 1776, Americans lived in colonies ruled by England. The Declaration of Independence was written to unite the thirteen colonies in order to go against the British Crown. The Articles of Confederation were written in 1781 to create a central government over the thirteen states. However, it was quickly realized that the document needed to be amended to give the central government more power. In May 1787, the authors of the Articles of Confederation began working on creating a new document, the United States Constitution. This one-hour course will educate you on the Constitution and Constitutional law.

Body-Worn Cameras For Law Enforcement

2 HOURS

Deployment of body-worn camera systems (BWCs) by law enforcement offers advantages in keeping officers safe and providing evidence for trial. Without technical and operational standards in place, departments lack adequate information to select the system that meets their requirements and courtroom standards. To mitigate the lack of standards, the National Institute of Justice Sensor, Surveillance, and Biometric Technologies Center of Excellence prepared an aid in the use of BWCs in law enforcement. This course reviews evidence on BWCs and provides a comprehensive resource to help agencies make informed decisions regarding BWC adoption.

Videos in this course include:

- A day in the life of Toronto police and body-worn cameras
- Body worn police cameras in Southern California cut complaints
- Police body camera footage
- Tucson police testing body-worn cameras
- Body worn cameras-A practical demo with Sgt. Sikes

- Johnston Police Department Body-Worn Cameras
- Body worn cameras-Officer Garwacki
- Police Officers Increase Body Camera Use

Implementing a Body-Worn Camera Program

2 HOURS

A police department that deploys body-worn cameras is making a statement that it believes the actions of its officers are a matter of public record. By facing the challenges and expense of purchasing and implementing a body-worn camera system — and developing policies and training its officers in how to use the cameras — a department creates a reasonable expectation that members of the public and the news media will want to review the actions of officers. And with certain limited exceptions that this course will discuss, body-worn camera video footage should be made available to the public upon request — not only because the videos are public records but also because doing so enables police departments to demonstrate transparency and openness in their interactions with members of the community. This two hour course is intended to serve as a guide to the thoughtful, careful considerations that police departments should undertake if they wish to adopt body-worn cameras.

Videos in this course include:

- Segment one -Overview of FWPDP
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Two - Deciding Factors
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Four - Storage
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Three - The Benefits
- Segment Five - Policy and Development
- Segment Six - Some Insights on BWC

Social Media and Law Enforcement

1 HOUR

A robust and comprehensive policy is not in place to extensively cover social media usage for police departments. Some issues departments face regarding social media are legal rights, civil rights, and privacy rights. These issues are still being discussed in the courts. It is beneficial for police officers to successfully monitor social media in order to gain information about threats of criminal activity. This one-hour course will look over the ways social media can be used in law enforcement.

Videos in this course include:

- Law enforcement using social media
- 3 Social Media Tools for Cops
- Social media makes reporting crimes easier
- SNN: Local law enforcement is using social media in a new and helpful way

What Is Domestic Violence? Defining Domestic Violence

2 HOURS

Domestic disputes are some of the most common calls for police officers. Many domestic disputes do not involve violence; this course discusses those that do, as well as the measures that can be used to reduce them. Domestic violence calls can be challenging for police as they are likely to observe repetitive abuse against the same victims, who may not want to or be able to part from their abusers. These calls are treated as dangerous, partly because old research exaggerated risks to police. This two-hour course begins by describing the problem of domestic violence and reviewing factors that increase its risks. It then identifies a series of questions to help you analyze your local domestic violence problem. Finally, it reviews responses to the problem and what is known about these from evaluative research and police practice.

1 HOUR

According to the EEOC, sexual harassment charges are now the fourth most frequently alleged discrimination issue, and the number of cases continues to steadily climb at a rate of 12 to 13 percent each year. Employers are responsible for offering a safe and secure work environment for their staff. This is why it is important for employees to be trained regarding the identification and proper handling of sexual harassment issues in the workplace. Employees who are educated in recognizing harassment not only contribute to creating a safe and secure workplace for themselves and their co-workers, but prevent dealing with the negative effects that follow. This two-hour course will better inform you about sexual harassment and how to prevent it in order to create a safe and comfortable working environment for both yourself and your co-workers.

State & Legislative Update (3183 - Texas only)

3 HOURS

This material is a general summary of selected court cases and changes to Texas' criminal law as wrought by the 83rd session of the Texas Legislature. This is not an all-inclusive recitation of every change, nor is it intended as legal advice. Instructors and students must verify all legislative changes and case law holdings discussed herein and are responsible for appropriate implementation of these changes. The following are merely summaries of legislative changes and cases, there is simply no substitute, for both instructors and students, to read the actual statutes, legislative acts, and cases.

State & Legislative Update (3184 - Texas only)

Distracted Driving For Law Enforcement

4 HOURS

In order for a police officer to get to a call safely, he or she must be able to drive without obstructions and distractions. While driving, police officers often need to use radios and Mobile Data Terminals (MDTs) while operating emergency lights and sirens, not to mention the simultaneous use of cell phones. Distracted driving is a growing phenomenon among police officers in the United States and the impairments associated with completing their job duties while driving can be as profound as those associated with driving while drunk. This 4 hour course provides the necessary training to educate law enforcement officers and departments about the dangers and consequences of distracted driving.

Videos in this course include:

- Did You Know? - "Distracted"

Distracted Driving: Understanding The Distracted Brain

2 HOURS

Vision is the most important sense for safe driving. However, drivers using hands-free phones (and those using handheld phones) have a tendency to "look at" but not "see" objects. Estimates indicate that drivers using cell phones look but fail to see up to 50 percent of the information in their driving environment. Distracted drivers experience what researchers call inattention blindness, similar to that of tunnel vision. Drivers are looking out the windshield, but they do not process everything in the roadway environment that they must know to effectively monitor their surroundings, seek and identify potential hazards, and respond to unexpected situations. This two-hour course provides the necessary training to educate employees and employers about the dangers and consequences of distracted driving.

Videos in this course include:

- Understanding The Distracted Brain
- The X Man
- A Letter from Martin
- Our Sister Debbie
- Reaching for the Stars
- Voices from the Heartland

Deputy Chief Cheetham-

Good morning, I hope all is well in Springfield today. My name is Randall Richardson and I work for PoliceOne Academy here in Plano, Texas. I was a Police Officer for over ten years in Minnesota and Oklahoma. I just tried to call you but was advised that you were in the middle of a press conference at the time.

Last week you came by the PoliceOne booth at IACP in San Diego and spoke with some of our folks there. My Director, Nicole Forzano, wanted me to reach out to you and send you some information regarding our online training. I have attached a list of current subscribers throughout the U.S. and a few abroad that are using us right now for continuing education.

If you have a moment, I would love to find out what you all have in place right now for online training for your officers and how we can possibly enhance the training for you. Please do not hesitate to call or email me with any questions.

Stay Safe!

Randall

Stay Safe and Semper Fidelis,

Randall

Deputy Chief Cheetham-

Good morning, I hope all is well in Springfield today. My name is Randall Richardson and I work for PoliceOne Academy here in Plano, Texas. I was a Police Officer for over ten years in Minnesota and Oklahoma. I just tried to call you but was advised that you were in the middle of a press conference at the time.

Last week you came by the PoliceOne booth at IACP in San Diego and spoke with some of our folks there. My Director, Nicole Forzano, wanted me to reach out to you and send you some information regarding our online training. I have attached a list of current subscribers throughout the U.S. and a few abroad that are using us right now for continuing education.

If you have a moment, I would love to find out what you all have in place right now for online training for your officers and how we can possible enhance the training for you. Please do not hesitate to call or email me with any questions.

Stay Safe!

Randall

Stay Safe and Semper Fidelis,

Randall

Sequoiah County 911
Center

Created by
CJIS GROUP
Researcher:
Michelle

"The Center is a PSAP only staffed with 2 positions and 1 standby position. Being a smaller agency, the Center must consider costs, funding, and the potential for upgrades when acquiring new equipment."

- David Slaughter, 911 Coordinator, Sequoyah County 911 Center

Demographic Information:

Sequoyah County has a 2009 estimated population of 41,433 and covers a land area of 673 square miles. The City of Sallisaw has a population of 8,880 and occupies 13.28 square miles.

Funding Information:

The Sequoyah County 911 Center is funded through the general budget.

Procurement Information:

The Sequoyah County 911 Center uses sole-source, state contract and competitive bidding methods to procure technology. Solicitations are advertised on the City of Sallisaw Purchasing Web site.

'No evidence' of huge mall brawl link as police chase leads following rash of fights

A day after at least 15 large fights or disturbances that broke out at malls around the country, police were chasing leads and trying to determine what, if any, role social media may have played in the alarming rash of violence.

Amazon refuses to let police access US murder suspect's Echo recordings

Amazon has refused to hand over recordings from an Echo smart speaker to US police investigating a murder in Arkansas, according to court records seen by tech industry news site The Information. Arkansas police issued a warrant to Amazon to turn over recordings and other information associated with the device owned by James Andrew Bates. Bates has been charged with the murder of a man found dead in his hot tub in November 2015.

Judge refuses to halt San Francisco PD's new use-of-force policy

A judge on Tuesday rejected the San Francisco police union's request to delay the rollout of a contested use-of-force policy recently updated by the city's Police Commission. In declining to grant a temporary restraining order halting the policy, San Francisco Superior Court Judge Richard Ulmer said the union had little chance of winning a lawsuit it filed against the city seeking more latitude for officers under the new guidelines.

New Houston police chief hopes to make changes to body-camera program

Houston's new Chief of Police Art Acevedo pledged to make some changes to the department's body-camera program after a KHOU investigation revealed it has fallen short of its promises. The chief said one of his top priorities is setting high expectations on recording video as department policy requires. "I want to make it very clear to our men and women that if they have a critical incident and they don't have that thing on, and without excuse or justification, they're going to have some significant consequences," Acevedo said. That warning comes after KHOU 11 Investigates discovered several problems in the early months of HPD's body-camera program. The Harris County District Attorney's office identified more than 700 cases with missing or unaccounted body-camera video. HPD also failed to audit videos as outlined in department policy.

Federal court rules police can shoot a dog if it moves or barks when officers enter a home

A police officer can shoot a dog if it barks or moves when the officer enters a home, under a new federal court ruling issued this month. The ruling comes after police in Battle Creek, Michigan, shot two pit bulls while searching a home for evidence of drugs in 2013.

Bourbon Street will be pedestrian-only for New Year's Eve, Sugar Bowl (New Orleans)

Additional safety measures will be put in place in the French Quarter during the New Year's Eve weekend - the first major event in New Orleans since a bystander was killed and nine others injured in a Bourbon Street shooting that marred Thanksgiving weekend -- Mayor Mitch Landrieu and law enforcement leaders announced Tuesday. Recent terrorist attacks that targeted busy tourist thoroughfares also prompted the heighten precautions, the mayor said.

Is America experiencing a murder outbreak? It depends on your block.

The spike in America's homicide rate after a sustained decline spurred alarming headlines and ominous campaign talking points this year after FBI data for 2015 released in September reported the greatest percentage increase in murder in 45 years. Official data for 2016 won't be available for months, but one analysis suggests that violent deaths continue to trend upward. But a growing number of scholars suggests that the conversation about national and metro crime rates ignores a crucial metric: the lived experience of urban violence. The risk of being shot is not equal in all parts of a city, but rather clusters most heavily in a handful of blocks.

Amazon refuses to let police access US murder suspect's Echo recordings

Amazon has refused to hand over recordings from an Echo smart speaker to US police investigating a murder in Arkansas, according to court records seen by tech industry news site The Information. Arkansas police issued a warrant to Amazon to turn over recordings and other information associated with the device owned by James Andrew Bates. Bates has been charged with the murder of a man found dead in his hot tub in November 2015.

Judge refuses to halt San Francisco PD's new use-of-force policy

A judge on Tuesday rejected the San Francisco police union's request to delay the rollout of a contested use-of-force policy recently updated by the city's Police Commission. In declining to grant a temporary restraining order halting the policy, San Francisco Superior Court Judge Richard Ulmer said the union had little chance of winning a lawsuit it filed against the city seeking more latitude for officers under the new guidelines.

New Houston police chief hopes to make changes to body-camera program

Houston's new Chief of Police Art Acevedo pledged to make some changes to the department's body-camera program after a KHOU investigation revealed it has fallen short of its promises. The chief said one of his top priorities is setting high expectations on recording video as department policy requires. "I want to make it very clear to our men and women that if they have a critical incident and they don't have that thing on, and without excuse or justification, they're going to have some significant consequences," Acevedo said. That warning comes after KHOU 11 Investigates discovered several problems in the early months of HPD's body-camera program. The Harris County District Attorney's office identified more than 700 cases with missing or unaccounted body-camera video. HPD also failed to audit videos as outlined in department policy.

Bourbon Street will be pedestrian-only for New Year's Eve, Sugar Bowl (New Orleans)

Additional safety measures will be put in place in the French Quarter during the New Year's Eve weekend - the first major event in New Orleans since a bystander was killed and nine others injured in a Bourbon Street shooting that marred Thanksgiving weekend -- Mayor Mitch Landrieu and law enforcement leaders announced Tuesday. Recent terrorist attacks that targeted busy tourist thoroughfares also prompted the heighten precautions, the mayor said.

Is America experiencing a murder outbreak? It depends on your block.

The spike in America's homicide rate after a sustained decline spurred alarming headlines and ominous campaign talking points this year after FBI data for 2015 released in September reported the greatest percentage increase in murder in 45 years. Official data for 2016 won't be available for months, but one analysis suggests that violent deaths continue to trend upward. But a growing number of scholars suggests that the conversation about national and metro crime rates ignores a crucial metric: the lived experience of urban violence. The risk of being shot is not equal in all parts of a city, but rather clusters most heavily in a handful of blocks.

Deputy Chief Cheetham-

Good afternoon, I hope all is well in Springfield today. I am sending out this information to you due to your interest earlier this year in our online training platform, PoliceOne Academy. We will be having an increase in pricing for 2017 and I wanted to be transparent with you about it. I may be able to extend it into January of 2017.

Should there still be interest in our online training, You would get the 2016 pricing and a waived set-up fee. Once signed, you all would start immediately and we would not invoice until your official start date of February 1st, 2016. I have attached the updated agreement and will also send it through EchoSign as an electronic signature option, which is easier for everyone. Either way is fine with me.

This is an great offer for the size of your agency. With this subscription every officer will have access to over 200 courses with 230 hours of training. I hope you are able to move forward and take advantage of it. Please let me know if you have any questions.

2016 Pricing= $18,354.00

2017 Pricing= $20,286.00

Stay Safe and have a great New Year's Eve tomorrow,

-Randall

EDITOR'S NOTE

Law enforcement agencies are increasingly being asked to do more with fewer resources, and all too often, training budgets are the first line item to take a hit. But failure to train can be a liability in the courts, so police leaders are looking for ways to increase the efficiency of training programs. One solution to which many are turning is online learning management systems, which can offer ways to ensure that quality training is conducted at a reduced cost.

However, as is the case when any new technology is introduced, there is a learning curve for those tasked with making the purchasing decision. In this special-edition eBook, we aim to arm police leaders with information that can help them make the best choice. To start, we suggest four questions police departments should be asking as they evaluate a potential LMS partner. We then examine five LMS implementation mistakes and offer suggestions on how to avoid them. Finally, we provide six tips to help the training department encourage personnel to make the most of the new online system.

4 QUESTIONS YOUR POTENTIAL ONLINE LEARNING PROVIDER MUST BE ABLE TO ANSWER

Police administrators are often unfamiliar with learning management systems, so there is a risk of partnering with an LMS vendor that is not suited to them, or is inferior to other options

By Doug Wyllie

When police agencies face a budget crunch, officer training is frequently the first line item to be adversely affected. Training not only has its own costs, it also has the opportunity cost of taking police officers off the street. However, failure to train becomes a liability issue, so police departments are looking for alternative avenues to get their officers trained, but at lower costs.

One of the options trainers and administrators are turning to is online learning management systems. But because they are unfamiliar with this emerging technology, there is a risk of partnering with a vendor that is not suited to their department's personnel and needs, or selecting a training system with an inferior set of features.

Here are four questions police departments should be asking as they evaluate a learning management system partner.

1 Do you have certificates of completion?

Just like in the offline world, individual officers and departments need to show proof that training has been completed. Many officers keep a binder of their training certificates, and many agencies have an administrator who maintains file cabinets full of such documents. In the online world, most providers have some option of certification — either an actual document in PDF form that can be printed out or an electronic record of course completion.

A top issue for your end users, police officers and administrators, is accessibility and availability of those training certificates. It must be easy to find and share proof that training has been completed with a host of possible stakeholders — everyone from the compliance manager at a risk pool to members of the court system.

Another issue with certificates of completion is portability of that documentation. Can an individual officer easily access their certificates and use those not only for their day job, but also to verify their training and credentials for any second job they may have that requires the same training?

3 Who are you working with in our state?

Just as you would seek to get the opinion of a neighboring agency when purchasing any other sort of equipment — everything from ECDs to squad cars to sidearms — administrators should ask for contacts at other departments who can testify about the learning management system solution. Here are some questions to ask those references:

- How easy was it to implement the system?
- What is the support like when you have a problem?
- What do you think of the training content?
- How easy is it to access your certification records?
- Were there any unseen or unplanned fees after initial setup?

Using these questions as a guide at the start of your planning will be key to the overall success of the program.

2 Is your training approved for state credit?

State-approved training can vary from state to state, as well as between public safety disciplines. Some learning management system providers do have content that has been reviewed by the state oversight authority and has been approved or accredited, but some do not.

In fact, in some cases, states have simply indicated that they do not approve training courses — online or offline. Instead the state sets criteria for training and empowers a department chief or medical director, in the case of EMS training, to approve training.

As a potential purchaser, the training officer should know what the requirements are for their state and their discipline, and that can help inform them on which learning management system is right for their department. Because many departments can approve their own internally developed and locally instructed training programs, it is critical to know if the training department can upload its own training records to the LMS.

4 What is the fee structure and are there any hidden charges after setup?

Pricing structures can vary for LMS solutions. Some vendors offer multiple options to choose from. There could be an offering that is a one-time flat fee for an unlimited number of users or there could be a per-user/per-year subscription option. Some offerings have a tiered pricing structure for different levels of support after purchase (silver, gold, platinum, for example) which impact the total cost.

The key is to ensure that the vendor is completely transparent about the absolute total cost. No chief wants to get approval from the city council for the purchase of a solution, only to have to go back to those same council members in six months to say, “Well, it turns out I need some more money for the training system.”

Ultimately, the learning management system your police department selects will need the features and functionality you deem the most important. But using these questions as a guide at the start of your planning will be key to the overall success of the program.

5 BIGGEST LMS IMPLEMENTATION 'FAILS' (AND HOW TO AVOID THEM)

Make sure your learning management system rollout is successful by avoiding these mistakes

By Doug Wyllie

The last thing any police department trainer wants to do is to advocate for a new way of doing something, implement the change and then have the whole project blow up in their face. This is a very real possibility for training managers and department administrators who deploy the wrong learning management system for their training department.

Further, even if the perfect solution is chosen and adopted, there are numerous ways in which an LMS program can crash and burn, leaving the agency with a budgetary line item that gets insufficient results.

Here are five LMS implementation mistakes and some suggestions on how to avoid them.

Mistake #1

Build an in-house, proprietary solution

Many agencies have that "one officer" who is tech savvy and has the ability to figure out just about any issue related to information technology. Envision this all-too-common scenario in which the tech savvy officer hears that the department is considering various LMS vendors for an online learning solution, and that person responds that they could easily build an in-house platform using a variety of open source technology. "I can save us a ton of money that way," the well-meaning officer says.

Sure enough, this brilliant individual sets up a proprietary LMS on the department's own servers. It's up and running and whenever there is a question or a need for tech support, our eager in-house tech expert is there to help.

Then he gets promoted. Or she laterals to another department. Or he retires.

Now the agency is left holding a system nobody else knows how to run. The department is in a real bind. New users can't be added. Training records are only accessible by a super administrator. Courses that need to be updated are stuck as they were originally created.

Don't let this be your police department. Don't succumb to the temptation to choose the do-it-yourself, in-house solution. Instead select a learning management system with a proven track record, support documentation and customer service to train multiple people at your agency to use and the capability to scale as your department's training needs grow.

Mistake #2

Using multiple applications for training records and storage

Every agency already has a method to track training certificates to ensure their personnel are up to date on state- or department-required courses. This tracking system may be file cabinets in the HR department filled with paper certificates, or it could be some form of proprietary computer spreadsheet maintained by someone in HR.

Administrators implementing a learning management system should recognize that an LMS solution is also a training records management system. Every single training record — from defensive tactics to emergency driving and everything else in between — should be entered into the LMS, making it the agency's centralized hub of training records.

For example, if a department requires that the SWAT team and patrol division complete a 10-hour active shooter response training involving a combination of force-on-force training and a live-fire qualification on the square range, it is essential that the records of completion be maintained in the online LMS platform, despite the fact that no element of the training took place in that environment.

If the LMS vendor does not offer the ability to enter certificates from attendance at conferences or training courses conducted in the real world, the department should move along in the search. Not having the ability to enter offline training records forces the department to maintain two records management systems — a sure path to failure.

Mistake #3

Make online training an optional way to earn continuing education

Having a hands-off attitude about the content in the LMS will doom the program to failure. If the department leaders really want people to use the LMS, the training managers need to assign courses and use due dates. Course completion cannot be voluntary or self-directed.

If a training manager introduces the LMS with the message, "Here's an online training program — do with it whatever you want" they will likely find that for most personnel, "whatever you want" is doing nothing.

The person leading the program should work with the vendor to identify the very best, most compelling courses, and make those the first assignments. This allows users to immediately see the value of an online component to their training, rather than accidentally bumping into a particularly dry or tedious course which could turn them off of the concept.

Another way to assure use of the LMS is to align online training assignments with the training calendar your department has set for the month, quarter or year. Ask the LMS vendor how courses can be assigned at the start of the year for the year ahead.

Mistake #4

Letting users figure it out on their own

There needs to be multiple champions for using an LMS. In addition to the member of the command staff leading the purchasing process, there needs to be other champions. In fact, it may prove best if those champions are line-level officers who have the respect of their peers. Don't expect your personnel to simply adopt and figure out the online training system without encouragement or peer support.

Get the champions involved in the selection process if possible, so they can attest to the fact that the department chose the solution best suited to their needs. Ensure that they are very well trained on the system and are then made available to others who may have questions about how to navigate the online interface.

It's a fail if the department waits until the end of the first year to see how the program is progressing.

Mistake #5

Ignoring the reporting and records management capabilities

It's a fail if the department waits until the end of the first year to see how the program is progressing. Set up weekly — or at the very least, monthly — reports to see who has completed courses and who is falling behind. Intervene when there are stragglers, perhaps tasking the champions to engage individuals who are not embracing the new learning tools.

By regularly checking in on the reports on the end user's participation in the system, the training manager can help to ensure the success of the program.

Implementing a change, whether it's a policy or a technology system, can be challenging. By avoiding these pitfalls, your police department can ensure a successful learning management system implementation and realize the expected benefits that led you to purchase the platform.

6 KEYS TO GETTING PERSONNEL TO USE AN ONLINE LEARNING SOLUTION

Now that your department has an online learning solution, here's how to make sure it gets used

By Doug Wyllie

Every first responder knows that not all training is dynamic, hands-on work. Before (and often, after) engaging in reality-based scenario training, driver training, defensive tactics and other topics, there is a considerable amount of time spent in a classroom, watching an instructor read a PowerPoint presentation.

The fact is, most of these learning sessions can easily be taken from a classroom lecture and conducted online in a robust learning management system. This can save a police department time and money and improve the quality of the learner's experience. Because of these savings, many departments are moving toward adoption of an online learning management system.

However, some end users resist the change. How does a training manager for a police department influence personnel to engage in the online system? Here are six proven suggestions.

1 Identify a superuser who can influence stragglers

Select an evangelist for online learning. Ideally, this is a line-level police officer who has the respect of his or her peers and has received robust training in how the system works. An evangelist believes in the value of the LMS the department has selected to implement and the benefits to individual learners. This superuser can help other individuals who have questions about everything, from navigating the user interface to accessing the most compelling content in a proactive and self-guided manner.

2 Assign courses and hold personnel accountable

Pre-determine specific assignments for the quarter or year and use automated reminders that prompt end users about deadlines and training requirements. If users are allowed to simply log on to an LMS when they have time, there is a high probability they will be scrolling a social media site instead, and their training will go unfinished. When officers are required to complete a task, they do it, even begrudgingly.

Start by assigning courses that are most likely to engage users with the training system. A recently created course on officer-down response, mass gathering safety or active-shooter tactics is more likely to make a positive first impression. Save the annual mandatory courses like bloodborne pathogens or slip and fall prevention for when personnel are more familiar with the training system and better understand its purpose.

3 Make LMS content part of the daily “routine”

Create an “every day is a training day” culture in your police department by assigning a short video each day for review during briefing. Five-minute videos can consist of a subject matter expert speaking direct to camera about a specific incident or a general concept. Videos can be scenario-based training or even real-world footage of a recent event.

Another way to create this everyday training mindset is to use the LMS to distribute memos from command staff — important documents like policies, SOPs, general order updates, incident debriefs and AG directives which are required to be read by all personnel across all public safety disciplines — in the online learning platform. Replace the old-school and ineffective practice of posting paper memos to a bulletin board or handing out at briefing by allowing personnel to read documents online. This also allows the agency to track that the messages and documents have been read. The receipt and reading of the document is recorded in an individual’s training files. This can help agencies to prove compliance on high-liability training which is required to be documented in a centralized environment.

4 Have trainers create their own custom content

Get the training cadre to add their own custom-made and blended learning curricula into the LMS platform. Remember that the LMS can also be used to track offline or classroom training records.

Off-the-shelf courses certainly have tremendous value, but public safety personnel tend to respond even better to training content that is unique to their jurisdiction or agency. Trainers who are able to design curricula with video of scenarios captured at recognizable places in town will have a more realistic training experience.

For example, if an agency is going to present training on how to self-apply a tourniquet with the officer’s non-dominant hand, the trainer could require that a video he or she had recorded on the topic be viewed online before the hands-on practice and competency assessment session. Record the video at a location in the jurisdiction that is well-known to the officers, increasing the value of the segment.

When the officers arrive at training, that portion of the instruction has already been completed, and the learners can immediately get to work practicing that skill. In addition to saving time in the matroom or training room, this practice encourages use of the LMS platform, and makes the end user’s experience better.

5 Train the training cadre on how to use templates for easy upload of their course assets

Don't forget your training cadre. It is vital that the trainers be given specialized and detailed training in how to utilize the system. The better the training staff is at getting custom content into the system, the more content they will produce, thus increasing the value of the platform for the end user.

An online learning management system can help make any police department's training program more effective and efficient.

6 Encourage the training staff to have patience with the process

Just like any other change in policies and procedures, there will be individuals who enthusiastically embrace the new way of doing things. However, at least at first, there will be people who resist change and refuse — to the extent possible — to use the system. There may be a small percentage of people who complain about the new system all the way to retirement.

Training staff must not get disheartened and discontinue their work in assigning existing courses as well as creating new training content. In time, the stragglers will come around.

Recognize also that there will also be large group of personnel who are willing to use the system, but just need some direction in to get started. Don't lose focus on the primary goal — more and better training — because of a small percentage of grumblers and foot-draggers. Focus on the majority of personnel who are willing to make the change with leadership and encouragement from the training cadre.

An online learning management system can help make any police department's training program more effective and efficient. Remember, bring in a superuser early to gain support and maximize the use of the available feature functionality, like building your own courses. These things, along with creating that "every day is a training day" mentality, can ensure your agency sees strong utilization.

Implementing a Body-Worn Camera Program

2 HOURS

A police department that deploys body-worn cameras is making a statement that it believes the actions of its officers are a matter of public record. By facing the challenges and expense of purchasing and implementing a body-worn camera system — and developing policies and training its officers in how to use the cameras — a department creates a reasonable expectation that members of the public and the news media will want to review the actions of officers. And with certain limited exceptions that this course will discuss, body-worn camera video footage should be made available to the public upon request — not only because the videos are public records but also because doing so enables police departments to demonstrate transparency and openness in their interactions with members of the community. This two hour course is intended to serve as a guide to the thoughtful, careful considerations that police departments should undertake if they wish to adopt body-worn cameras.

Videos in this course include:

- Segment one -Overview of FWPD
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Two - Deciding Factors
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Four - Storage
- Body Worn Cameras
- Segment Three - The Benefits
- Segment Five - Policy and Development
- Segment Six - Some Insights on BWC

Social Media and Law Enforcement

1 HOUR

A robust and comprehensive policy is not in place to extensively cover social media usage for police departments. Some issues departments face regarding social media are legal rights, civil rights, and privacy rights. These issues are still being discussed in the courts. It is beneficial for police officers to successfully monitor social media in order to gain information about threats of criminal activity. This one-hour course will look over the ways social media can be used in law enforcement.

SOCIAL MEDIA AND LAW ENFORCEMENT (CONT.)

Identity Theft Crimes

3 HOURS

The law identifies offenders as anyone who knowingly transfers or uses, without lawful authority, any name or number that may be used, alone or in conjunction with any other information, to identify a specific individual with the intent to commit, or to aid or abet, any unlawful activity that constitutes a violation of Federal law, or that constitutes a felony under any applicable State or local law. A major feature of identity theft is the offender's repeated victimization of a single person. This can include repeatedly using a stolen credit card, taking over a card account, or using stolen personal information to open new accounts. In this three-hour course, we will discuss identity theft and factors that increase the risk of identity theft.

What Is Domestic Violence? Defining Domestic Violence

2 HOURS

Domestic disputes are some of the most common calls for police officers. Many domestic disputes do not involve violence; this course discusses those that do, as well as the measures that can be used to reduce them. Domestic violence calls can be challenging for police as they are likely to observe repetitive abuse against the same victims, who may not want to or be able to part from their abusers. These calls are treated as dangerous, partly because old research exaggerated risks to police. This two-hour course begins by describing the problem of domestic violence and reviewing factors that increase its risks. It then identifies a series of questions to help you analyze your local domestic violence problem. Finally, it reviews responses to the problem and what is known about these from evaluative research and police practice.

Videos in this course include:

- What would you do - Domestic Violence - Boyfriend Abusing His Girlfriend In Public
- Did You Know? Domestic Violence
- Police Officer Body Cameras record domestic violence response calls
- Domestic violence calls prove dangerous for cops
